Ra Beautiful But . . . Is It Seaworthy?

Sometime between the hours of 3 and 6 early Friday seven men and a monkey will step into a reed craft and set sail for the Americas.

The voyage of Ra will have begun.

Thor Hyerdahl and his crew will raise the UN flag over the raft and, after three to five months, hope to complete the 4,000 miles voyage from Africa to the New World.

Today the Times is carrying a special news story on the voyage by the London Observer.

Friday Heyerdahl resumes his first-person story on the epic trip.

By MICHAEL DAVIE
The London Observer

SAFI, Morocco — There has been nothing like it hereabouts since the Marx brothers spent a night at Casablanca. Here in Safi, a small port some 200 miles southwest of Gibraltar, they have launched Thor Hyerdahl's new boat, which looks even more dangerous than his last one, Kon-Tiki.

Swarms of journalists, mainly from Scandinavia, are pouring in, cursing the iron Moroccan bus seats and erratic communications, and interviewing Yvonne Heyerdahl, an indomitable blonde, about her feelings at seeing her famous husband off on what could be, as many think, his last voyage.

The new boat, Ra, which may well become as celebrated as Kon-tiki, is intended to carry Heyerdahl and six companions from Safi across the Atlantic. It is made of papyrus, or reeds, and looks beautiful, like a pale honey-colored Viking ship of straw, with a cabin aft and a high prow and stern, but it also looks desperately unseaworthy.

It is carefully designed after the style of boat used by the ancient Egyptians: The object of Heyerdahl's trip is to find out whether it would have been possible for the Egyptians to have sailed to the Americas.

Long, Narrow Wickerwork Basket

To go in it is like stepping into a long and narrow wickerwork basket. Before last weekend, it had never been in the sea, yet Heyerdahl is determined to sail it to Central America, a voyage that may take from less than three to more than four months.

It seems doubtful whether the enterprise would have got this far but for Heyerdahl's character and record. It is now more than 20 years since he made his voyage, with six companions, across the Pacific on the balsa-wood raft to show that Polynesia could have been populated from South America. The book he subsequently wrote, "The Kon-tiki Expedition," sold so many copies that, according to a Norwegian journalist here, they would, if stacked, reach twice the height of Mount Everest.

There was something about that trip, with the raft battering across to Polynesia and the god Kon-Tiki in red on the sail, after everyone had assured Heyerdahl that he would drown, which made it the most romantic sea voyage of the century and put Heyerdahl, for many people, in the same category as Lindbergh.

He is now 54 and a grandfather, tall, with blue eyes set very close together, a rather prim mouth, and grey hair brushed flat towards a bald patch at the back. He often wears spectacles.

He strides about Safi in blue open-neck shirt and trousers, taking a coil of hemp to the boatyard, giving interviews in three languages, worrying about the arrival of equipment, plunging into his ideas about the parallels between ancient Egyptian and ancient Mexican civilizations, slightly tense, as if he had very little time to spare.

Not a Chance in a Hurricane

Heyerdahl had wanted to sail by last Thursday, to avoid the Caribbean hurricane season (not that the hurrican season keeps regular hours), and he now is pressing to get away as soon as possible. Whatever else his papyrus boat may be able to stand, no one gives it much chance in a hurricane.

After Kon-Tiki, Heyerdahl became famous. He was invited to the White House and Buckingham Palace. Khrushchev visited the Kon-Tiki museum in Oslo and asked if he could accompany Heyerdahl on his next expedition, as a cook. A Russian wine was named after Kon-Tiki, and another after Heyerdahl himself.

It is hard to say what drives Thor Heyerdahl. He is not interested in money, and is bad at dealing with the financial problems of a voyage like this. Probably, the cost of this trip will run into six figures: His own travel and researches during the past two years, the cost of getting the boat built in Egypt, transport of the boat to Morocco, the fares and wages of the crew. He hopes to get most of this back, at least, from book and film rights. He is plainly not interested in being a known figure; he shows no trace of vanity.

Heyerdahl insists that he is not trying to prove anything on this voyage, but the voyage has a very precise idea behind it, nevertheless. It might be described as part one of the investigation of which the Kon-Tiki expedition was part two.

How Did They Get to Americas?

With Kon-Tiki, Heyerdahl proved that Polynesia could have been populated from Peru 1,500 years ago. Since then, this notion — which previously had been regarded as out of the question (since no one could see how men from Peru could have crossed 4,500 miles of ocean) — has become generally accepted. But even while he was floating across the Pacific in Kon-Tiki, to show how men from the Americas could have got to Polynesia, he was wondering how they got to the Americas.

The problem is this: some 3,000 years ago, advanced and comparable civilizations flourished more or less simultaneously both in the eastern Mediterranean, in Egypt, and in Mexico. Both built the same kind of stepped pyramid. Both buried their royal familes in the pyramids. Both defied their royal familes after death. Both worshipped the sun. Both allowed royal brothers and sister to marry. Both had hieroglyphic writings. Both had sophisticated calendars. Both could carry out operations on the brain.

Conincidence, or not? One school of thought, the isolationists, argue that the mind of man was common to both places, which they say is sufficient explanation. Another school, the diffusionists, believe that there must have been a link.

But how could there have been a link? How could the Egyptians have crossed the Atlantic? Heyerdahl has spent a lot of time and energy researching this question.

Raft Wasn't Easy to Reproduce

The ancient Egyptian boats — made from Papyrus, or reeds — are easy enough to find out about from paintings in tombs, but not so easy to reproduce. Heyerdahl is inclined to think that in countries where reeds crew, they were used to make all the earliest boats, and he has found this type of boat all over the world, from Ethiopia to South America and Mexico He has sailed in these boats with local people, and is convinced of their quality. But they are smaller than the one he has built, and none of them has been on the open sea.

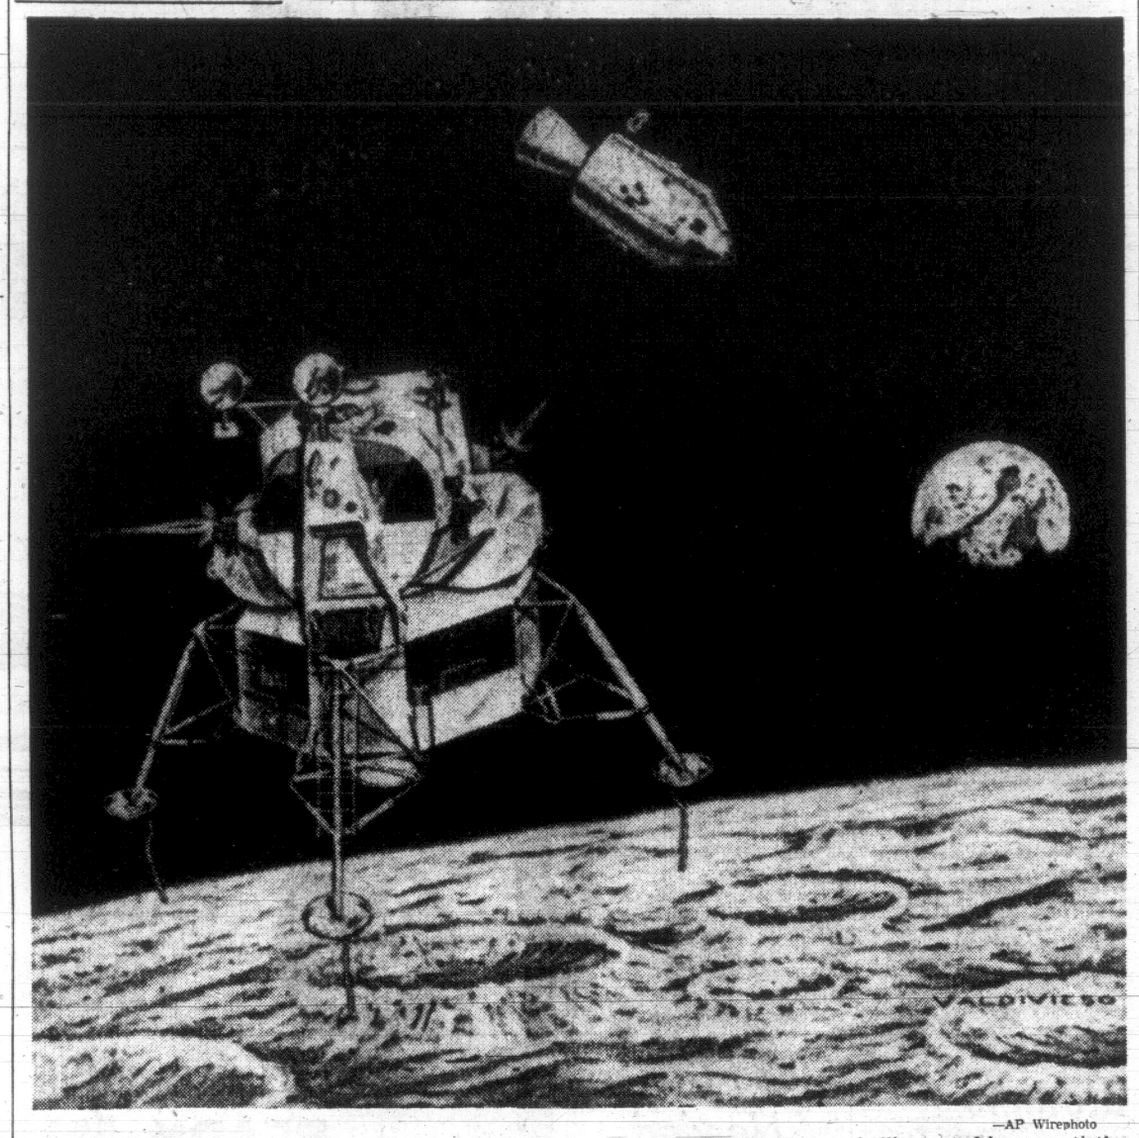

Papyrus is somewhat like a bamboo, but instead of being

Bill to Force Firms To Disclose Finances

Big Companies Ottawa Target

OTTAWA (CP)—Extensive amendments to the Canada Corporations Act were introduced in the Commons today requiring companies to disclose their financial affairs publicly for the first time.

The companies affected are privately - owned corporations and foreign-controlled subsidiaries incorporated under federal law, including such big names as General Foods, Procter and Gamble, General Motors and Chrysler.

Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford, introducing the amendments for first reading, drew heavily on the new Ontario Corporations Act and recent British legislation in his 81-page, 22,000 word bill.

Its chief provisions demand:

—Public financial statements annually from all Canadian or foreign-owned firms with assets or gross revenues greater than $3,000,000;

—Separate financial reports eventually on the volume of business and profits of the major parts of big conglomerate firms;

—Adherence to strict rules protecting shareholders' interests in takeover, proxy solicitation, insider-trading by company executives, and the like;

—Admission of federal inspectors and investigators in cases suspected to involve fraud, mismanagement, or failure to make required reports.

MORE REVISIONS COMING

The bill will be followed by a more general revision of the corporations act, possibly next year. The government hopes, however, that the terms of the amended act now will become a pattern for parallel provincial legislation.

The federal bill affects only federally-incorporated firms, some 17,500. Informants said one of the country's biggest retailers—the T. Eaton Co. of Toronto—is not covered because it is provincially-incorporated.

Officials said the government does not intend to pry into the private affairs of small, family-owned firms. Its target is the big, privately-owned firms whose operations have economic significance in the country.

The government hopes to have the bill studied by a Commons committee and passed this spring, but the parliamentary work-load may force its postponement to the fall.

Pickets Halt Buses

Mainland-Island Service Suspended

A picket line went up in downtown Vancouver at 5:30 a.m. today and brought the staggering mainland-Island bus service to a standstill.

Half service had been maintained by Pacific Stage Lines, which shares the bus-ferry routes with Vancouver Island Coach Lines, since VICL drivers went on strike May 8.

The VICL drivers, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, threatened last week to extend their strike to stop the PSL drivers, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union.

The picket line around the Larwill Depot, Vancouver's central bus terminal, is being honored by all drivers and mechanics involved in Island service.

ONLY ISLAND RUNS

John Harlow, speaking for the PSL drivers, said the only routes concerned are between Vancouver-Victoria, Vancouver-Nanaimo and Victoria-Nanaimo. Mainland service is being maintained

Harlow, president of the Amalgamated Transit local in Vancouver, said some 150 PSL drivers are affected.

"We recognize a legal picket line and there is no conflict," he said. "It is simply a matter of trade union principle."

The 100 striking VICL employees are seeking a 52-cent hourly increase in a one-year contract. The bus line has offered a two-year agreement giving the drievrs 38 cents more an hour the first year and an additional 10 cents the following year.

'QUITE SUCCESSFUL'

Dick Henham, regional CBRT vice-president, today described the Vancouver picket line as "quite successful"

There have been no developments in negotiations with the bus line since talks broke off before May 8, he said. An attempt by a provincial mediator to bring the parties to an agreement failed.

Henham said the union "certainly hopes" the picket line will put more pressure on the company to re-open discussions, but there has been no word from VICL yet.

NEWS BRIEFS

Trail Damage Set

TRAIL (CP)—Mayor F. E. De Vito said Wednesday the total assessed damage by the flood here April 22 is about $2,000,000. De Vito said he gave this total to L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, who inquired on behalf of the federal government.

UAW Joins Pickets

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A group of more than 50 Canadians led by Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, will join picket lines in Delano, Calif., June 4 to 8 in support of the California grape boycott, the UAW announced today.

Admirals Critical

HALIFAX (CP) — Two retired Canadian admirals, Jeffrey Block and Hugh F. Pullen, have criticized Defence Minister Leo Cadieux's admission that the aircraft carrier Bonaventure may be decommissioned as part of the reduction in Canada's NATO forces.

Astronauts Undock For Hazardous Trip

HOUSTON (AP) — After keeping the world in suspense 40 minutes, two moon-orbiting Apollo 10 astronauts successfully undocked a fragile lunar landing machine from their command ship today and prepared to fly it on a daring descent to within 50,000 feet of the surface.

The first word on the successful separation came from Eugene Cernan in the lunar module, or LEM, with Thomas P Stafford.

"We read you loud and clear," Cernan radioed to the ground.

"We're about 30 to 40 feet away from Charlie Brown and station keeping."

"Very good, Snoopy," a relieved mission control commentator replied

Charlie Brown and Snoopy are the radio call names for the two craft during the eight-hour separation in which Stafford and Cernan were to swoop twice to within 9.3 miles of the Sea of Tranquillity to scout a landing site where two Americans hope to land in two months.

SEEN ON TV

Clear evidence of the undocking came just seconds later when a live color television picture of the spidery LEM was flashed more than 250,000 miles to earth.

The camera was pointed out the window of the command ship, manned alone by John W. Young.

The odd-looking, fragile landing craft rotated slowly with sunlight reflecting off its aluminum-coated sides.

The two ships flew close formation several minutes while Stafford and Cernan checked all systems. They flew circles in a sort of stately orbital ballet.

The astronauts did not want to commit themselves to make the hazardous close-approach to the surface until they were certain everything was working.

The LEM was built only to operate in airless space and on the moon and could not get the two pilots back to earth.

The separation of the two space vehicles, 69 miles above the moon, occurred at 3:11 p.m EDT as the three Apollo 10 astronauts orbited behind the lunar backside, out of radio contact with the ground.

Before the combined vehicles zipped out of radio range 40 minutes earlier, mission control noted the docking collar interface between the command and lunar modules had slipped 3½ degrees. It advised the astronauts not to undock if the slippage increased to six degrees.

Mission control officials held their breath until the two vehicles reappeared from behind the moon as two separate entities on tracking charts.

The trouble apparently lay with a docking ring on the command ship which has latches to grip a similar mechanism on the LEM. If the two rings are misaligned by more than six degrees, there is a possibility the latches would be damaged during separation, preventing re-docking.

An official of North American Rockwell, builder of the command ship, said the trouble could be connected with a situation earlier today when Stafford and Cernan had difficulty venting oxygen pressure from the connecting tunnel

He said the corrective procedure, involving lowering the pressure in the LEM cabin, might have caused the misalignment.

Jordan Hits Israeli Posts

AMMAN (Reuters) — Jordanian troops destroyed two Israeli observation posts and inflicted several casualties on Israeli forces in a 45-minute exchange in the Jordan Valley today, a Jordanian military spokesman said.

There were no casualties among Jordanian troops, he said.

In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said an Israeli Mirage fighter was shot down today in a dogfight with Egyptian fighters over the Red Sea port of Hurgada.

Tougher Air Pollution Control Urged by McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Liberal Leader Pat McGeer Wednesday called for creation of a British Columbia Pollution Control Commission to enforce stiffened air pollution control standards.

In a speech to the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, at the University of B.C., Dr. McGeer complimented the provincial health branch and the city of Vancouver for bringing in some air pollution standards, but the Liberal leader suggested fines for offenders should be $25,000 plus $10,000 a day for continuing offences.

"I think we have to recognize that it will cost all of us something in money and convenience to clean our atmosphere up," he said.

"We will have to give up refuse burning and soon we will have to pay for exhaust control devices."

Dr. McGeer lashed out at industry, the general public, and government for contributing to air pollution.

"Even the parks and recreation people are guilty," he said, citing log burning on Vancouver beaches.

"The major polluters are a small minority in B.C., but they nevertheless constitute the most powerful forces in our province.

"The biggest corporation in our province, MacMillan Bloedel is a major offender."

Dr. McGeer said the forest giant had not responded to requests to stop pollution in south Vancouver, and its record in the Alberni Valley was "unacceptable."

"The Alberta Wheat pool near the Second Narrows bridge spews grain dust over parts of East Vancouver. This operation is under the jurisdiction of the National Harbors Board, an arm of the federal government."

A proposed bulk coal loading facility could open the way "for coal dust contamination of that whole North Shore area."

"I believe there should be a pollution control commission operating in an independent way from government, charged with the responsibility of enforcing (stiffened) pollution laws."

Nothin' like changin' modules in mid-space.

Oil Sides Wary: Strike Risks Grow

The impending strike against the province's major petroleum refining and distributing companies is being delicately handled by both sides, aware that carelessness could send the whole thing up in flames.

Neither company spokesmen nor representatives of striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers were able to indicate today what the implications of an industry-wide strike would be on Victoria.

One Shell refinery in Burnaby now is being picketed. The general strike by local 9601 is scheduled to begin Friday afternoon.

PLAYING BY EAR

Both parties say they cannot tell what the immediate effects of the strike will be. They will be playing by ear.

The general strike is against Shell, Imperial, Gulf and Standard oil companies, the only four producing their own products in B.C. Home, Texaco and other companies purchase oil and gasoline from other refineries.

Shell began operating its refinery in Burnaby with only professional and supervisory personnel after a picket line was set up by the union Wednesday morning. A company spokesman said there is no reason the company should not maintain full production.

Imperial will follow suit and was making plans today for an orderly takeover by supervisory and professional staff. It is believed Standard will do the same, while Gulf has announced it will shut down and bring oil and gasoline in by tankers from an undisclosed source, probably Venezuela.

But the hitch, so far as the

Consult U.S. On ABM Sites Expert Says

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. G. R. Lindsey, chief of the defence research analysis establishment, said today that if Canada wants protection from the American ABM system, it should consult the U.S. before final decisions are made on base sites.

"... It's their system and we're not being very co-operative about it at the moment," he told the Commons defence committee.

Dr. Lindsey was replying to Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) who suggested the Canadian population along the U.S. border would be left in an "extremely disadvantageous position" by the location of the anti-ballistic missiles of the proposed U.S. Safeguard system.

Earlier in the session Carl Legault (L—Nipissing) asked whether Dr. Lindsey, in his testimony and in a paper presented to the committee Wednesday, was trying to "sell" the idea that the sites should be farther north to prevent interceptions over populated areas of Canada.

MIGHT BE BETTER

Dr. Lindsey said he wasn't trying to sell anything. He was only trying to explain that analysis by his branch showed the sites might provide better protection farther north.

The question of the value of moving the sites farther north has never been investigated, he said. He supposed the Americans had not asked Canada's opinion and Canada had not offered it.

For phase 1 of the Safeguard system, involving two bases to protect Minutemen missiles on the U.S. Prairies, it might be difficult to change.

But he did not think it was too late to change sites for the remaining 10 sites of the system.

Gerald Laniel (L—Beauharnois) suggested Canadians were dreaming if they thought the Safeguard system might be aimed to protect Canadian cities.

Dr. Lindsey said he believes the American plan for final deployment of the system was intended to protect American cities. Canada had not asked whether the system would cover Canadian cities, but it probably would be physically possible if the sites were adjusted.

OUTLINES OBJECTIONS

In his appearance before the committee Wednesday, Dr. Lindsey was accused by David Lewis, NDP deputy leader, of trying to make a case for the ABM system.

Today, in response to a question from Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) he outlined principal objections that have been made to it.

The first was that the system is not necessary; that U.S. deterrent strength already is sufficient to ensure a reply to any Soviet attack.

This argument certainly is true today, he said, although it might not be the case in 1974-75 when Safeguard would be in operation.

Another argument was that the system would not work because it could never be tested.

There had been American tests in the Pacific in which he believed 11 of 14 ABMs had come close enough to ICBMs to destroy them, he said.

But warheads had not been used and this did not prove the ICBMs would have been destroyed. The defenders in this case also were expecting the attack and there were no decoys.

average used of petroleum products is concerned, is not with the refinery strike, but with the strike by OCAW against oil company marketing operations.

Tom Phillips, president of the local which is also certified on Vancouver Island, said in an interview today that OCAW picket lines could be set up to prevent distribution to industiral clients in Vicotia, or some individual gas statsions could be picketed.

He said the union was meeting with the B.C. Federation of Labor to determine whether an over-all declaration that petroleum products are "hot" will be made.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES ENDANGERED

Phillips explained that this could hamstring essential municipal services such as fire, police, hospitals and public works.

He said the union is making an offer to the companies to permit trucks to supply these particular users and is even willing to supply drivers

Should the union decide to leave gas stations alone, feeling that pressure on the companies by stopping industrial deliveries is sufficient, it is expected there will be enough gasoline and home oil supplies throughout the province to keep wheels rolling and home fires burning.

The union turned down a pay boost offer by Gulf of between 51 and 53 cents an hour over two years on rates ranging from $2.95 to $4.07 an hour.

The union has been seeking a $1 hourly pay raise over the same period and members voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action to back their demands.

'Forces To Be Cut By 10,000'

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says Canada's 98,000-man defence forces will be reduced by more than 10,000 and the nuclear-armed air division will be withdrawn from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Europe.

The newspaper says Defence Minister Leo Cadieux will propose withdrawal of the 3,800-man division by the end of 1970 at next week's NATO ministerial conference in Brussels, followed by replacement of the 6,200-man mechanized brigade in Germany by a mixed air and ground force of approximately 4,000 without nuclear weapons.

The newspaper says the overall reduction in the armed forces will be taken care of by normal retirements.

. . . RA

hollow it has a tough, spongy interior. Heyerdahl's boat is built, basically, of bundles of papyrus reeds bound into logs, which are then themselves bound together and shaped to produce a vessel with a curved hull.

He was called his boat RA, because RA is the name of the Egyptian sun god, and it is also the name used for the sun in all the Polynesian Islands. (Heyerdahl is too strict with himself to allow that that might prove anything, but it might suggest something.) The boat will have a sail, and on it will be painted a sun—as his raft had the face of Kon-tiki.

There are a lot of people here who regard RA with the greatest suspicion. It leaks. The papyrus will get soggy and sink. The water will get into the bottom of the boat, and prevent steerage, so that the vessel will broach to in a storm instead of keeping her bows to wind and sea and get smashed. RA certainly looks very small and frail: Only 16 yards long and only 16 feet wide at the widest point.

Same Doubts Expressed on Kon-Tiki

Heyerdahl pays little attention to these doubts. He remembers that at exactly the same stage of the Kon-tiki voyage experienced mariners were saying the same sort of thing. Kon-tiki, he says, taught him to have confidence in the worst boats. "The safety of ancient vessels lies in precisely the characteristic that modern man thinks is most dangerous: That it leaks. I have no faith in a hull that sinks as soon as it leaks."

His own voyage, Heyerdahl surmises, will take between three and five months, according to how much water the boat absorbs. If it floats high, then it can make full use of the trade winds, and will get there in less than three months. If it settles deeply, then the trade winds will give very little help, and they will be relying mainly on the current, which may need four months or more. He does not mind where he ends up.

There is a further imponderable: The steering mechanism, two oars parallel, is copied, according to Heyerdahl, with great precision from Egyptian models, but no one alive has ever actually tried to work anything of the kind.

And Heyerdahl isn't having a trial run: "The trip itself is the trial," he says.

'Productive' Talks Forecast in Paris

PARIS (AP) — The United States said today a basis now exists "for productive discussions of the key issues" at the Vietnam peace talks. But North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front renewed their attack on parts of President Nixon's eight-point plan.

The 18th full-scale session of the talks produced no movement on the controversial issues of troop withdrawals and a political settlement—the questions that have overshadowed the discussions from the beginning.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge acknowledged that these were areas of disagreement along with international supervision of troop withdrawals. He urged that efforts must be begun at once to find a solution to these problems while detailed discussions proceed on other questions.

Noting the Viet Cong's 10-point peace plan, Lodge said both sides "seem to be taking a common approach" on the reunification of Vietnam, restoration of the demilitarized zone and respect for that provisional military demarcation line and prisoners-of-war.

Lodge referred to the fact that the Viet Cong's plan calls for discussion of the prisoner-of-war issue. But he denounced North Vietnam at today's session for refusing to disclose the list of U.S. prisoners it holds.

Brothers Wants Talks For Teachers

Education Minister Donald Brothers today said he will try to arrange a meeting with Powell River teachers before they carry out their one-day strike threat next week.

"They're an autonomous group and they can do as they wish," Brothers told reporters here.

"But I'm going to attempt to arrange a meeting with their executive because I want to hear what they have to say."

All of Powell River's 220 teachers have decided to stay off work May 29 in order to make a mass canvass of householders to explain how the provincial government's education financing formula had hurt operation of local schools by forcing operating budget cuts this year.

Blood Donors Needed For Clinic

Canadian Red Cross Society officials report that 550 donors of blood are needed immediately to meet current needs.

Servicemen will have a chance to help solve the emergency situation when a blood donor clinic is held Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the old gymnasium at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

Monday and Tuesday will see clinics being run at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort St., from 6:30 to 9 p.m. each evening. Monday a clinic will also be held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, an afternoon clinic will be held 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

A special clinic has also been held in Vancouver to help meet the emergency.

UBC Enrolment Curb Proposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Levelling-off the University of British Columbia's enrolment at 27,500 and tougher entrance requirements were recommended Wednesday night to UBC's senate in the first draft of a report on long-range objectives of the university.

The report, by a committee headed by anthropology professor Dr. Cyril Belshaw, suggested undergraduate enrolment, now 16,500, be curtailed at 22,000 and the number of graduates be allowed to double to 5,000.

It also endorsed an earlier senate committee suggestion that first-year entrance standards be raised to 65 per cent on high school exams from the current 60 per cent.

Previous reports by university groups have said UBC's student population, if it increased unchecked at previous rates, would hit 34,000 by 1975.

Dr. Belshaw said the report deals only with the more urgent matters facing the university and gives the senate a chance to reach some decisions by fall.

PNE Walkout Closes Playland

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 90 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees went on strike early today against the Pacific National Exhibition.

The strike by PNE ouside workers was not expected to affect the inter-high school track meet at Empire Stadium today but will shut down the playland area and halt preparations for the 1969 Exhibition.

Dave Werlin, president of the 1,100-member Vancouver local of the union, said Wednesday night the PNE had refused to re-open contract negotiations.

Racing will continue as usual at Exhibition Park regardless of the current Pacific National Exhibition strike, Harry Filion, publicity director of the B.C. Jockey Club, told the Times in an official statement today.

"The Jockey Club is entirely independent of the Pacific National Exhibition and therefore is not involved in the PNE employees wage dispute," Filion said.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Warm, sunny weather is forecast to continue in nearly all sections of the province today and Friday. However, the ridge of high pressure west of Vancouver Island will weaken gradually during the next 48 hours as a fairly active disturbance moves into the Gulf of Alaska from the southwest. This system will spread showers to the north coast Friday morning and patchy cloudiness to northern Vancouver Island in the afternoon or evening.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

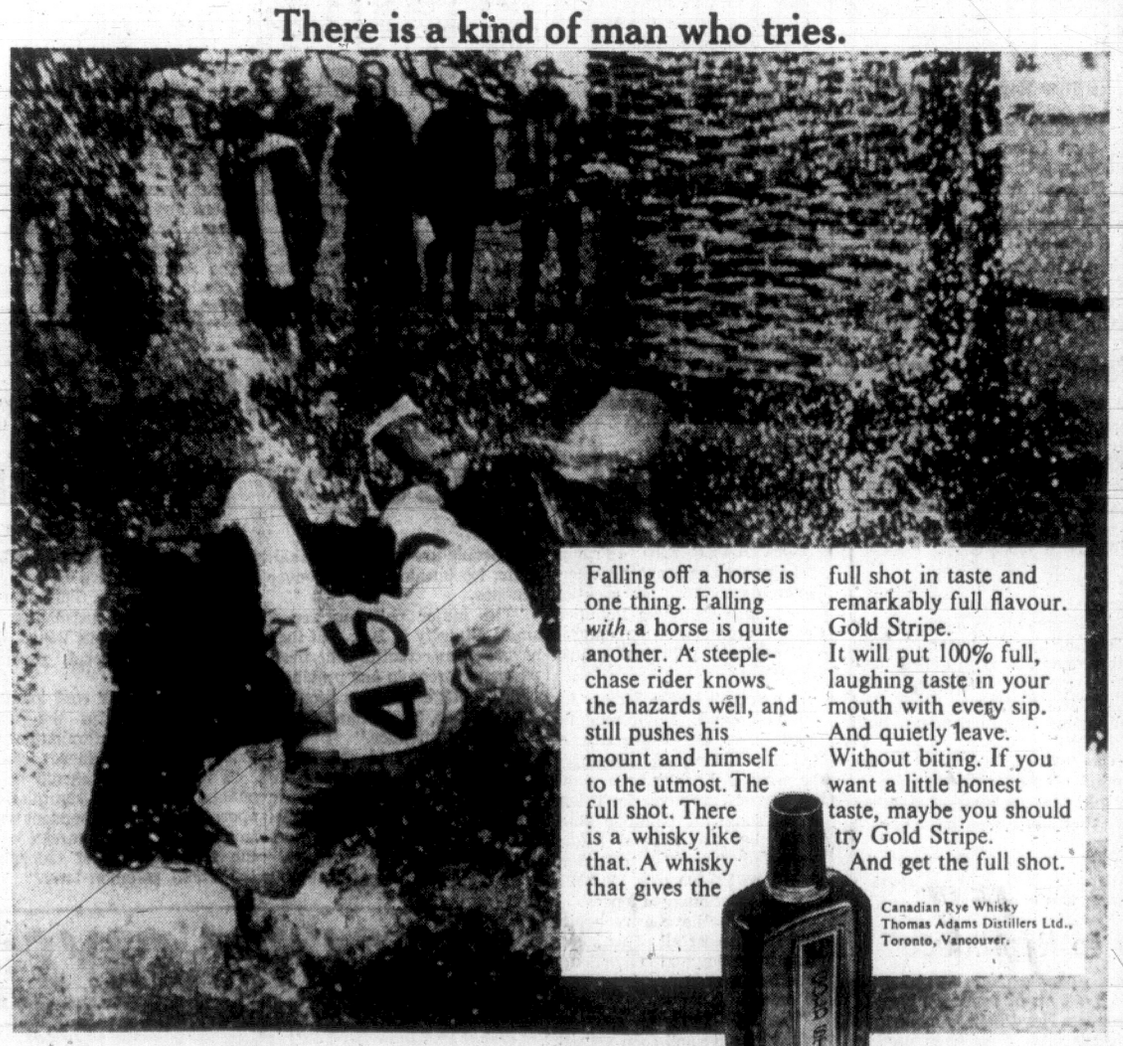

Those who think men and women are equally sensitive to physical discomfort brought on by outside influences, such as the weather, haven't learned the results of research by biometeorologists. Women are more sensitive than men to weather change, especially if the change is to colder weather.

If the temperature to day is 75, for example, and drops all of a sudden, your wife probably will first notice the change when the mercury gets down to 69, a drop of six degrees. You may hardly notice it, if at all, until it drops another degree. Then you, too, will be likely to say, "Hey, it's getting colder."

If you and your wife are in normal health, you will enjoy the change, provided you haven't planned to take an early season swim. You will feel more like working and so will she.

Tough Law-and-Order Jurist Chosen as U.S. Chief Justice

From Reuters-AP

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon Wednesday night nominated Judge Warren E. Burger, a conservative Republican and a tough law-and-order jurist, to serve as the 15th chief justice of the United States.

The grey-haired, 61-year-old midwesterner, a veteran of 13 years on the U.S. Court of Appeals here, is known as a strict follower of the U.S. constitution who has criticized "appellate nit-picking."

Senators, particularly conservatives, hailed Burger's selection. If Senate confirmation is as swift and easy as likely, Burger will step in next term for Chief Justice Earl Warren, who is retiring at 78 after piloting the Supreme Court through its most active and liberal period.

Nomination of Burger, a relatively unknown, follows a scandal surrounding former associate justice Abe Fortas.

Fortas stepped down Friday following disclosure of financial links with jailed financier Louis Wolfson. Nixon said he could vouch for Burger's integrity.

MAY END TREND

Selection of Burger, together with Nixon's expected choice of another conservative to succeed Fortas, is virtually certain to modify or even reverse the liberal trend of the Warren court, whose decisions have had far-reaching effects on the life of the country.

In naming Burger, an assistant attorney-general in the Eisenhower administration, Nixon appeared to support a view that the Supreme Court had gone too far in protecting the constitutional rights of criminals and demonstrators.

While campaigning for the presidency, Nixon said court decisions were "seriously hamstringing the peace forces in our society and strengthening the criminal forces."

He called for vindication of "the first civil right of every American, the right to protection in his home, business and person from domestic violence."

HAD NO IDEA

Burger was at Nixon's side when the president announced the nomination in the East Room of the White House. But some in the room and millions more watching on television had no idea who Burger was.

Nixon added to the suspense and displayed a sense of drama by listing Burger's qualifications before divulging his name.

Burger appears to fit the president's description of a man who should sit on the high tribunal. He has stated that the function of government is "chiefly to foster the rights and interests of its citizens—to protect their homes and property, their persons and their lives."

Burger also has spoken out against the Warren court's trend toward liberal, activist decisions.

The retirement of Warren ends a 15-year era in which the Supreme Court issued far-reaching landmark decisions affecting the political, social and legal life of the United States.

Often by a 5-to-4 majority, the justices pushed forward civil rights for Negroes and defended the constitutional rights of criminal suspects.

But police chiefs, southern segregationists and others accused the court of handcuffing law enforcement agencies and encouraging the rising crime wave with rulings squashing criminal convictions.

Among other things the court has ruled that a suspect must be properly informed of his legal rights and that arrests should not take place without probable cause.

Nixon said chief justices probably have a more profound and lasting influence on their times than most presidents. And in nominating Burger, he has chosen a conservative who believes that unrestrained liberty and disregard for the law lead to a country's destruction.

BIG STEP TO PEACE WITH CHINA

OTTAWA (CP) — Former CCF leader M. J. Coldwell said Wednesday night that if nations will recognize China and if China agrees to become a member of the United Nations, the world will have taken a big step towards peace.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the Ottawa branch of the UN Association, Coldwell said the gap between the rich and poor nations is getting wider.

Britain's Market Entry Dominant Election Theme

PARIS (WP) — The question of British entry into the European Common Market has become a dominant theme of the current French presidential election campaign.

Although Charles de Gaulle adamantly refused to permit even exploratory negotiations on this subject during his final years as president of France, all of the major candidates vying to succeed him have pledge to adlpt a more flexible posture.

Alain Poher, the Centrist candidate and interim head of state, has long been an ardent advocate of expanding the six-nation Common Market to include Britain. During the current campaign he has promised to press for an early resumption of negotiations on the British entry question.

Gaston Defferre, the Socialist candidate, has also supported British entry, "provided Britain accepts all the rules of the Rome treaty," which is the founding charter of the Common Market.

But the most striking development of the current campaign has been the apparent conversion of the Gaullist candidate, former prime minister Georges Pompidou, into a backer of British membership

Since the campaign opened earlier this month, Pompidou has gradually shifted away from the traditional Gaullist stand on this issue.

Student Shot to Death During Campus Unrest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snipers and police exchanged sporadic gunfire at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical University in Greensboro Wednesday night and early today. A student was found shot to death in a dormitory, with a wound in the back of the head.

A coroner said the student was shot with a small-calibre firearm.

Police Col. Walter A Burch, in charge of the police line around the 4,000-student campus, said his men fired only when fired upon and did not go on the campus.

No policemen were injured, he said, but one bullet hit a car with a policeman inside.

Meanwhile, demonstrators in Berkeley, Calif., continued their cat-and-mouse tactics against gas-dispensing police and National Guard troops, while students at City College in New York got some good news—no failing grades will be issued this term.

In Greensboro, guardsmen and armored personnel carriers remained near the campus, which quieted down about 2:30 a.m., after four hours of sniping, police said.

The outbreak at the predominantly Negro school followed signing of a restraining order late Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Walter Gambill, who forbid Vincent McCullough, the student body president, from entering nearby Dudley high school.

Dudley has been hit by recent demonstrations and absenteeism among black students, to protest what they say was the unfair disqualification of a black candidate for student president at the school.

PROTESTERS SCATTERED

About 2,000 Berkeley protesters were scattered by a dispersal gas Wednesday, after a campus march to press demands for reopening a "people's park" on a lot owned by the University of California.

A riot followed the closing of the park last Thursday. Police fired shotguns during the disorders and a 25-year-old man was killed. A police helicopter used tear gas to disperse crowds Tuesday.

Wednesday's protest was less violent, but police arrested more than 40 persons, bringing the six-day total to more than 250.

Hanoi Blasts Laird On War Prisoner List

HANOI (AFP) — The foreign ministry today rejected what it termed "tendencious statements" made Wednesday by U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird who said he was "deeply shocked and disappointed" by North Vietnam's refusal to provide a list of American prisoners-of-war.

A ministry spokesman said: "As is known, the American pilots committed monstrous crimes against North Vietnam. Their acts were a direct violation of international law.

"They were captured in the act of committing these crimes and they now come under North Vietnamese justice."

But he added that the prisoners were being treated humanely and pointed out that prisoners who already had been released had expressed their gratitude to the North Vietnamese government for the treatment they had received.

'Essential to Unity'

JUSTICE MINISTER TURNER'S proposed amendments to the Official Languages Bill establishing the equality of French and English are designed to meet objections from the western provinces and to clarify and ease a number of other clauses in the legislation. Mr. Turner has been at pains to avoid bulldozer tactics in putting the bill through Parliament; in the first place because he was threatened with court action to challenge the constitutionality of the original measure, and secondly because it is necessary that so important a piece of legislation should have country-wide support.

In the Trudeau government's eyes and Mr. Turner's words, the bill is "essential to national unity". This was the most clearly enunciated of the very few planks in Mr. Trudeau's election platform, and one for which he may rightly claim to have received a mandate. As for the proposed amendments: Mr. Turner says "We're not abandoning our constitutional position — we think this is a reasonable compromise".

Two of the changes are of particular importance, dealing with the chief objections raised in the West. Each provincial government will be empowered to decide when bilingualism in the courts shall become effective within its jurisdiction; and added assurance has been given that the usual criteria of merit shall prevail in appointments and promotions in the federal civil service.

Premier Bennett was one who first pointed out the problem that would face British Columbia—and other western provinces as well—if judges and lawyers were required to conduct trials in French. Under the original version of the bill, a lawyer could call for proceedings to be held in the language of his choice; under the amendment only the accused or a witness may so elect. And in any event, a province must now enact legislation before the bill can affect its courts.

Mr. Turner's assurance regarding civil service appointments may meet some of the criticisms that have been raised. It was noted that bilingualism is perhaps easier to acquire in eastern Canada than in the west, which could place western applicants at a disadvantage. But the Justice Minister says that personal merit will count, as in the past. Still not completely clarified is the question of whether merit may come to include facility in two languages. And it should be obvious that future advancement in many federal jobs will require facility with both Canadian languages. This apparently has not deterred many western applicants who in the past few months have put in for federal government positions.

* * *

The languages legislation, however, has two main hurdles yet to overcome. The provinces have still to form their judgment on the acceptability of the re-worded bill; and, of course, there will be searching debate in Parliament.

The approach of the provincial premiers and of Parliament should be on a high level of understanding of what is involved in the whole program. Obviously, equality of the French and English languages in Canada has come to be an essential factor in our national life. There may be temporary delays in implementation of this facet or that of the legislation, and concessions to meet this or that stated objection, but the principle of bilingualism is no longer a matter of argument—it is a fact of Canadianism. Mr. Turner's compromises can only temper its application, not its reality.

A Helping Hand for Education

CANADIAN MISGIVINGS about the limited nature of our educational assistance to students of less fortunate countries is somewhat eased by a reply given in the Commons the other day by Mr. Mitchell Sharp, minister of external affairs. He had been asked how many foreign students in receipt of either allowances or free tuition are in the universities of Canada during the current academic year and how many Canadians are studying abroad under exchange or other student plans.

The minister's answer seems reassuring. Students sponsored by Canadian International Development Agency under various assistance programs number 1,214; there are 239 helped by the Commonwealth Scholarship and Fellowship Plan, for a total of 1,453.

On the other hand, federal records show about 1,800 Canadians studying abroad, 1,200 under the auspices of the Canada Council, 347 under the National Research Council, 93 under the Commonwealth Scholarship and Fellowship program and 74 who have received scholarships from foreign governments. The figures do not include Canadian students abroad who have received scholarships from provincial governments, but, at the federal level, we are extending nearly as much help to foreigners as we are to our own young people furthering their educations abroad.

Under the assistance given to foreigners, the average monthly grant to an undergraduate has been $165 a month, to graduate students $180. In addition, CIDA also pays all tuition fees and certain allowances for clothing, books, etc., as well as providing for essential dental and medical care.

Thoughtful Canadians have frequently maintained that we should be doing much more, on the basis of our relative wealth. A strong argument can be made to support that contention. At the same time, the record disclosed by Mr. Sharp suggests that we, as a nation, can regard with some satisfaction the degree of educational help we are providing foreign students.

Rules for Elk Lake Boating

ALDERMAN WILLIAM NOEL, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee, has listed for Saanich Council various regulations which will be applied to speedboats and water skiers on Elk Lake. They are more stringent than heretofore, calling, among other things, for the issuance of a permit by Saanich police to anyone who wishes to operate a craft engined with more than 10 horsepower.

The permit will serve two purposes. It will provide a record of those who are licensed to use that body of water and will place in their hands copies of regulations and definitions of restricted areas in which they may operate.

The committee seems to be telling the power boat owners that they will be allowed to enjoy the amenities of designated parts of Elk Lake provided they do not interfere with the legitimate enjoyment of others in the vicinity or create undue hazards there. It is to be hoped the sensible, law-abiding power boat people will exert themselves to see that no careless or inconsiderate boat-owners behave themselves in a manner which persuades the authorities that stricter rules are required, or that power boats should be banned altogether.

'Forgive Them (Car Makers) Their Debts'

THE recent report of Maxwell Henderson, the auditor-general, revealed a most strange story of the back taxes owed by automobile manufacturers to the government of Canada. It now turns out that the story has had a happy ending — not for the general public but for the automobile manufacturers. Since January 1965 it has been possible for manufacturers to import motor vehicles and components free of duty when certain conditions are met. If they are not met, the tax must be paid. According to Mr. Henderson there was an amount of $43.6 million owing at March 31, 1968.

Western

Mr. Henderson charged that the department had made no attempt to collect any portion of these duties or even to establish with any degree of precision the amounts individually owed by the companies involved. The debt was officially described as a "contingent receivable" because the department considers there is a possibility that the amounts may be remitted by the governor-in-council under Section 22 of the Financial Administration Act.

The auditor-general also noted that the total had since increased to a possible $80 million as a result of a subsequent determination that a manufacturer had failed to meet the requirements of the tariff order in 1966 and 1967.

To Them that Have

This is a very large sum of money to be owed by manufacturers who, in any case, enjoy special privileges not conceded to other firms or citizens. Mr. Henderson suggested that the situation had developed to the proportions because of unsatisfactory administrative procedures in the department. It is usual for goods to be assessed at the time of entry and for rebates to be paid if the required conditions are met. But this rule had been reversed for the benefit of the automotive firms. The department could not determine until afterwards which imports failed to qualify — which parts, for example, had been diverted for replacements — and had then to pursue the manufacturers if it hoped to collect.

Mr. Henderson recommended that, in the interests of the treasury, the normal rule should apply: "that all duties and taxes should be collected at the time of importation and that benefits or incentives provided should be made available to the manufacturer only when evidence is produced that the required conditions have been met."

This would scarcely qualify as hardship since the companies have been granted a preferred position under the automobile agreement.

Questions Evaded

In consequence of this recommendation two written questions were addressed to Jean-Pierre Cote, the minister of national revenue, by Max Saltsman, NDP member for Waterloo. The first asked simply whether the department was considering the adoption of Mr. Henderson's recommendation. The second read: "If not, what alternative is the department considering regarding improving the procedures in administering concessions made to motor vehicle manufacturers, in order to adequately protect Canadian government revenue?"

The replies are masterpieces of evasion. To the first inquiry, Mr. Cote noted accurately that the auditor-general had referred to the matter in earlier reports.

"As a consequence, the matter was referred to the department of justice. In the opinion of legal authorities, if the goods were entered under tariff items imposing a duty, there would be no basis for permitting re-entry of the goods under the motor vehicles tariff order 1965 and, consequently, no importer would be able to obtain the advantage thereof."

Manifestly, this had nothing to do with the question asked. Mr. Henderson did not request a legal opinion. He asked for a tightening of procedures.

To the second question, Mr. Cote returned a complicated but equally unsatisfactory answer.

"The procedures in administering the program were considered to be adequate for the protection of the revenues. (By whom? And, if so, how is one to account for the vast sums outstanding in early 1969?)

"The records of motor vehicle manufacturers are audited on an annual basis." (But how can this flat assertion be reconciled with Mr. Henderson's findings? He said that: "Since the inception of the program in January 1965, the records of most vehicle manufacturers have been audited only once by the investigation branch. However, only about 125 of the 500 parts manufacturers have had their records audited by this branch.")

"Failures to meet the requirements of the motor vehicles tariff order 1965 are reported to government for appropriate action" (according to Mr. Henderson's report: "It is a fact that since the inception of the motor vehicles tariff order 1965 on January 18, 1965, not one cent of duty has yet been collected from any company for failure to meet the conditions of the order.")

Significant Oversight

The minister failed to note a point of great consequence. Both the department and the auditor-general showed remarkable prescience in this matter. Mr. Henderson, as his reports shows, suspected that the department was not interested in collecting the taxes due from the automobile manufacturers. The department suspected that Mr. Henderson would include some caustic comments about its treatment of a particular group of tax delinquents.

Mr. Cote accordingly beat the auditor-general to the punch. He had the cabinet slip through order-in-council P.C. 1969-172 which says in effect that manufacturers who did not qualify under the tariff order are deemed retroactively to have qualified and are therefore to have their debts forgiven. This order covers the period down to July 31, 1968 and thus clears the slate of the larger sum mentioned by Mr. Henderson—about $80 million.

From this record a number of obvious conclusions may be drawn. The government is in no position to sacrifice revenues; the 1968-69 deficit, according to Finance Minister Benson, was $675 million. If the sum of $80 million is forgiven in an act of generosity to one group, it must be extracted from the rest of us. (The only alternative is to increase the deficit, in which case we pay anyhow in higher interest on debt and the higher prices of inflation.)

On to Taxpayers

So a burden is transferred from the failing hands of the automotive manufacturers to the broad backs of the general tax-payers. But no reasoned economic case for such a transfer is presented for the approval of Parliament, which in theory controls the purse. It is accomplished surreptitiously, without explanation, without debate, without going to the elected representatives of the people. It is done in the dark by order-in-council. And Mr. Cote afterwards maintains the pretence that he is protecting the revenues.

If this can be worked for one privileged group, at the expense of the general public, why can it not also be done for any other group of the government's favorites?

In an earlier article on this page, written without knowledge of the order-in-council, it was suggested in the light of Mr. Henderson's findings that there is one tax law for automobile manufacturers and another for ordinary citizens. In the face of PC 1969-172 how can Mr. Cote deny it?

Mount Doug on Parade

With regard to your recent article on the Victoria Day parade: It began "Victorians love a parade". They sure do and so do the people who participate — until they see a report seriously in error.

Our parades years ago were hardly "back-yard efforts". They were as good as could be staged at the time. And while your account gave wide coverage to American bands, it was noticeable that local bands received relatively little. Publicity for our bands would be greatly appreciated. We are not a junior, but a senior high and have been for 35 years. We are also the winners of the Abbotsford International festival. — Ted Waring, vice-president, Mount Douglas High.

Looking Back

From the Times, May 22, 1909.

On Thursday next the ratepayers will be called to vote on three money bylaws —one of $125,000 to provide for the extension of the waterworks distribution system, and the other for $45,000 for additional sewers, and the third for the cost of paving the Causeway, Douglas, Belleville and Humboldt Streets, surrounding the Empress Hotel. It is necessary to submit a bylaw in the latter case as the city's share of the costs comes to more than $15,000.

Failure At Home

By C. L. SULZBERGER

From Washington

GREAT powers cannot win a revolutionary war abroad even if they gain control of the local military battlefield — unless, at home, they can summon sufficient public support to press through victory. Clearly President Nixon had this much in mind last week. After all, France had almost wiped out the Algerian guerrillas and yet was forced to concede defeat because French opinion faltered.

Sulzberger

The United States doesn't like to compare its involvement in Vietnam with that of France in Indochina or Algeria but guiding forces in Revolutionary Warfare are not bothered by what they term subtle distinctions.

Methods of aggression have long been a subject of Communist study. In 1939 Moscow implied this form by suggesting to London and Paris an anti-German treaty including a pledge for mutual aid in the event of Nazi "aggression, direct or indirect . . . against any European state."

Since then Chinese and Vietnamese strategists have elaborated Revolutionary Warfare whose thrust has two prongs. The more important of these aims at the home front of the principal enemy which, for Vietnam, is the United States. This has been a decisive element which the Communists' 1968 and 1969 offensives successfully attacked.

Lesson to French

The French army, although clobbered in Vietnam, learned much from its defeat and produced the best Western analyses of Revolutionary Warfare. Col. Roger Trinquier calls it "modern warfare" and says:

"The allegiance of the civilian population becomes one of the most vital objectives of the whole struggle. Military tactics and hardware are all well and good, but they are really quite useless if one has lost the confidence of the population." Nevertheless, Trinquier couldn't imagine the degree of lost confidence back home in France or in the U.S. today where youngsters chant: "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh, only the NLF can win."

Trinquier saw Revolutionary Warfare as "an inter-locking system of actions — political, economic, psychological, military — that aims at the overthrow of the established authority in a country and its replacement by another regime . . . Military operations . . . are never the total conflict . . . The goal of modern warfare is control of the populace, and terrorism is a particularly appropriate weapon."

In Vietnam the U.S. slowly came to realize this and created counter-terrorist formations to upset the Communists' "parallel hierarchies," a secret government with extensive underground branches. Such is the function of Phoenix Intelligence, assisted by provincial reconnaissance units, trying to uproot the long-established Viet Cong "infrastructure" in towns and villages.

Late in Appreciation

But Washington was late in properly appreciating the techniques of Revolutionary Warfare — if, indeed, it ever succeeded in doing so. Impressed by statistical quantification of American power, it consistently under-estimated the strength of the enemy while over-estimating U.S. strength. National will power is hard to measure on any yardstick of overkill or cost effectiveness.

As Trinquier had already pointed out before U.S. bombing of the North began, "Aerial attacks do not permit the realization of desired objectives They accord our enemies complete freedom to present the facts in the manner most favorable to them — the number of civilian victims are considerably exaggerated and the military results minimized."

French military intellectuals realized the factor of national opinion was important, but they did not realize how important. This basic error led to the O.A.S. officers' rebellion as Algeria collapsed. Trinquier insisted: "Our war aims must be clearly known to the people. They will have to be convinced." However, he was thinking of the Vietnamese or Algerians, not the French.

Paradox

The lesson was also learned too late in the United States. Washington indeed recognized the need to change South Vietnam's administrative structure. We presented ourselves with the paradoxical problem of trying to rely upon a status quo social system, against the will of the masses, while revolutionizing it from within, against the wills of its own power elite.

Yet the White House obviously failed to make our war aims "clearly known" to the American people. Fifteen years ago the Pentagon ruled Southeast Asia was an area of "critical" importance to U.S. national interests but the reason was never convincingly explained. This has been the fatal weakness in our prosecution of a new method of conflict whose ramifications we were slow in comprehending. President Nixon is plainly trying to remedy this but the hour is late.

'Man Is an Animal With Many Options'

He May Be Unique But Not a Triumph

By PHIL CASEY

Man is what he is and does what he does because that's the kind of animal he is, according to a Rutgers university anthropologist. But man's an animal with many options.

He's no triumph over nature, said Prof. Robin Fox, but merely a unique part of it.

He's unique among primates, Fox said, because he is a "cultural animal . . . biologically constituted to produce culture," and he is adaptive to circumstance and environment.

"What is in the wiring of the human animal got there by the same route as it got into any other animal," Fox said, "by mutation and natural selection."

Fox was one of several scientists who spoke last week at a three-day Smithsonian symposium on "Man and Beast: Comparative Social Behavior."

". . . Differences beween ourselves and other primates, for example, do not stem from the fact that we have in some way overcome our primate natures, but stem from the fact that we are a different kind of primate, with a different kind of nature," he said.

★

"At the level of forms and processes, we behave culturally because it is in our nature to behave culturally, because mutation and natural selection have produced this animal which has to behave culturally, has to invent rules, make myths, speak languages and form men's clubs, in the same way as the Hamadryas baboon has to form harems, adopt infants and bite its wives on the neck."

"We are the cultural animal, all right," said Fox, "but both terms should not be given equal weight, and one does not contradict the other . . . let me say that culture does not represent a triumph over nature, for such a thing is impossible. It represents an end product of a natural process; it is both the producer and product of our human nature, and in behaving culturally, we are behaving naturally."

But man's biological nature is flexible, and has the ability to adapt, Fox said.

"But, and here is the genius bit, these (man's) habits can be changed within a generation. One does not have to wait for the long process of natural selection to operate before these quasi-instinctual behaviors can be modified. They can be modified very rapidly to meet changing circumstances. Thus one has all the benefits of instinctual behavior without its costs—over a period of time, that is."

Fox said his anthropology "sees the human actor as a bundle of potentialities, rather than a tabula rasa (blank slate); potentialities for action, for instinct, for learning, for the development of unconscious habits.

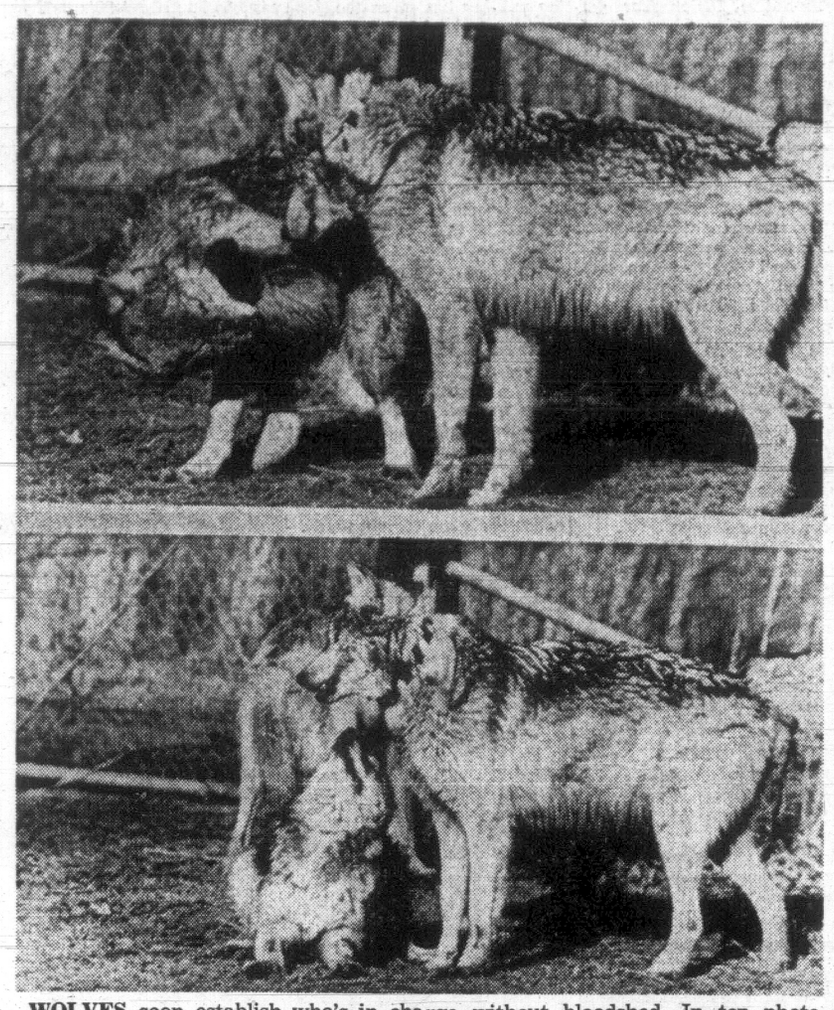

"These potentials or predispositions or biases are the end product of a process of natural selection peculiar to our species.

"Hence, it is scarcely surprising that we continually reproduce that which produced us. We were selected to do precisely this . . . it is not only the capacity for culture that lies in the brain, it is the forms of culture, the universal grammar of language and behavior . . ."

The resemblance between man and no-human primates are "many and subtle," Fox noted, both in their behavior and social systems. But man is by nature a political animal, he said.

"Ants can have societies, but ants cannot have politics. Politics only occur when members can change places in a hierachy as a result of competition. So man is more than social, he is political, and he is political because he is that kind of primate—terrestial and gregarious.'"

WOLVES soon establish who's in charge without bloodshed. In top photo the male exerts dominance over female, who approaches submissively with neck exposed and one paw upraised. Below, a subordinate wolf twists its head upward in gesture of surrender to leader.

He Can Control His Aggression Just as Wolf Has Learned to Do

By CAROL COLLIER

When it comes to living together peacefully, men and women could learn a lot from wolves, according to Dr. Michael W. Fox, a psychologist at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

"In spite of programs to annihilate this animal," Dr. Fox says, "the wolf still survives: a species that has evolved and attained a degree of social stability from which we have much to learn — before we annihilate ourselves."

Fox, who also is associate director of the St. Louis zoo, has been conducting extensive studies on wolf behavior in an effort to learn more about people.

He says an important aspect of wolves' behavior is their ability to control aggression among themselves. They have a biologically inherited ritual for this, which has been developed through social interactions — "just as smiling has been in man," Fox points out.

Rituals Omitted

Man also has rituals, but they are not all genetically inherited. Some are culturally acquired. However, man's rituals may mimic the inherited rituals of animals. For example, a man shaking his fist or brandishing a sword can be compared to a fiddler crab waving its claws.

Dr. Fox thinks that at one time man controlled his aggression just as the wolf. He feels the problem of human aggression has mushroomed because man's technological evolution has outstripped his biological evolution.

"Man hasn't developed sufficient ritual for sustained social interaction, expecially at the international level," according to Dr. Fox. In the Middle Ages man did have cultural rituals or controls in relation to his society. He cites dueling with its intricate rules as one bygone safety valve for aggression.

"Wars were ritualized at one time, but in this age of push-button war in which the enemy is hardly seen communication and ritual break down," Dr. Fox points out.

Fox recently served as science advisor for a project in which six wolves were introduced to each other for the first time when they were released into a four-acre enclosure.

Crawl Toward Male

The six animals, including four 10-month-old pups, a 2-year-old female, and a 2-year-old male, immediately acted out a ritual of aggression. They organized their own rank and file in a more orderly fashion than is often seen in human social activity.

Whining obsequiously, the female and the pups crawled toward the male on their bellies, with ears flattened and tails lowered, avoiding eye contact and sometimes raising their paws.

The male made no initial effort to establish his dominance. He was even slightly defensive when first approached by the others. Their submissive behavior, however, evoked a change in him, and he soon began to act in a way befitting his higher status.

He held his head and body high, with erect tail and ears. Raised hackles emphasized his stately posture. He formed his mouth in a half-closed, puckered expression, quite different from the other wolves whose lips were drawn tightly back. The latter often tried to lick their leader's face.

"The wolves realized they needed a leader and seemed to elect one," Dr. Fox notes.

As his assurance developed, the dominant wolf began to act aggressively by seizing the muzzle of each of the younger wolves and pinning it to the ground. This was done without inflicting injury, which is an important aspect of wolves' ability to control aggression among themselves.

The day after the two-year-old male established dominance, a new aspect of behavior emerged. Gestures of submission and aggression continued, but the wolves now acted as a group. A pack had formed.

But it was more complicated than a simple leader-follower relationship. All were submissive to the older male, but the pups also were submissive to the older female and there was a refinement of rank among themselves.

Just as man has stereotyped gestures, such as smiling or frowning, by which he conveys a message, the wolf also uses visual signals. The dominant male, for example, exhibits aggression by staring into the averted eyes of subordinates.

Prevents Fighting

Dr. Fox says use and recognition of appeasement and submissive gestures prevents actual fighting and severe injury among wolves. In this way, special stability is maintained.

There are close parallels, Dr. Fox points out, between the social organization of the wolf pack and that of primitive human tribes. Both have a dominance order, a recognized leader and various rituals.

"It is not inconceivable that in human societies the clan or tribal leader at one time established his supremacy by displays of dominance, not unlike the dominant wolf pinning the subordinates to the ground," Dr. Fox says.

"Most of our social organization — the office, the factory — are based on a wolf-like hierarchy," he continues. "But because man is basically individualistic, he must withdraw from this hierarchy. Then the truly communal organization of the wolf breaks down."

Are We Swinging Toward Baboons?

By PHIL CASEY

It's not scientific to say that man's aggressive, territorial behavior is innate, inherited from his primitive ancestors, scientists have agreed.

"There are probably more than three million species of animals living on the earth today," said Dr. Edward Q. Wilson, professor of zoology at Harvard University. "Our knowledge of the occurrence of competitive and aggressive behavior among them is extremely meagre."

Wilson's analysis of insect and animal behavior suggests that the problem of determining what drives are innate in man is far more complex than is suggested in recent theories set forth describing man as an innately aggressive and territorial being.

●

Wilson finds that "pacificism is the rule among animal species" and that even when aggression occurs "as a genetically-determined trait," it occurs under extreme conditions.

He was one of the several speakers last week at the Smithsonian Institution's three-day "Symposium on Man and Beast: Comparative Social Behavior."

Wilson told the audience of about 300 scientists, scholars, administrators and Smithsonian staff that "it seems inevitable that man makes himself genetically as he goes along.

"If aggressive behavior under stress has a genetic basis, it is likely to be due less to pleistocene genetic inertia than to the fact that such behavior has continued to be adaptive into modern times."

●

"Competition is widespread but not universal in animal species . . . among the species that engage in competition, aggression is less common in the vertebrates than in the invertebrates. A small minority of invertebrate species employ killing and even cannibalism as normal competitive techniques, but the occurrance of such behavior is extremely rare in vertebrates . . . the idea that man's immediate ancestors were territorial and very aggressive may be true, but the evidence from comparative studies of primate sociology is wholly inconclusive on this point and ecological correlation can no longer be invoked with any degree of confidence to argue the matter either way."

An aggressive trait in man "cannot be assumed to be due to a . . . genetic residue left over from prehistoric times," Wilson said. "It is more plausibly viewed as a trait that has been adaptive within the past few hundreds or, at most, thousands of years."

Dr. Hans Kummer, of Tulane University, told the group that aggression and territoriality "are not engrained, pervading attributes of the primate order . . . they seem to be common primate potentials, which appear and disappear relatively fast in evolution.

●

"Man's closest relatives, the great apes, are unaggressive. They do not defend territories, and their groups are open to strangers. Man has, in a relatively short period, swung toward the opposite, approaching the style of macaques and baboons."

Famed anthropologist Margaret Mead, commenting briefly at the symposium, criticized theories that place man at the mercy of innate behavior traits as theories that "bolster despair."

She cautioned against drawing conclusions about man's inherited characteristics from limited evidence and suggested man has the ability and may be facing the necessity of adapting his behavior to a rapidly-changing social environment.

Goldwater and the Students

By RUSSELL BAKER
New York Times

It will be a pity if the rising political reaction against the student movement succeeds in crushing it. As a force for change, the student movement has not been effective since Lyndon Johnson's retirement, but it is still all that the Middle class has going for it.

Baker

As forces for change, the two major parties, business and labor seem helplessly bogged down in the same inertia that have left them impotent to create a sense of national purpose ever since the fires of anti-Communism burned out in the late 1950's.

The student movement, on the other hand, has at least expressed the discontent with modern American life that had been widely sensed by the white middle class long before the campuses began to explode.

★ ★ ★

The man in the gray flannel suit and the martini-drinking commuter on the 6:02 to Westchester had become symbols of middle-class self-contempt as early as the 1950's. The sense of the corporate game as a "rat race" did not originate with today's campus rebels, but with their fathers.

Unhappiness with the proliferation of authoritarian bureaucracies armed with machinery for reducing individuality to coded numbers has been the theme of a hundred best sellers since 1960.

In 1964 it produced the Barry Goldwater presidential candidacy, an expression of hunger for release from the dehumanizing systems of the superorganized state.

Goldwater was never able to articulate the case for the individual against the constricting system of the modern state. This might have carried him into a conservatism so radical that it would probably have scared him.

★ ★ ★

Instead, he fell back on ancient rhetoric that made it easy for his enemies to dismiss him as a dinosaur, and thereby failed his chance to rouse the middle class for change.

In a sense, the student movement is the heir to the Goldwater movement. Both were born of rising middle-class discontent with what is called "the quality of American life."

In some particulars, as on the war issue, the two were inimical, but on the central issue they were one.

The modern superstate ground down a man's freedom intolerably in the cause of perfecting its own organization; some better principle of organization had to be found.

If, as now seems likely, the student movement is failing, one reason may be that it is repeating Goldwater's error in 1964 in falling back on tired old rhetorical cliches that either scare or bore the middle class.

Another reason may be that the students, who profess to despise the "old" politics, have fallen into all the vices of the "old" politicians.

They are obsessed with tactics as a substitute for issues, assuming that any building seizure which produces a bloody confrontation will gain them votes whether there is an issue or not. The tactic becomes the issue.

Like the "old" politicians, when the students have no issue they invent one, and when its usefulness ends they drop it and invent another.

As a result, they seem well on the way to turning off their natural middle-class constituency just as thoroughly as the "old" politicians have turned it off.

A man with a reputation for "just playing politics" stirs only the party faithful; if his tactics are based upon calculated swinishness, he is in for a bad run.

★ ★ ★

The movement's inability to find important issues is illustrated this spring in the concentration against R.O.T.C. Going gunning for R.O.T.C. at this pass in history is like making a safari to shoot mice. While the draft system continues to work injustices that irritate great masses, where is the urgency in eliminating the R.O.T.C.?

The Vietnam war continues, even though Lyndon Johnson has gone, yet except for routine lip service to its "vileness," the student activities are less active against it than many Senators.

Even on university matters, at which they might have some special competence, the movement's leaders seem powerless to get down to real issues.

These are such questions as whether grades should not be abolished, whether the traditional four-year curriculum is not antiquated, whether the colleges' late-found zeal for admitting unqualified whites and admission policies in general are not in fact designed to perpetuate an authoritarian class and whether we all should not be encouraged to revolt against a system that reduces colleges to the issuing of employment certificates.

★ ★ ★

It is unfair to blame the students for not being able to see the big issues. At least they try, which is more than can be said for much of the discontented middle class. On a few things, like the war and the race issue, they have succeeded.

This spring, however, they haven't come close. The blacks, who have a fairly clear idea of what their big issues are, shy away from the movement as frivolous.

The lower-income whites seem to view it with the contempt of the workingman for the sports of the idle sons of the rich.

And now the middle-class whites, who think they'd like something to be changed but don't know what, are being rallied to suppress it.

It could be that the student movement is too important to the country right now to be left to the students.

MOST HOLLAND PRIESTS ASK END TO CELIBACY

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — About three-quarters of Holland's Roman Catholic priests and candidate priests want celibacy abolished, says a survey published Wednesday.

The poll was made at the request of the Dutch bishops by the Nijmegen Institute for Applied Sociology. Questionnaires were sent to 8,879 priests and candidate priests in February and March last year.

The institute said completed forms, reflecting the opinions of 83 per cent or 7,381 of those questioned, showed that nearly 75 per cent were opposed to celibacy, 21 per cent wanted its immediate abolition, and only 5 per cent wanted it maintained.

You Can Change Things in Canada, Citizens Told

"You don't have to accept Canada as you find it," Judge Norman Orreck, president of the B.C. Court of Citizenship, told 51 new Canadians in Victoria Law Courts Wednesday.

"If you don't like certain things about this country, you can change them by protest and by exercising your vote at the three levels of government."

Judge Orreck congratulated the immigrants on becoming Canadian citizens, adding:

"You have given Canada the reciprocal honor of adopting it as your country. It is a good country, but it has faults like all other countries, and under our free democratic system, you have the right to vote against anything you don't like.

NATION OF IMMIGRANTS

"Canada is a nation of immigrants and the descendants of immigrants and it is they who have shaped this nation. The only original Canadians were Indians and Eskimos and even they are said to have migrated to Canada from Asia.

"Many came here in search of religious liberty, political freedom and economic betterment and some in search of adventure.

"Whatever it was, they came to Canada in the belief that the future would be better than the past."

Judge Orreck urged the new Canadians to support human rights and freedoms and to rebel against oppression in any form.

BROTHERHOOD

"The 20th century has made this world a neighborhood but, if it is to survive, it must also be a brotherhood."

Judge Orreck said immigrants to Canada can qualify for any public office, regardless of their country of origin, and they have the right to vote at all levels of government.

"You have the right to obtain a Canadian passport and, when you have it, you can travel to almost any country in the world without let or hindrance."

Trudeau—In Search of a Defence Policy by Year End

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is a man in search of a defence policy.

He now knows pretty well what parts of the defence policy he inherited a year ago from the Pearson administration he will jettison.

But he has not yet, except in a general way, made up his mind what to put in their place.

Mr. Trudeau may be no militarist. But neither is he a Gandhi. To him, there are some evils worse than war.

It is evident that the prime minister, intends to set out a new defence policy by the end of this year. He has indicated that it will be oriented mainly to the defence of Canada—and North America—in co-operation with the United States.

Informants say Mr. Trudeau is searching for the best way in which Canada can work with the U.S. in the air defence of the continent.

Mr. Trudeau is grilling the military as they have probably never been grilled before on a future defence role for this country.

WANTS MORE CONTROL

So far, he has not received answers which satisfy him.

The prime minister is said to feel strongly that civilians in government have not held a nearly tight enough economic rein on the military.

In his view, some costly weapons programs have been undertaken without any adequate reasons.

Mr. Trudeau is particularly annoyed by the policy of the Conservative Diefenbaker government, continued by the Pearson administration, which put an air division of bombers on four—now two—bases in Europe.

In the event of war, the bombers would be caught on the ground by Soviet missiles because they are a "second-strike" weapon. Canada would never allow the planes to be used for a war-opening first strike and they therefore could be used—theoretically—only as a force of retaliation.

For similar reasons, Mr. Trudeau is said to feel that the navy's anti-submarine role is questionable.

Consequently, it is being freely predicted here that both the air division in Europe and the navy's air arm, comprising chiefly the carrier Bonaventure and its aircraft, will be dismantled within a year.

Mr. Trudeau said last month there will be a "planned and phased" reduction of the Canadian military commitment in Europe—the six-squadron air division and 5,000-man infantry brigade.

He said the size of the reduction will be "Phase II" of this policy.

OFFICERS CRITICAL

Armed forces officers are saying openly that the prime minister's policy is "two-phased."

There is more resentment toward the government in the defence department than at any time since fast, fast unification.

Though some officers concede the military has given the government bad advice from time to time, they also maintain that bad decisions have been forced on it by government.

They cite as bad decisions by the civilians too-rapid unification and the current program to build the CF-5 fighter-bomber. No role has been found for the plane though it now is in production at a cost of about $2,000,000 each.

There are rumors—but they are only that—that Mr. Trudeau may cancel the CF-5 program and also the project to build four new helicopter-carrying destroyers.

The government plans—and these are not rumors—to shut down or reduce many military installations across the country.

One presumed consequence is that the personnel strength of the armed forces will be reduced below the current 98,000.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux is scheduled to attend a Brussels meeting of NATO's defence planning committee May 28. He is expected to outline some Canadian defence plans to his NATO counterparts.

But the big defence questions armed forces?—remain to be —chiefly: What role for the settled.

Mr. Trudeau has said that defence policy will flow from foreign policy and not the other way round.

Quebecers Challenge Estates-General

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — Jacques-Yvan Morin, president of the privately-sponsored Estates-General of French Canada, ran into sharp questioning from young Quebecers Tuesday night when he addressed a Paris meeting about the work of his organization.

One of the questioners argued for Quebec independence while others demanded clarification of positions taken by Morin and the Estates-General on matters connected with the province's future status.

Morin told one critic that independence "is not a simple problem."

Quebec's main difficulty, he said, is development of skilled managerial groups. The people generally "are very divided" about their constitutional future, he added.

VP TO PARTIES

He said that the Estates-General, which held a meeting in Montreal March 6-10, serves only as a "forum for public opinion" on such questions.

Whether Quebec actually embarks on a course of independence is up to the political parties, Morin said.

Asked whether a basic problem is lack of Quebec control over foreign capital in the province, Morin said the solution lies not in expelling such capital but in "disciplining" it.

Another member of his audience suggested that the work of the Estates-General may have been "useless."

Morin denied this as he explained the organization's history and methods to a meeting sponsored by the Association France-Quebec.

The meeting, held in a Quebec government conference hall, ended in spirited debate after Morin insisted that Quebec could become "an extraordinary laboratory of civilization."

This could be accomplished through the fusion of fidelity to European traditions with North American technology, he said.

A NEW IMPERIALISM?

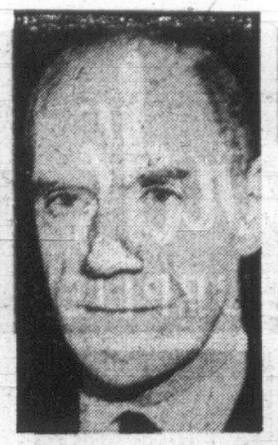

He was challenged by a questioner who asked whether loyalty to the idea of a world-spanning community of French-speaking countries means a new form of imperialism in disguise.

Morin insisted he is as much opposed to "spiritual imperialism" as he is to economic domination.

Quebec, he said, is sharing its experience in audio-visual techniques of cultural action with French-speaking residents of Louisiana.

The association which sponsored the meeting embraces a number of private groups in this country working for closer ties with Quebec.

The Estates-General has promoted meetings in the province designed to focus the attention of scores of widely-representative French-speaking Canadians on questions crucial to their future.

EFFORTS by Canada to establish diplomatic links with Communist China will not mean the "sacrifice" of anyone in the opinion of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He was replying to former prime minister Diefenbaker, in the Commons, who asked assurance the government would "live up to its commitments" not to sacrifice Nationalist China in the talks now taking place at Stockholm.

Europe Trek To End In Maritimes

HALIFAX (CP) — Tignish, on the northern tip of Prince Edward Island, will be the final stop on Hank Gallant's trek homeward, following a walk that took him more than 2,800 miles through 11 European countries.

Gallant arrived here Wednesday on a flight from Glasgow, Scotland, the termination point of a 116-day walk from Lisbon, Portugal, which he made carrying a 50-pound pack.

During Centennial Year, the 26-year-old Islander, began his walking career, journeying from Beacon Hill Park in Victoria to St. John's, Nfld.—a distance of 5,226 miles.

Gallant said in an interview he is planning to spend the next three years taking it a little easier. He's going to write a book on his trip across Canada, a feat he says has never been done before. And he's going to do a little folk-singing.

17th General Dies

Neighborhood Hospital Teams Seen

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Hospitals of the future will be pretty go-go affairs. They'll be as deeply involved in the neighborhood as a corner grocery store and as mobile as the library bookmobile.

That is Health Minister John Munro's picture and he framed it Wednesday with a warning to existing institutions which may resist change:

"Let me state plainly that it is my feeling that if the hospitals and other health facilities in this country will not get together to co-ordinate their services and divide their specialized functions, then my provincial colleagues and I will have to give serious thought to the selective use of government funds to foster this goal ourselves."

Mr. Munro portrayed storefront clinics and mobile units cruising on case-finding missions as part of a broader, more integrated hospital and health-care system of the future.

For a start, he suggested, they had better take care of the poor and disadvantaged who have substandard hospital care before building bigger and better institutions for the 'haves' of society.

FORESEES VARIED CARE

Hospitals will mean more than active treatment care in a bed. They will mean rehabilitation units, convalescent care, health counselling by mobile clinic, psychiatric consultation and emergency services and even comprehensive mental health services.

Mr. Munro's suggestion to the annual meeting of the Canadian Hospital Association that governments may flex their financial muscles to get hospitals on the road to integration was treated pretty gingerly by hospital administrators already worried about money.

R. Alan Hay, association president, had just forecast lower quantity and quality of hospital care if the hospitals continue to receive a shrinking share of provincial revenues.

But he told a press conference after Mr. Munro's address that the minister's statements would cause hospitals at least to investigate ways of doing a better job.

He also said there probably is some reason to believe the federal government now is having second thoughts about withdrawing eventually from programs like hospital and medical care insurance for which Ottawa contributes a percentage of the cost of provincial programs.

The message had got through that replacement of this fixed percentage for hospital or medical care would make it harder for provincial health ministers to get a share of the revenues from the expanded tax room being offered the provinces by the federal government.

FEARS BAD RESULTS

The realization may have come home to the federal government as well that making it harder for the hospitals to get needed funds from the provinces would result in lower standards of care in another three or four years.

Stanley Martin, chairman and general manager of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, said he reads Mr. Munro's warning as an indication that "a pretty heavy hand will be imposed on them (the hospitals) from the outside" if they do not move voluntarily in the direction of integration of services and division of responsibilities.

Mr. Munro had said some progress was being made in this direction in Saskatchewan, New Brunswick and Ontario.

Mr. Martin estimated that it would take four or five years before there is widespread integration of health services through regional and area planning councils in Ontario.

He said he thinks Mr. Munro expects the current "task forces" of medical and hospital care costs and services will produce a guide or pattern for integration that can be discussed with the provincial governments.

New Zealand Rotarians To Visit City

Seventeen New Zealand Rotarians and their wives will visit Victoria Sunday June 1.

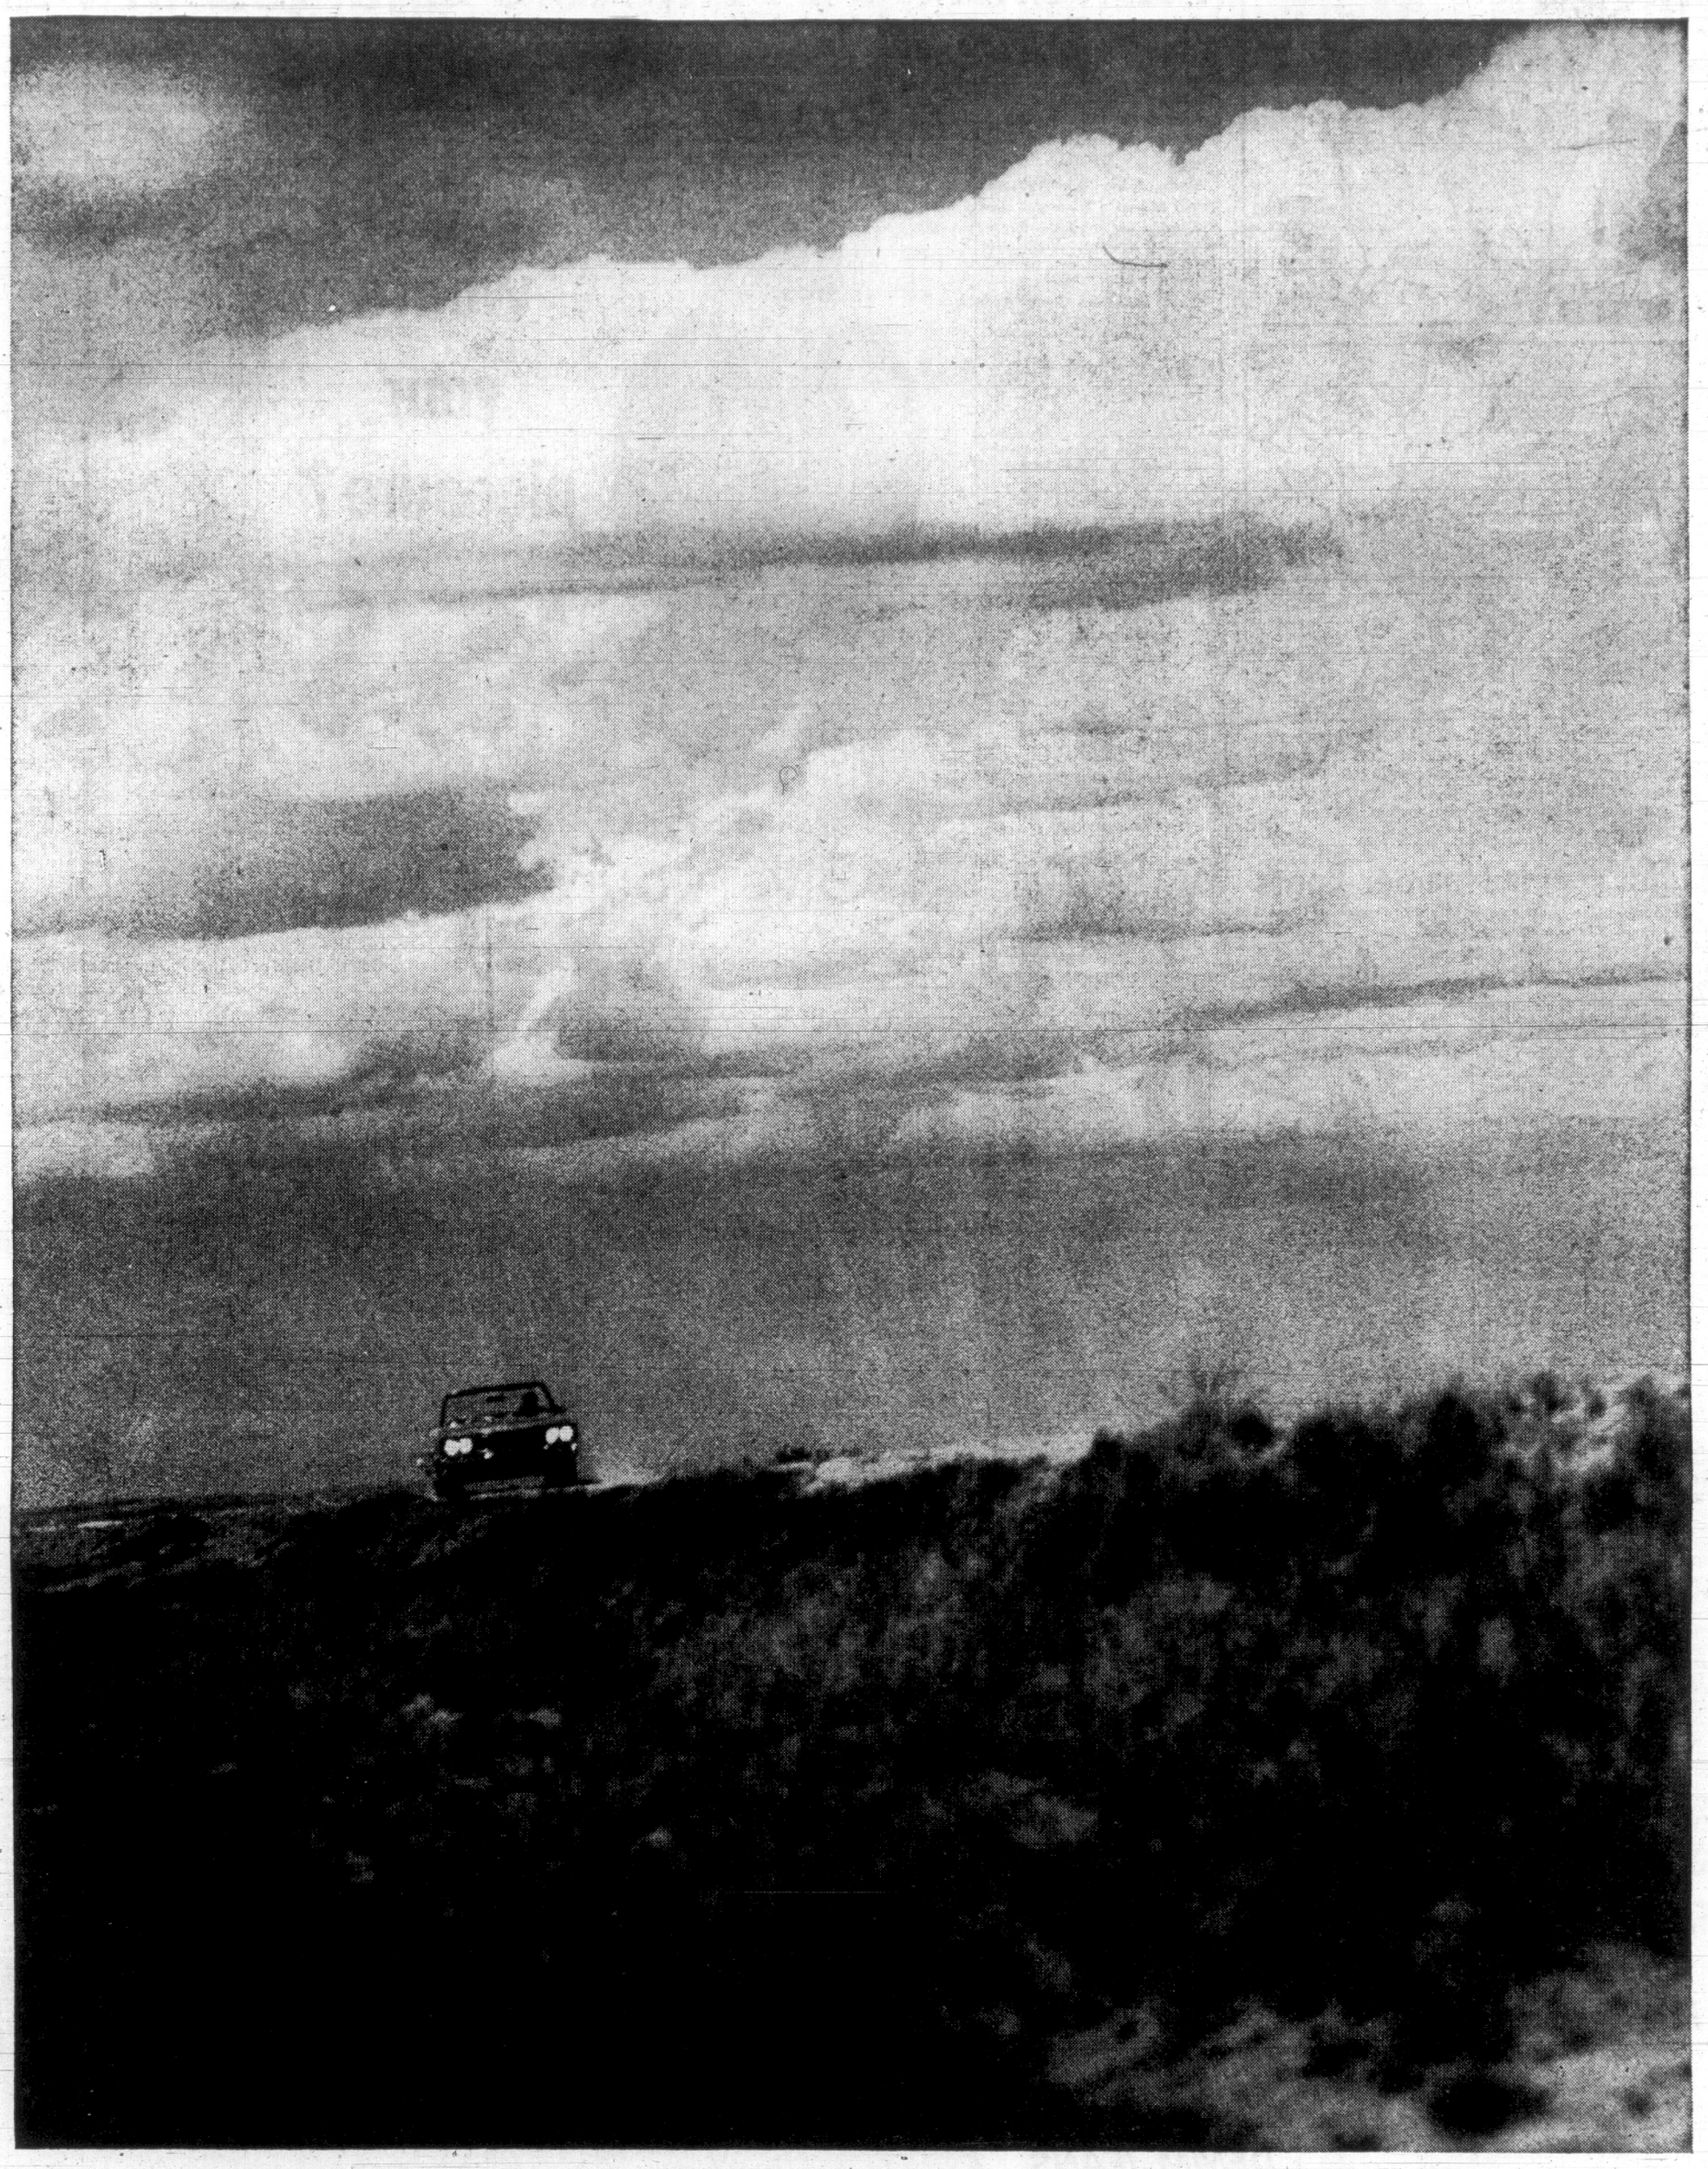

They will be welcomed by Victoria Rotary president Don Wagg and entertained in the homes of local Rotarians.

The visitors, led by past district governor John Craig, are coming to Victoria from Honolulu where they are attending an international Rotary convention.

Nineteen Rotarians from Toda, Japan, visited Duncan and Nanaimo Monday en route to the international convention in Honolulu.

They were welcomed by Mayor James Quaife of Duncan and Rotary president C. R. F. Piers and entertained by Duncan Rotarians.

Toda is a city of about 65,000, some 16 miles north of Tokyo.

100,000 mile test proves Shell Super Multigrade Motor Oil makes your engine last longer.

Two years ago, we introduced Shell Super Multigrade Motor Oil.

Most modern motor oils meet engine manufacturers' performance specifications. Shell Super Multigrade was designed to exceed these specifications—to make your engine last longer.

That way you'll get more mileage. After all, mileage is our business.

Super Multigrade is formulated to protect your engine against wear. It has special additives to fight sludge and varnish problems.

And our recent Texas test proves that Super Multigrade does the job.

2 cars and 100,000 miles

Two cars each travelled 100,000 miles. Every 6,000 miles, the oil and filter were changed. After the test, engineers reported these results:

- Shell Super Multigrade Motor Oil gave excellent sludge and varnish control.
- Shell Super Multigrade Motor Oil minimized engine wear.

A remarkable achievement over 100,000 miles and with oil consumption at normal levels.

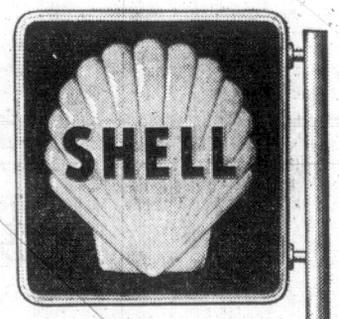

We can help you go farther

The next time you're due for an oil change, switch to Shell Super Multigrade (and change your oil filter at the same time).

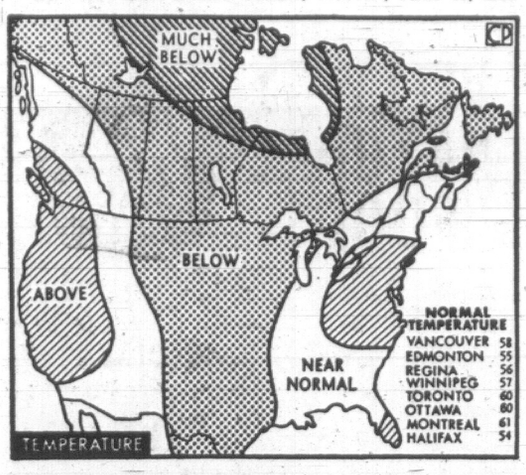

It suits all cars, all seasons and all driving conditions. And surpasses all performance requirements of the major engine manufacturers.

Shell Super Multigrade Motor Oil is one good reason to see your Shell man. Super Shell gasoline is another. It has five mileage ingredients. You'd expect these products to come from Shell.

Because mileage is our business. See your Shell man—if you'd like to go farther.

Mileage is our business

TEMPERATURES are forecast to be above normal with precipitation moderate on Vancouver Island in the next 30 days, according to the long-range outlook issued by the U.S. weather bureau. Much of Canada will receive below normal temperatures.—(CP).

Light Winds Hamper Boats

Wednesday night and weekend sailing races had one thing in common; very light winds and many boats which didn't finish within the time limit.

Successful weekend competitions included the Power Boat Log Race for the Irving Cup. Royal Vic's Jack Simpson skippered his 48-foot Senga to victory in the 27-mile race, which started off Coal Island, and went around the top of Salt Spring to finish in the Sansum Narrows.

The rules of the race varied slightly from the usual predicted log in that the running time doesn't matter. The skipper could be told the time at each of five checkpoints, and adjust his speed accordingly, which made the estimated time of arrival the significant factor.

Royal Vic's junior team of John Readshaw and Dennis Woodward won out in the Vancouver Island eliminations for the Sears Cup on Saturday. The Victoria crew took the first two races in the best of three races sailed in Snipes, winning easily over a team from the host Maple Bay Yacht Club. Readshaw and Woodward will be joined by Philip Huggett for the area H eliminations to be sailed in Seattle in July.

Other weekend winners were Audrey Emery, who won the Max Young Trophy for D class from Cadboro Bay to Sidney, and Jack Woodward, who topped the Cal 25 fleet racing series at Montague Harbor.

Six Meter (two boats): 1, Alana, Bill Hilborn; 2, Juno II, E. Horne.
Cubs (four boats): 1, Cynthia, Frank Piddington; 2, Meleana, Doug Hartley.
Cal 25 (five boats): 1, Venture, Ken Pearce; 2 ,Puff, Jack Woodward.
Thunderbirds (11 boats): 1, Ahooya, Ian Stewart; 2, Hussy, Dave Anstey; 3, Tradewind, Charlie Howatson; 4, Swallow, John Dewey.
O.K. Dinghies (10 boats): First race—1, Norman Marcus; 2, John Thompson; 3, Jeremy Hewett. Second race—1, Norman Marcus; 2, Jeremy Hewett; 3, John Ganton.
Firegalls (six boats): First race—1, Doug Harrison; 2, Bruce Kenning. Second race—1, Adrian Harrison; 2, Bruce Kenning.
All other classes had no boats finishing within the time limit.
RCCNSA: 420's 1, Bill Whitby and Pat Paone; 2, Dennis and Irene Parsons; 3, Vince Martorino and Jim Musgrave.
Fireballs: 1, Lou and Gail Boulanger; 2, Roger Oldham and Greg Hemphill.

Favored Racer Loses Boat, But Rescued

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — The favorite in the round-the-world yacht race lost his boat 12 days from the finish, but "the most important thing is that he is alive," his wife said today.

Mrs. Nigel Tetley was waiting in Plymouth for her 45-year-old husband. He was picked up from a rubber dinghy Wednesday night by a Liberian tanker near the Azores after his triple-hulled yacht sank.

A radio report from the 12,387-ton tanker Prospero said Tetley was in good shape when rescued 100 miles north of San Miguel Isle, in the Azores. The tanker is due in Trinidad in about a week.

Tetley, a lieutenant-commander soon to retire from the Royal Navy, left Plymouth last Sept. 16 and had spent 247 days alone at sea.

BOW DAMAGED

His bow was reported damaged some time ago, but he recently had radioed: "She's leaking like a colander, but I think I'll make it."

If he had arrived as expected in Plymouth on June 2, he would have set a record of 259 days for the fastest solo non-stop circumnavigation of the world and would have been first in line to claim the $12,000 prize the Sunday Times is offering.

One yachtsman has finished the course so far—Robin Knox-Johnston, a 30-year-old merchant marine officer who sailed his 32-foot ketch Suhaili into Falmouth on April 22. His time was 312 days.

One competitor is still in the running. He is another Briton, Donald Crowhurst, who also is sailing a trimaran like Tetley's. He was last heard from April 8 just after he rounded Cape Horn and started up the Atlantic.

Hawaii-Trip Promoters Charged in Mail Fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Germans were charged with mail fraud by U.S. authorities Wednesday after telling 57,000 people in the U.S. and Canada that they had won free vacations.

Each of the "winners" was asked to post a $25 registration fee, to be refunded the day of departure for either Acapulco or Hawaii, Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward J. Wallin said.

Wallin said Hans George Aust and Roland Graber, both 27, operating Deluxe Vacationer Co. of Hollywood, made false claims in an advertisement published in TV Guide magazine April 5.

The ad said the company was associated with leading travel agencies all over the world and was conducting a "travel preference survey" with 2,000 vacation prizes to be awarded persons who fill out a questionnaire.

Wallin said phoney telephone numbers for the company were listed and that 57,000 winners' "certificates" were mailed requesting a $25 deposit within 10 days.

No vacations would be scheduled before June 15, according to the notice, Wallin said.

The letters to winners prompted a flood of inquiries to district attorneys, chambers of commerce, better business bureaus, and postal inspectors.

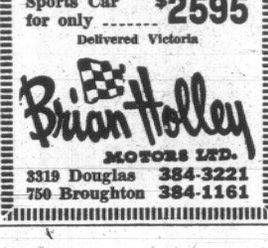

At the arraignment of the two men in U.S. district court, bail was set at $15,000 for each and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for June 13.

Wallin said if each of the 57,000 letters had yielded $25, the promoters' take would have been $1,425,000.

Heaviest Plane Flies

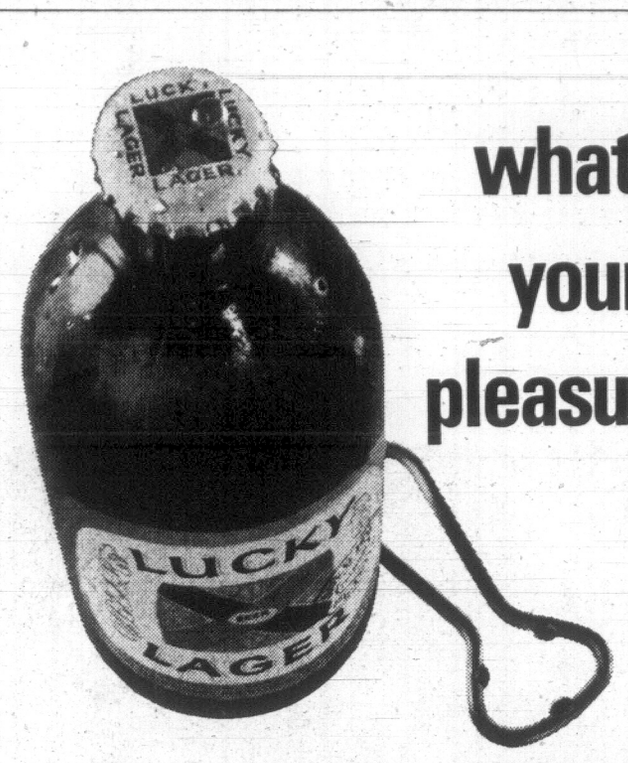

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The air force's C-5 Galaxy took off with 728,100 pounds Wednesday, becoming the heaviest airplane ever flown. Lockheed - Georgia Co., the craft's developer, said the weight exceeded the designed gross take-off load by 100 pounds. Its previous record was 703,826 pounds.

And Who's That Standing Behind Mao?

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes a China watcher gets the impression that there's a distaff-side power struggle going on in Communist China. Or maybe it's just a status struggle. In any case, it helps to have a powerful husband.

The recent ninth Communist party congress disclosed that there now is a bevy of ladies holding down high jobs. All are wives of highest-level leaders.

Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's fourth wife and female firebrand of the great proletarian cultural revolution, may have started a trend. Mao's helpmate of three decades and a former actress from Shanghai, she now occupies a rank just barely outside the five-man inner circle of the ruling Politburo.

There are a number of other women on the fringes of power.

One is Yeh Chun, whose husband, Defence Minister Lin Piao, is the ordained heir of Mao. She has emerged as a member of the Central Committee, a deputy chief of the army's cultural revolution group and a director of the ruling Politburo's powerful military affairs committee. All this makes her almost the equal of Mrs. Mao.

PREMIER'S WIFE IN

Another is Teng Ying-Chao, wife of Premier Chou En-Lai. A glittering character in her own right, she now is a member of the Central Committee, secretary of its "women's work" organization and vice-chairman of the All-China Federation of Women. Unlike Chiang Ching, Chou's wife is a well-travelled woman who was educated in Paris. As a girl she was a revolutionary who promoted a branch of the Chinese Communist party in France.

Another is the wife of the veteran secret police boss, Kang Sheng. She is Tsao Yi-ou, now a member of the Central Committee and its deputy director for the North China Bureau.

The wife of Vice-Premier Li Fu-chun is a member of the committee, first secretary of its women's work committee, and chairman of the All-China Women's Federation.

Chang Chien, the wife of Foreign Minister Chen Yi, is a member of the executive committee of the Women's Federation and vice-president of the China-Cambodia Friendship Association.

The Chinese never have liked to see women in places of power. An old superstition sees women in high places as a sign of decay of the nation.

Two ancient dynasties, the Hsia and Shang, were overthrown, according to legend, because of scheming concubines in the court. There are more recent memories of the Empress Dowager Tzu-hui, whose reign brought chaos and a revolution which ended the monarchy for good.

Peking Sends Envoy

PARIS (Reuters) — Chinese Ambassador Gen. Huang Chen arrived here Wednesday, Peking' first ambassador on duty in the West for more than two years.

ARGYLE MOTORS LTD.
2929 DOUGLAS ST.

This is the Mazda 1200.

It has front disc brakes, adjustable headrests, a full complement of the latest safety devices and a custom-tailored interior with reclining seats. Features you don't expect to find for $1898. We think it's prettier than the other cars in its class, too. Sleeker. Less angular.

But what really sets the Mazda 1200 apart from the rest of the herd is performance. Light weight, 73 horsepower and a fast action four speed gearbox that take it far in front of the competition. All this performance comes in your choice of two packages: the Sedan shown above, or the Sports Coupe, at left. The Sedan is for those who like their power in a sedate package. The Coupe is for those who think a car should look as fast as it goes. Whichever you choose, you'll have to hurry. They're going fast.

Oil Imports Leave U.S. Vulnerable Expert Warns

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Texan warned a Senate subcommittee Wednesday that any revised oil import quota program should be as "flexible" as possible but if it leads eventually to dependence on foreign oil the United States "is going to be in a dangerous position."

Jim C. Langdon, member of the Railroad Commission of Texas, rejected Chairman Philip A. Hart's suggestion that in the interest of national security it might be wise to leave much of the proven U.S. oil untouched and rely on cheap, foreign oil for as long as possible.

The Michigan Democrat suggested a sort of "standby industry" in the U.S supported by subsidy. He emphasized he was not suggesting the U.S. should rely entirely on imports. He contended that about 95 per cent of the U.S. industry could in fact compete if an open market replaced present import restrictions on cheaper foreign oil which some sources have estimated cost the American consumer as much as $7 billion annually.

Langdon, whose commission regulates the oil industry in Texas, told the subcommittee on anti-trust and monopoly that if the domestic industry is reduced to any large extent it could never be revived in time of national emergency.

It would be too expensive to put small wells, which now played a vital role in the country's supply, back into operation.

Survival of Press Deep Quebec Concern

QUEBEC (CP) — The plight of small regional newspapers was aired Wednesday before the national assembly's committee on freedom of the press by an association grouping 86 French-language weeklies, including seven outside Quebec province.

Concentration of press ownership could result in the death of regional newspapers, said Les Hebdos du Canada in a brief to the committee.

Such concentration is inevitable economically and even desirable because it leads to "a more modern press," said association president Yves Gagnon.

However it also raised several problems, including the danger that a media group might set its rates "to drain off almost the entire advertising market."

"As far as we are concerned in the regional weekly press," Mr Gagnon said, "a 20-per-cent drop in circulation or in advertising would risk destroying at least 50 per cent of the papers."

STATE HAS RIGHT

The association's brief said the state has "the right and the duty" to intervene, but Mr. Gagnon said intervention by the government should be exercised only when "absolutely necessary."

Another group blamed "the capitalist system" for the difficulties faced by small newspapers.

The 90-member Syndicat des Ecrivains du Quebec, formed in 1967 to defend authors' rights, said in its brief capitalism in newspaper ownership and operation should be replaced by a co-operative system including profit-sharing for journalists.

Jacques A. Lamarche, president of the group, said 400 Quebec daily and weekly newspapers have folded since 1900 and recommended that the government, credit unions and the public combine to form a special company to promote newspaper co-ops.

Pierre Laporte (L—Chambly), a former newspaper man, termed the proposal "absolutely utopic," but admitted that feasibility studies had not been made

The committee, which held its first hearing May 7, adjourned to May 28 when proposals for a press council grouping owners, journalists and the public will be examined.

The committee was established after Yves Michaud (L—Montreal Gouin), former editor-in-chief of the weekly La Patrie, described the Desmarais group of companies in the national assembly last December as "master of the Quebec press" and said it exercised a monopoly.

Mr. Michaud was referring to La Compagnie de Publication La Presse Ltee. and Les Entreprises Gelco Ltee., companies controlled by Montreal financier Paul Desmarais, chairman of power Corp. of Canada Ltd.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Construction Assn.

Canadian Construction Association president Mark Stein, of Montreal, visits Victoria Friday, the first visit of an CCA president to the B.C. capital in five years.

He will be accompanied by association vice-president Bob Saunders and officers of the B.C. affiliate, Amalgamated Construction Association, whose president is William Winckler and executive director Joseph Bishop of Vancouver.

They will meet with local ACA representatives, including Michael Griffin, president, and labor department spokesmen.

Reitman's

Reitman's Canada Ltd. will be opening three new stores in the next few months and plans to open five more in 1970.

President Sam Reitman said "other selective locations are being considered both for 1969 and 1970."

The women's wear retailer now operates 222 stores in 31 communities.

Reitman said sales for the first quarter ended April 30 were up 7½ per cent.

IDB Loans

The Industrial Development Bank reports loans and investments totalled $396 million on April 30, a net increase for the month of $2.85 million.

The bank, a subsidiary of the Bank of Canada, provides financing for small and medium-sized businesses that cannot find funds from commercial sources.

Commonwealth

Harold S Sigurdson, receiver of the bankrup Commonwealth Savings Plan Ltd., has filed suit for $87,000 against Victory Memorial Grdens Lts.

Sigurdson is claiming $48,519 which he swys is owing on a loan made by Commonwealth Savings Plan to the defendant and $38,547 which is due on a promisory note dated April 1966, with interest at 8 per cent.

Kaiser Resources

Kaiser Resources Ltd. Wednesday yielded to threats by delta Mayor Dugald Morrison and took out building permits for construction of a deepsea port at Roberts Bank.

Mayor Morrison said Saturday he would shut down the operation if the permits were not taken out.

Bank Debits

Value of Greater Victoria bank debits during April took a slight drop from March but was still $205.6 million ahead of April 1968.

Canadian Bankers' Association reports individual bank accounts for the month were debited to a total of $630.9 million, against $425.3 million a year ago and $633 million in March.

The figure represents transactions in the private sector only, through personal savings, chequing and current accounts.

Teacher, Trustee NDP Choice

A high school teacher and a school trustee will stand as NDP candidates for Victoria when the next provincial election is called.

Peter Bunn, contractor and trustee, and J. Philip Fawcett, a Mount View secondary school teacher, were nominated by acclamation at a meeting in Oak Bay junior secondary school Wednesday.

When the election is called they will be gunning for seats presently held by two cabinet ministers. William Chant, minister of Public Works, has represented Victoria since 1953, and Waldo Skillings, minister of industrial development, trade and commerce, was first elected to the legislature in 1963.

COLLECTION

The nominating meeting was attended by provincial NDP leader Tom Berger and less than 100 local supporters.

Pledges and a collection taken at the meeting totalled between $1,200 and $1,300.

Berger humored the audience with some anecdotes about his first nomth as NDP leader.

"I could regale you with some interesting tales about the present members for Victoria, but we have some more important business."

He said since his election to leadership of the party, NDP membership in B.C. had increased from 15,000 to 17,000.

He llisted three key ridings, Rossland-Trail, Nelson-Creston and Caribou, all held by the government, that have seen substantial increases in NDP party membership.

He said Premier Bennett is "not the champion of free enterprise but the champion of monopoly", and outlined some of the abuses of power by the government:

Timber cutters in B.C. pay only half as much per tree to the government as their counterparts in Washington state.

Every coal producer in the province except one pays a 25-cent royalty on every ton of coal mined, that one company is Kaiser Corp., the group that plans to ship coal to Japan via the Roberts Bank superport.

The New York-owned B.C. Telephone Co. has the highest rates in Canada, with the excuse that the mountainous B.C terrain keeps its costs high.

And the restrictions contained in the Pollution Control Act have only been enforced once—against a Victoria laundry.

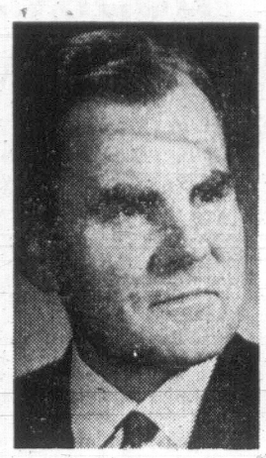

CONTROL ECONOMIC LIFE

"If you're a student at Simon Fraser University and occupy the president's office and smoke his cigars, they call in the RCMP.

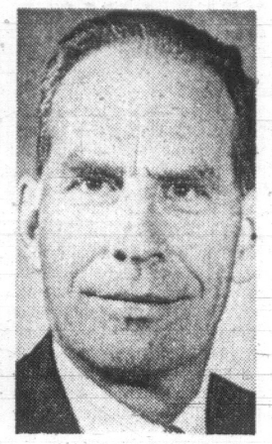

"But if you're one of the corporations that control the economic life of this province you can violate the Pollution Control Act."

Berger said an NDP government would establish a Hansard for the legislature, (a record of all debate during a sitting of the House), "so that when the Premier and the ministers make commitments in the House they can be held to them."

He said the legislature should have two sittings a year instead of one, with legislative committees functioning between sittings, giving committee members time to travel around the province and gather the necessary data for making recommendations.

BUNN
. . . good life for whom?

FAWCETT
. . . Christian principles

HUMAN RIGHTS

On the issue of the government's human rights bill Berger said:

"It's not enough to spell out the rights of the people—you have to give them a means of enforcing their rights."

He said he favored an open-file policy that would allow individuals to defend themselves against items contained in government dossiers.

"We've been fighting bureaucracy all our lives and we're going to continue to fight bureaucracy even after we become the government."

Peter Bunn slammed the Socreds' "good life" slogan in a short acceptance speech.

"The good life for whom?" he asked.

"For the 94,000 B.C. residents on welfare?

"Some of our students who battle their way through our crowded universities with their transient presidents may later find the good life."

He described the present government's education policy as "stop-go", and pointed out a 65 per cent drop in school construction this year compared with the same period last year.

Industrial construction, on the other hand, has increased over 100 per cent. The fingures were quoted from a report of the Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C.

J. Philip Fawcett said NDP proposals came closest of all political alternatives to "principles laid down by Jesus Christ in the Sermon on the Mount."

He said the premier's "anti-Christian" label for the NDP was the "height of hypocrisy".

During its 17 years in power, Social Credit, under the guise of a free enterprise label, had implemented a number of socialistic enterprises: creation of B.C. Ferries, B.C. Hydro, the PGE Railroad, a hospital plan and a medical plan.

"There's nothing wrong with these decisions," Fawcett said. "I just think they were implemented by the wrong people."

Free Pick-up For Garbage In Clean-up

It's spring clean-up time in Victoria.

May 26 to May 30 has been designated the week when city crews will pick up all the garbage and junk accumulated over the past year—free of charge

Householders with junk to be picked up should telephone city hall—385-5711 local 267—before Friday to ascertain the day of collection in their particular area.

All junk must be placed at the front of the premises in an easy to-reach spot. Items over six feet in length will not be accepted.

Neither will garden refuse.

Object of the exercise is to dump unwanted materials not usually acceptable to garbage collectors.

Anglican Church Head Apologizes

LONDON (Reuters) — Archbishop Michael Ramsey, head of the Anglican Church, apologized Wednesday to a church conference on racism after Negro delegates complained he had humiliated a Black Power leader.

Roy Sawh of Guyana, head of the British Black Power party, walked out of the World Council of Churches conference when he was prevented from speaking by Dr. Ramsey, the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Faces Murder Trial

RICHMOND (CP) — Samuel Lawrence Larden, 58, of this Vancouver suburb, Tuesday was committed for trial on a charge of non-capital murder. James Loleff Werseen, 64, also of Richmond, was found shot to death in Larden's home Dec. 30.

WAC Against Patronage

TERRACE (CP) — Disapproval of Social Credit rank-and-file who seek patronage from the provincial government was expressed Wednesday night by Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Continuing his "look-see non-election" tour of British Columbia, Mr. Bennett told a chamber of commerce meeting attended by about 450 persons that "some Socreds in their Social Credit groups think they can run this government."

The premier gave no specific examples of Social Crediters seeking patronage.

"The great enemy of democracy is political patronage—it is the cancer in the body politic," he said.

Appealing for votes from all supporters, as long as they are not Marxist socialists, Mr. Bennett said his government and B.C. doesn't belong to any one political party.

Mr. Bennett continues to deny suggestions he is involved in an election campaign. "I feel free to ask the people now after 17 years: Doubt us if you will, but how long should you doubt?" he said.

31 Ready to Go For Unannounced Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) —Thirty-one candidates, including one cabinet minister, have been nominated for the as yet undeclared provincial election.

A Canadian Press survey of party headquarters Wednesday night showed that 21 members of the New Democratic Party, eight Liberals and two Social Credit candidates have been officially endorsed.

Minister without-portfolio Pat Jordan has been re-nominated in North Okanagan, the only government member in the running

The 21 New Democrats include eight MLAs.

There have been no Progressive Conservative or independent candidates chosen for the election, which Premier W. A. C. Bennett says has a "60 per cent chance" of being called this year.

Current standings in the 55-seat legislature are Social Credit 31, NDP 17 and Liberal six. There is one vacant seat—Cariboo—following the resignation of Robert Bonner, the former Attorney General.

Track Clears First Hurdle

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Ascot Jockey Club and the British Columbia Turf and Country Club won a paper victory over off-track betting shop operator William Wosk Wednesday in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr Justice D. R. Verchere granted the two clubs an interim injunction to stop Wosk and his R. T. Enterprises Ltd. from posting overnight Exhibition Park race entries in his betting shops.

The judge ruled the clubs were entitled to protection from infringement of copyright.

Wosk, a Chilliwack scrap dealer, has opened three betting shops here and a fourth in New Westminster.

The clubs claimed the shops used lists of horses running at Exhibition Park, May 9, which was information originally provided by the clubs.

Wosk told the court that material on race entries posted in his shops was obtained from the Daily Racing Form and that he had verbal permission from the editor to use it

He also said he had permission from the distributors of the racing newspaper.

Prince Earns Chance

NEW YORK (CP) — A badly-withered blanket of roses and another of drooping black-eyed susans are propped up beside barn 9 at Belmont Park.

They're symbols of victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness to assistant trainer Mike Boa, who hopes to take them back to California along with a blanket of carnations if Majestic Prince wins the Belmont Stakes June 7—third leg of racing's Triple Crown.

And inside stands the powerful chestnut three-year-old, declared unfit to tackle the 1½-mile Belmont by trainer Johnny Longden before the decision was overruled by owner Frank McMahon of Calgary and Vancouver.

The Prince was shipped here from Pimlico Wednesday and McMahon said: "We're going to give him a chance to win the Triple Crown."

In California Longden said he will travel to New York to resume the thoroughbred's training.

PLANS CHANGED

Longden, who paid $250,000 on behalf of McMahon for the colt as a yearling, had gone to California to wait for Majestic Prince who was to be shipped there for a rest. However, his plans were changed by McMahon's decision.

"I talked to McMahon last night and he said he wanted to run the Prince in the Belmont if everything goes all right," Longden said Wednesday.

"I thought we had decided to give him a rest after his Preakness victory. That race and his run in the Kentucky Derby were hard ones. He looked a little tired and he's lost some weight and I said then if he was mine that I'd give him a rest.

"I felt Frank and I were in agreement, but apparently he's changed his mind.

"I spent a year preparing the Prince for the Derby and that was the race I really wanted. But he came out of the Derby in such good condition and I thought the Preakness might be a little easier on him, so we went after it. But it was a hard race and it's been a hard campaign.

". . . We'll do our best to get him ready for the Belmont and we'll try to win that one, too."

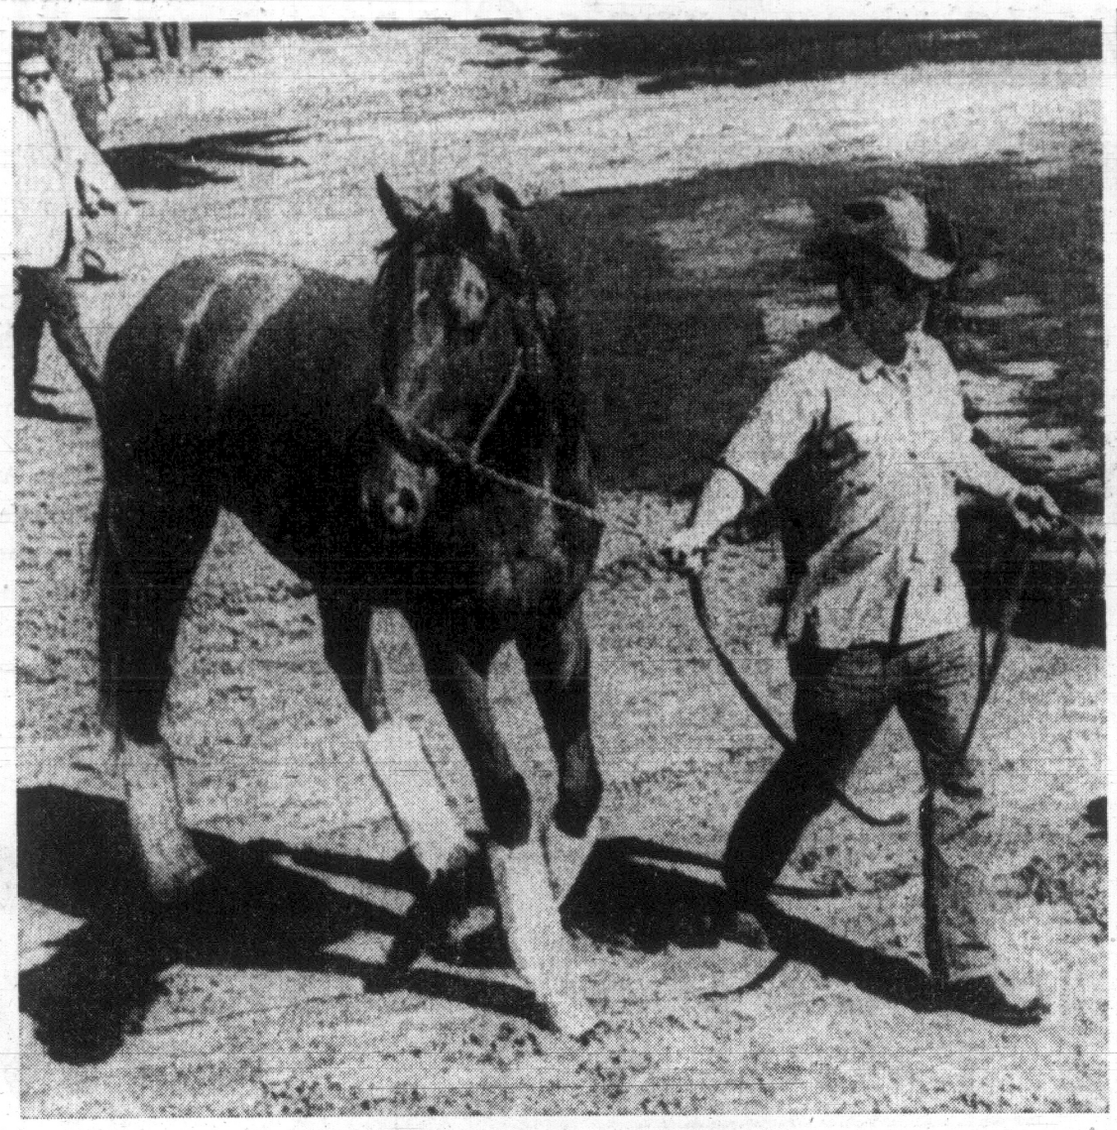

PRESSURE TO RACE

McMahon said there was no question that there was a lot of pressure to have the big red horse go in the Belmont.

The Prince would be the ninth horse in the last 50 years to win the Triple Crown by a victory in the Belmont. The first, back in 1919, was Sir Barton, owned by the late Cmdr. J. K. L. Ross of Lindsay, Ont., and Montreal. The last to do it was Citation in 1948.

McMahon said, however, that his decision to enter the horse in the June 7 Stakes race was not final.

"We'll look at him for the next few days and if he looks right, he'll run," McMahon said.

PRINCE ON A STROLL

JBAA Juniors Face Merolamas

James Bay Athletic Association's junior XV, fresh off a tour to Calgary, will tangle with Vancouver's junior Meralomas Saturday to decide the B.C. junior rugby championship.

The Victoria squad, undefeated in league play this year, looked impressive at the long weekend in a spectacular 13-5 upset of a University of Calgary senior team.

Game time is 2 p.m. Saturday at the University of Victoria rugby pitch.

Record Return

WINNIPEG (CP) — Citizen State paid a record $315.80 for a $2 on-the-nose bet Wednesday at Assiniboia Downs, coupling up with another horse for a daily double of $921.80. The win payoff topped the track's $147 record set in 1966.

Sixth-Inning Miscue Opens Door for Rams

A spectacular double steal by George Fisher almost saved the day for CFB Combos Wednesday night in Stuffy McGinnis Softball League play, but it wasn't quite enough.

Combos, front-running favorites, had slipped two runs behind sixth place Hall Rams when Fisher's base running paved the way to a tie score.

But before Combos could capitalize on the achievement a two-run error in the sixth inning handed the match to the Rams 4-2.

The loss dropped Combos into second place, tied with Colwood Inn and Lake Cowichan, while Denford Electric moved in front.

AT CAHA MEETING

Invading Pros Draw Criticism

CALGARY (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, making no bones about age limits imposed by professional hockey, is concerned over a possible breach in its contract with the National Hockey League.

Part of the CAHA-NHL agreement signed in 1967 reduced the junior age limit to 20 years as of Dec. 31. Included in the NHL's part of the agreement was a clause that guaranteed amateurs a forewarning before a professional club moved into amateur territory.

The CAHA, despite protests from some delegates attending the annual meeting this week, has already decided to abide by the current age limit, while showing concern over reports that the NHL is planning to place minor professional clubs in Montreal, Kingston, Ont., and Ottawa.

Earl Dawson, CAHA president from Rivers, Man., said Wednesday he had sent a telegram to NHL president Clarence Campbell, stressing the concern.

The telegram was approved by delegates.

CAHA IGNORED

"We have not been notified and we should object to being ignored in a matter of such importance," Dawson told delegates in plenary session.

The meeting was told that Montreal is interested in placing an American Hockey League franchise in Montreal, which was the main concern for Dawson who had already written Campbell regarding the Kingston and Ottawa situation.

Minnesota North Stars plan to put a franchise in Kingston and Detroit Red Wings are thinking about placing a team in Ottawa.

Dawson said such a move by Montreal "would be detrimental to amateur clubs."

Earlier, a memorandum of understanding between the CAHA and Hockey Canada, which has taken over management of Canada's national team, was read to delegates by Dawson. It was deferred to Friday.

The CAHA says it will cooperate in every respect, but wants its relationship with Hockey Canada governed by seven general principles.

In one of the principles, the CAHA wants to be acknowledged in its position as the sole governing body for amateur hockey in Canada, and its position as the official representative of Canadian amateur hockey in the international sphere.

MUST BE REGISTERED

While agreeing to accept and abide by the directions given by Hockey Canada regarding the national team's participation in international competition, the CAHA has insisted that the players, managers, coaches and trainers of the team be registered members of organized hockey associations.

Cougars Earn $4,313 For Playoff Efforts

CALGARY — Victoria Cougars learned the value of making junior hockey playoffs.

The value for the B.C. Junior League champions was $4,313. That was the team's share of receipts from the Memorial Cup playdowns.

Cougars' title hopes ended in the western semi-finals when they bowed to Lethbridge Sugar Kings.

Sorel Black Hawks, eliminated in four games by Montreal Junior Canadiens in the best-of-five eastern Memorial Cup final series, will get the biggest chunk of cash from the teams' share of gross gate receipts — $14,323. Sorel was involved in three series, and got most of the money from the clash with the Junior Canadiens which brought in gate receipts of $61,913.

The Canadiens, who went on to beat Regina Pats in four straight games in the Memorial Cup final, will receive $10,333.

The western champion Pats will get $5,577 but also receive $2,900 they were guaranteed for agreeing to play two games in Montreal.

Other clubs to share in the junior recipts will be Dauphin Kings, $3,680; West Fort Hurricanes, $113; Lethbridge Sugar Kings, $6,153; Hull Beavers, $4,815; Halifax Canadiens, $2,687; and Sudbury Wolves, $2,023.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association earned $63,809 from junior and senior playoffs.

Financial reports presented to the plenary session show that gross gate receipts for the nine junior series it took to decide a Memorial Cup champion amounted to $309,201.

Hammering Horace Rough on Oakland Athletics Bow To Yank Power

By The Canadian Press

Oakland manager Hank Bauer won't easily forget Horace Clarke after New York Yankees posted a 6-5 American League baseball win Wednesday over the Athletics.

Clarke, 28, a native of the Virgin Islands, accounted for half the New York run total and sparked a 14-hit New York assault with a double and three singles. He also stole three bases and raced across the plate from second base to score the winning run on Jerry Kenney's 11th-inning single.

Minnesota Twins stranded 11 base runners and fell 4-3 to Baltimore Orioles, Kansas City Royals trimmed Cleveland Indians 4-0, Seattle Pilots whipped Washington Senators 6-2 and Boston Red Sox won both ends of a doubleheader, 5-2 and 8-3, from California Angels in other American League games Chicago White Sox and Detroit Tigers were rained out at Chicago.

SEAVER SHARP

Tom Seaver silenced Atlanta on three hits and lowered his 1969 National League earned-run average to 1.96 as New York Mets tripped the Braves 5-0 in Atlanta.

Seaver, considered the leader of the Mets' pitching staff although only 24, collected his fifth consecutive victory and raised his record to 6-2.

Bob Moose of Pittsburgh and Claude Osteen of Los Angeles each gave up five hits as the Dodgers edged Chicago Cubs 3-1 and the Pirates clubbed San Diego Padres 11-1 on 15 hits.

In other games, San Francisco Giants nipped St. Louis Cardinals 4-3, Houston Astros downed Montreal Expos 3-2 and Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 6-5.

Seaver, since his winning streak started, has limited the opposition to only seven runs. He hasn't lost a game since April 25 and his only two defeats were 3-1 decisions to Bob Gibson of the Cardinals and the Cubs' Ferguson Jenkins.

Wednesday he retired 12 consecutive hitters during one stretch.

PITCHER ENDS THREAT

Frank Robinson tagged three hits as Baltimore grabbed a 4-2 lead against Minnesota's Dave Boswell. Then the Twins nicked Tom Phoebus for a run in the sixth and loaded the bases. But reliever Dave Leonhard got Tony Oliva to bounce into a force play at the plate and struck out Harmon Killebrew to end the threat.

In the eighth, Leonhard was knocked out by a walk and a single. Pete Richert relieved, struck out Ted Uhlaender and got Cesar Tovar to hit into a double play.

Minnesota left the bases loaded in the second and sixth innings as well.

Strong Display By Esquimalt A Forewarning

Tension continued to build today as high school athletes moved into the last round of qualifying eliminations for Friday's inter-scholastic track and field championships.

Expected to be the hottest high school track finale ever, things got even tighter Wednesday night as a dark horse Esquimalt team came through with a late surge to jam its way into a tense four team race for berths.

Mount Douglas, Victoria High and Claremont had established themselves as main contenders Tuesday night at Centennial Stadium.

But Wednesday, on the same track, Esquimalt the perennial also-ran surprised observers by replacing Vic High with the third greatest number of athletes qualified for final berths.

Oak Bay, once a prep track power, and Mount View are far behind in a tight race for last spot.

LANGDALE SPARKLES

Despite the sudden Esquimalt showing, Mt. Doug athletes continued to grab most of the lime-light.

Anne Langdale ran a blistering 58.1 to qualify for the girls' A flight 440, and that was without much competition, while slight Lindsay Jack led qualifying long jumpers with an 18'4¾" leap.

Bruce Fryer led the male quarter-milers home in the A flight event with a 51.9 clocking, and Penny May qualified for the shot in A flight competition with a heave of 34' 5½".

But Oak Bay's Dave Weicker ran an easy 4:25.7 mile, 15 seconds faster than his nearest competition, and three Esquimalt athletes, Cec Ferguson, Bruce Cowick and Pete Rushton led qualifiers in A flight javelin and discus.

TOPS IN RELAYS

In the relays, often crucial events as point earners go, Mt. Doug continued to dominate.

Two Mt. Doug teams qualified in the girls' 4x110 A flight, the first winning in a 49.9 clocking, and a boys' team won the A flight 4x110 in a time of 44.8, while a B flight team qualified at second.

Mt. Doug actually leads the four close high schools in terms of numbers of individual athletes qualified, with a total so far of 51, 31 in A flight, 20 in B flight.

But Claremont, in second place with a 48 total, has a healthy 28 athletes in points-rich A flight events, and many of them are favorites.

Esquimalt follows with 46 qualified and Vic High is right behind with 40. Oak Bay has 38, Mt. View 22.

Qualifying eliminations continued this afternoon at Centennial Stadium.

The championship round gets underway Friday at 10:30 a.m. on Centennial Stadium's fast all-weather track.

Troubled DePaula Draws Suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Light-heavyweight Frank DePaula, who was arrested by the FBI on a theft charge, was suspended today by the New York State Athletic Commission.

The suspension knocked the 28-year-old fighter out of a semi-final 10-round bout with Don Fullmer at Madison Square Garden.

The Garden then announced it was substituting Brazil's Juarez de Lima, the fifth ranking middleweight contender, against Fullmer, the No. 4 middleweight contender from West Jordan, Utah. Middleweight champion Nino Benvenuti of Italy meets Dick Tiger of Biafra in the main event, a non-title 10-rounder.

Also suspended was DePaula's manager and second, Gary Garafola of Jersey City, N.J., who was arrested on the same charge.

The manager and fighter, out on $25,000 bail, asserted their innocence at a hearing before the commission Wednesday.

The two had been arrested with three other men on charges of stealing $80,000 worth of copper bars in interstate shipment in 1968.

ANDRETTI'S $75,000 WRITE-OFF

Flying parts and smoke fill air as car driven by Mario Andretti (left) bounces off wall during Wednesday trial run at Indianapolis Speedway. Andretti suffered painful facial burns and $75,000 car —which had second fastest time of 171.789 m.p.h. —was complete write-off after bursting into flames. Car spinning at right is driven by Portland's Art Pollard. Despite burns, Andretti "will be ready" to race in annual Memorial Day 500-mile classic. Final time trials for race will be Saturday and Sunday. (AP Wirephoto, Copyright 1969, by Art Harris).

Hapless Lakers Tripped Again

Lake Cowichan continued to flounder in last place of Senior Amateur Baseball League standings Wednesday when they absorbed an 11-5 drubbing at the hands of Transport Workers.

Playing at Royal Athletic Park, Transports extended Lakers' winless streak to eight games as Cowichan pitchers Jim Jubenville and relief Joe Saysell were tagged for 13 hits.

Transports' Gordie Strongman had Laker hurling pegged best for the winners, and the pitcher lashed out a single, double and triple as well as combining efforts on the mound with Bob Mabee for a four-hitter.

John McKeachie and Bob Butcher, along with Strongman, drove in a total of six runs for the winners.

GAMES' COST FRIGHTENS GOVERNMENT

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — The northern Swedish town of Oestersund was ruled out Wednesday as a contender to stage the 1976 Winter Olympic Games when the government rejected its application for state financial backing.

The town had estimated the total cost of playing host to the event would be about $40,000,000, of which the state would have to contribute about $25,000,000.

The government said in a communique that the investment was not warranted.

Applications to stage the 1976 Winter Games have been made by Canada, Switzerland, Finland and the United States.

HARNESS TRACK DROPS TUESDAY NIGHT RACES

LADNER (CP) — Tuesday night harness racing at Paterson Park in Ladner, just south of Vancouver, has been cancelled in a cutback to two days of racing per week.

Al Grillo, general manager of the track, says the cutback was made "mainly to keep up the calibre of racing." There are more than 250 horses at the park, but many are not yet ready for racing because of severe winter weather here and on the Prairies.

Racing will continue on Thursdays and Saturdays.

Four Events Top City Net Season

A total of 19 sanctioned tennis tournaments will be played in the province this season.

The British Columbia Lawn Tennis Association fixtures include six for Vancouver, four in Victoria, two in West Vancouver, two in Nelson and one each in Richmond, Kelowna, North Vancouver, Cowichan and New Westminster.

Two events in Richmond and Nelson were played earlier this month. The B.C. Public Parks championships, the largest tournament in Canada, will be played at Stanley Park in Vancouver, starting May 28.

The tournament schedule winds up with the Pacific Northwest Invitational Doubles at Victoria Racquet Club Sept. 6 and 7.

The BCLTA is composed of 29 member clubs

Tournament schedule:

May 28-June 8 — B.C. Public Parks, Stanley Park, Vancouver.
June 21-28 — Vancouver and district, Jericho Club.
June 26-29—Pacific junior regionals, Victoria.
July 1-5 — Vancouver district junior, Arbutus Club.
July 3-6—B.C. Interior championships, Kelowna.
July 5-12—Victoria city championships, Victoria.
July 5-12 — North Vancouver Parks championships, North Vancouver.
Aug. 4-10—B.C. Senior and Pacific Northwest championships, Victoria.
Aug. 4-9—B.C. junior clay court championships, Jericho Club.
Aug. 10—Canadian Pacific International junior matches, Stanley Park.
Aug. 11-16—Vancouver Island championships and PNW sectionals, Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club.
Aug. 11-15—B.C. junior closed championships, West Vancouver.
Aug. 18-23—Western Canadian championships, Vancouver LTC.
Aug. 18-23 — PNW junior sectionals, Portland.
Aug. 16-17 and 23-24—New Westminster district open, New Westminster.
Aug. 30-Sept. 1—Far West Junior and Senior Vets, West Vancouver.
Aug. 30-Sept. 1—West Kootenay championships, Nelson.
Sept. 6-7—PNW Invitational doubles, Victoria.

ESSEN, Germany (UPI) — West Germany trounced Cyprus, 12-0, Wednesday night for a runaway victory in a Soccer Cup qualification playoff game.

Juniors Scramble For City Honors

The throne is vacant, and a flock of eager challengers step away Saturday in an effort to reign over Victoria's junior golfers.

The 36-hole City Junior title test will be held at Uplands Golf Club.

Trophies and prizes are at stake in two divisions. Top threats, on the basis of handicaps, will compete for the main championship while higher-handicapped juniors will vie for a "B" championship.

Also at stake will be berths on the 10-man team which will compete against Vancouver in the annual home-and-home, inter-city series. The champion and nine lowest scorers will be named to the team.

Saturday's draw:

Canadiens Sign Ruel; Canucks Still Dealing

(Times News Services)

Claude Ruel, who led Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup and National Hockey League east division title in his first season as coach, has signed for next season.

General manager Sam Pollock, in announcing the signing Wednesday, said Ruel received a "substantial raise" but contract terms were not revealed.

Pollock also told a news conference Montreal is negotiating with Ken Dryden of Toronto, star goaltender with Cornell University. Ken, 21, is due to graduate soon and must decide between a pro hockey or a law career. He is a brother of Dave, a Chicago Black Hawks' goalie.

Another matter that remains under negotiation is Canadiens bid to operate an American Hockey League franchise in Montreal next winter. Pollock said AHL owners will decide following a special league meeting next Wednesday.

EASIER THIS TIME

Pollock said it was easier to sign Ruel this time than to his initial contract last year.

"Last year he was replacing Toe Blake, who had the greatest coaching record in the history of hockey. Now he goes into his second year with a league championship and a Stanley Cup."

The pounding Ruel took in reaching the league title and the Stanley Cup had left him a bundle of nerves. He had even let it be known that he would almost welcome a relief from the job. However, a few weeks rest since the end of the season has left him eager for another season.

WARD TRADED

Vancouver Canucks also were busy Wednesday, completing their second two-for-one deal in less than 24 hours.

The Western League team dealt defenceman Ron Ward to Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL for Brad Selwood and Rene Robert. Ward, 24, played with Rochester Americans last season while Selwood and Robert, both 21, campaigned with Tulsa Oilers in the Central League.

Earlier this week, Vancouver gave up centre Bryan Hextall to Pittsburgh Penguins in exchange for two players to be named after next month's NHL draft. Hextall, 28, was Canucks' leading scorer last season.

Ron Murphy, 36-year-old winger, created other hockey news when he advised Boston Bruins that he plans to retire. Murphy's decision was prompted by shoulder problems.

Young Rocks Draw Power From Somners

A few more Somners may help Tom Collett to enjoy his first summer in the Inter-City Junior Lacrosse League.

Coach of Victoria's junior Shamrocks, Collett had high praise for brothers Dennis and Tom Somner although the team dropped its first game, 14-12, to New Westminster Salmonbellies in the mainland centre last weekend.

Despite the loss, Collett feels Victoria will rate as "serious contenders" for junior honors.

Dennis scored five goals and assisted on five others while Tom collected a pair of goals. Murray Murault, with three goals, and Jindy Johl, with a pair, scored Victoria's other goals.

The Rocks play two more road games before making their home debut at Memorial Arena. Victoria visists Vancouver Legion this Sunday and then plays in Burnaby on June 1.

Hollick Tops Second Week

Bill Hollick is No. 2 on the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association's list of weekly trophy winners.

Hollick topped the second-week list by landing a 19-pound, one-ounce salmon. First-week winner was Ken Smith, who weighed in a 22½-pounder.

Hidden-weight winners for the second week were Len Mahaffey, Richard O'Neil and Rose Cove.

Veteran Bob Redgrave topped the Chinook Club's sunburn derby with a catch of 8¾ pounds. Lil Walton was runner-up with a 7:11 salmon, while Mahaffey finished third

BRAWLING MARS PLAYOFF

NEWCASTLE - UPON - TYNE, England (AP) — Twenty-two persons were injured in wild fighting on the field which interrupted a semi-final soccer match in the Inter Cities Fair Cup Wednesday night.

Police reinforcements were called to separate followers of Newcastle United and Glasgow Rangers, who had broken up the match three times. During the final wild melee, Welsh referee James Gow sent both teams to the dressing rooms to keep them from being hurt.

One policeman suffered a neck injury. Six ambulances carted the injured to the hospital in relays.

The score at the time of the suspension was 2-0 with Newcastle ahead. The game was the return leg of the semi-final home-and-away series. The first leg in Glasgow a week ago ended in a scoreless tie. Gow kept the players off the field for 17 minutes while police restored order. Then the game was resumed for the final 10 minutes while policemen with dogs patrolled the edge of the field to keep it from being invaded again.

No Unrest for Engineers Because Courses Relevant

You can count most engineering students out of the current student unrest on North American campuses.

The reason?

Engineering students find their courses more meaningful in terms of the kind of function they will have in society.

That's the opinion of Dr. William Everitt, dean emeritus of the faculty of engineering, University of Illinois.

Dr. Everitt was in Victoria Wednesday to visit friends after he gave the inaugural address at the opening of a new engineering building at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"For the most part the engineering students have felt a relevancy for what they are doing."

VALUES NOT REFLECTED

He said students in the humanities are more discontent than their colleagues in the sciences—because the values implicit in their courses are not reflected in the way the universities and other institutions are run

"Among liberal and fine arts students you find a lot of recruits for the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society), because there is a certain lack of meaning to their studies—there's a feeling of despair."

The dean had mixed feelings about the end result of present turmoil on campuses, but was generally optimistic.

"Some of it is dangerous, but on the other hand the students are more alive than they used to be."

Dr. Everitt, 69, was dean of the engineering faculty from 1950 to December, 1968.

INVENTED ALTIMETER

He is also a former head of the department of electrical engineering at the Urbana campus of the University of Illinois, and his inventions include contributions to automotive telephony, a radio altimeter for aircraft, and a directional antenna system.

He is chairman of the telecommunications committee of the National Academy of Engineering, which is concerned with the uses of telecommunications in improverished communities, such as the computer in education of ghetto children.

Dr Everitt said engineering has changed from a "learned profession" before the Second World War to a "learning profession" in the post-war years.

"Before the war the engineer was an expert who used to work with a slide rule—but recent developments, in transistors and computers for example, have forced engineers to become familiar with a whole new gamut of concepts."

NEW ROLE

An example of the engineer's new role is a project carried out at Urbana where engineers worked with brain surgeons to develop an instrument that would eliminate the scalpel from certain operations.

The instrument was designed to project sound waves through the skull to destroy some kind of disagreeable brain matter.

Illinois engineers are also engaged in a project entitled PLATO, which involves adapting computers to teaching.

"Some people shudder at the idea of using computers in teaching, but it actually leaves the teacher free to do something more important.

"The computer has infinite patience."

U.S. Warships Visit Here

Two United States Navy destroyers, USS Fechteler and USS Picking, arrived in Esquimalt today for a four-day visit.

The Fechteler, commanded by Commander Lawrence A. Dwyer, carries 18 officers and 248 men; the Picking, commanded by Commander John McAlevy, carries 18 officers and 210 men.

The ships will be open to the public Saturday from 1-4 p.m.

'Straight to Hell' For Separate Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Wednesday that separation would lead Quebec "straight to hell."

In a speech to a service club, Mr. Caouette said policies advocated by Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, would leave the province bankrupt within a few years.

"If Mr. Levesque ever takes over in Quebec," he said, "you can be sure that he will be asking for help from the United States—and he will be asking in English."

The federal politician said Canada's problem is not one of languages, but of money.

WAS THE FIRST

Camels were the first animals domesticated by man.

Before the Magistrate

A man who pleaded guilty Tuesday in central court to his third charge of impaired driving was sentenced to four months in jail.

Wilfred D. Philibert, 1600 Keating Cross Road, was also given an additional 10 days when he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had previous convictions in November, 1968, and September, 1967, for which he was jailed 21 days and fined $350 respectively.

Magistrate William Ostler also prohibited Philibert from driving for 18 months.

Langford Drywall Ltd., 744 Meaford, was fined the minimum of $200 after pleading guilty to an income tax infraction. Court was told the company failed to remit $1,297.35 to the Receiver General of Canada in January, 1969.

The money was deducted from employees in December 1968.

Edward G. Helgesen, 6484 Sooke, was fined $250 for hit and run. He pleaded guilty.

In traffic court Keith Ashton, 446 Moss, was fined $350 for impaired driving. Thomas Bridges, 1742 Albert, was fined $300 for the same offence.

Ambrose Macquina, 2178 Rock Bay, was fined $150 for hit and run.

A man who damaged $150 worth of furniture belonging to a woman who no longer wanted his attentions was described as "emotionally crippled" Wednesday in central court.

Robert Clarke, 26, of 1621 Old Island Highway, pleaded guilty to committing mischief and was remanded to May 29 for sentence. Pre-sentence and psychiatric reports are to be prepared.

Court was told Clarke tore tapestry from the wall of the woman's house, threw a television, record player and tape recorder to the floor, pushed her violently towards the fireplace and smashed an aluminum door.

She had previously attempted to break off a two-year relationship with the accused. He suffered a badly-cut hand in the incident.

"One wonders about the responsibility of one so emotionally crippled," said Magistrate William Ostler.

He blamed the incident on "liquor and an inability to accept a reverse in an affair of the heart."

An American youth who several weeks ago told the magistrate it was only coincidence his name was the same as a well-known jockey was jailed a month for giving a false name to immigration officials.

James A. Trigg, 19, also known as Carlos M. Nieves, pleaded guilty to a breach of the immigration act.

He was jailed for 10 days earlier this month for obtaining lodgings by false pretences. Investigation of his entry to the country revealed his other name, court was told.

Magistrate Ostler noted the man lied to the court on his earlier appearance.

Trigg said today he came from Indiana. Previously identification was produced in court which said he was from California.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Trigg was in the U.S. marine corps and was a deserter.

"There must be a deterrent to people abusing the hospitality of the country and lying to immigration officials," said the magistrate.

He at first sentenced Trigg to 10 days but changed it after Macintyre said the act provided for a minimum jail term of a month.

Gerry Evans, 2829 Knotty Pine, was fined $350 for being impaired while in care and control of a vehicle. Jerry Thomas, 1105 Admirals, was jailed seven days for driving while suspended.

Balloonist To Be Tied For City Show

Up, up and away — at least to the end of his tether — will rise Canada's only licensed hot air balloonist Stanley Sheldrake in a demonstration at Hillside Shopping Centre Monday.

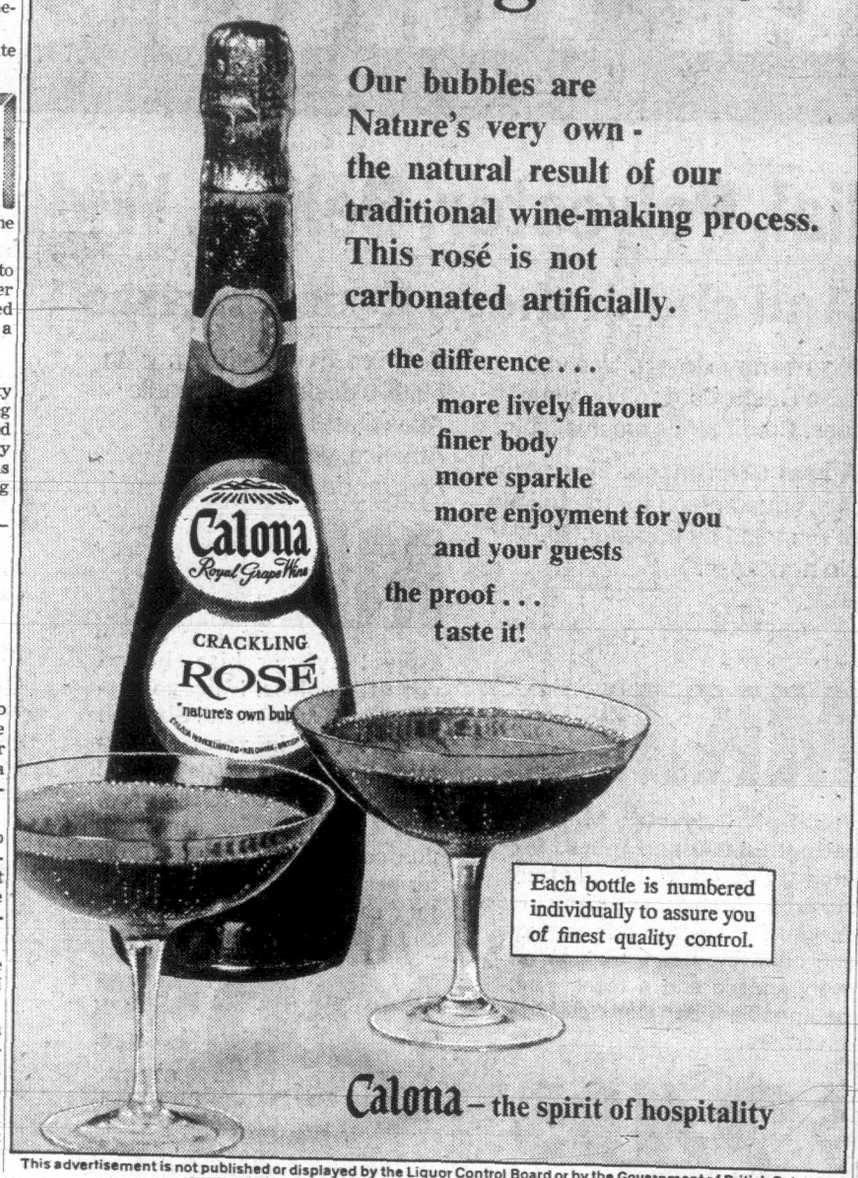

The 31-year-old pilot, who makes life insurance his business, will go aloft in a 150-foot diameter balloon inflated by the air from propane-burning generators at 4:30 p.m.

Sponsors of the flight are Koratron Co. of Canada and 3M Company.

The flight will be logged with Victoria airport and radio communication will be maintained with the aircraft control tower.

Although Sheldrake is licensed to make free flights, the craft will be tied to earth for its Victoria engagement.

Rhodesian Draft Constitution Guarantees White Domination

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (Reuters) — The government of this breakaway British colony published a new draft constitution Wednesday aimed at ensuring the political dominance of the white minority of the population.

The draft also discarded proposals for entrenched safeguards of political rights of the black majority, a crucial issue in the colony's long dispute with Britain.

The constitution will be submitted to a national referendum June 20, along with proposals to finally end Rhodesia's anomalous legal position by declaring itself a republic.

Rhodesia declared independence Nov. 11, 1965, after failing to agree with Britain on the political future of 4,500,000 Africans ruled by 220,000 whites.

Attempts to settle the dispute have foundered on British insistence that the blacks should eventually achieve full political powers and that there should be safeguards against the whites amending the constitution to defeat the objective of majority rule.

A preamble to the proposals published today said the government believes a constitution proclaimed after independence no longer is acceptable because it contains a reference to eventual majority rule and does not guarantee the government will remain in responsible hands.

Except for proposals about entrenched protection against constitutional amendments, the draft published today followed closely a blueprint drawn up by the governing Rhodesian Front party early this year.

It basically provided for separate voter lists of Africans and non-Africans, a 23-member multi-racial Senate and a 66-member lower house that would have 50 white and 16 Africans to begin with.

Changes in the makeup of the lower house would depend on the economic progress of the Africans. But natives could never form more than half the house.

The original Rhodesian Front constitutional proposals suggested that certain clauses of the constitution could only be amended by a two-thirds vote in both lower house and Senate.

The new draft would allow one-third of the Senate to delay a constitutional change for 180 days, but after that it could be passed if half the Senate approved.

Play 'Ruddy Insult'

By DON MacLACHLAN

KELOWNA (CP) — Adjudicator Pierre Lefevre had some advice for the Woodstock, Ont., Little Theatre following its presentation of the play Tango at the Dominion Drama Festival finals Wednesday night.

He told the group:

"It was as if the play was chosen in order to say the theatre no longer exists: To my mind, if you're going to do that, choose a bad play, but don't say it with a good play."

The play, by Slawomir Mrozek, was a three-hour mishmash of psychedelia and disco-techniques

Its garbled bag of effects included color slides, flashing lights, a go-go band, recitation of quick-sick jokes a la Rowan and Martin and a topless actress. The cast and crew had invited the audience to take a theatrical trip but for some the only trip they took was away from the community theatre before the play was over.

Tonight there's another experimental offering, Theatre 1—We Are Not Yet Born, a bilingual play improvised by a largely French-speaking cast from Montreal Theatre one, the Quebec zone winner.

SETS TONE

The Woodstock crew, selected as the Ontario winner by Marigold Charlesworth, set the tone by draping more than 100 feet of inflated plastic tube, three feet in diameter, over the outside of the theatre.

Then members of the audience entered to find an inflated green plastic garbage bag on each seat. Cast and crew sat on the stage watching the reactions, in an attempt to make the audience the cast and the cast the audience.

Several members of the audience left after the first intermission. More left after the second, one woman complaining: "It's a ruddy insult to a person's intelligence."

Some suggested the production went wrong on the road, some said it was limited by not being in an "arena theatre" as it was in regional competition.

WRITING GOOD

Mr. Lefevre said that as far as the writing goes, it's the best play of the six in the finals. But, he added to applause, as a play "it was completely swamped by tonight's production."

He praised Brian Leadbetter as Stomil for "terrific presence."

"I admire his work all the more because he was swimming against a morass, an avalanche, a deluge of effects."

He also praised Edythe Smith as Eugenia, and said Elaine Reed as Ala acted well in places. She appeared topless at one stage, the first such appearance in a DDF final series

Mrozek uses a series of techniques to question values of the past and present.

The young and "square" Arthur (Edward Theobald) attempts to impose traditional standards on his bohemian parents and family only to be killed, leaving violence triumphant.

"I came here," said Mr. Lefevre, "to communicate with that extraordinary man Mrozek. I was forbidden the pleasure."

Head-on Crash By CN Trains; Crewmen Killed

CAMPBELLTON, N.B. (CP) — Bodies of two crew members were removed today from twisted wreckage of two Canadian National Railways trains that collided head-on late Wednesday at nearby Point a la Garde, Que.

The men were identified as Dave Fitzgerald of Campbellton and Finley Sinclair of New Carlisle, Que., firemen aboard the trains.

A CNR spokesman said two passengers and three crew members had been admitted to hospital, none on serious condition. Another 15 of the 50 persons aboard the eight-car passenger train and five crew members were treated at hospital and released.

Cancer Institute Plans Extension

VANCOUVER (CP) — A planned expansion of the British Columbia Cancer Institute originally estimated to cost $2,500,000 in 1968 will be carried out his year at a cost of $2,850,000, H. M. Gale, retiring president, told the foundation's annual meeting Wednesday night.

Revised plans are awaiting approval by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Services, he said.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1969 —PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

Last week I suggested that unlimited leisure can prove more of a curse than a blessing. The result has been a mixed bag of agreement from Victorians who find time hanging heavy, and disagreement from others for whom the days aren't long enough.

Miss D. Moore, address general delivery, belongs to the second group.

"I fear you have missed the point re leisure," she writes. "One never retires. He may quit his paying job, but that doesn't retire him. You have overlooked hobbies and interests."

She goes on to state that she gave up her job well before she was 65, "and I've never lived such an occupied, interesting life."

A letter a day is one of her sustainers. Another is a two-mile daily walk.

Good for her say I, and for all other young-minded pensioners who refuse to let retirement daunt them! But Miss Moore ignores my main point, which is that enforced retirement for the vigorous man in his forties can be one of life's cruelest burdens.

In rare instances, a man in this spot may turn a hobby to profitable use and rescue himself. For most, this escape-hatch is not open.

"It's rough on the self-respect," one unwillingly retired man told me. And another, "Being without a job makes me feel smaller."

We can't look to government for all our answers. But I wish that government would spend less concern on the able-bodied man who won't work, and more on the guy who asks only the chance.

A check-up call to Jack Wasserman, admired Sun columnist and radio open-liner, confirms that he will be losing his CJOR 9 a.m.-to-noon spot about mid-June.

Into what has been Wasserman's air-time these many months will step bull-voiced Pat Burns, whom I last heard on Montreal's CKGM.

"There's a suggestion," Wasserman told me dryly, "that Burns was too volatile for that volatile area."

Wasserman's CJOR contract doesn't run out until the end of the year. He intends to honor it, even though not yet sure how the station proposes to use his talents.

I'm sorry about the change that will see urbane, sharply intelligent and firmly ethical Jack Wasserman shoved over to make room for Burns.

As a columnist, Jack shines brightest, but he has been running a thoroughly civilized show. A lot of listeners who prefer the civilized approach are going to miss him if he's denied program space.

One day a couple of weeks ago, 14-year-old Jim Walters of 908 Alexander Street found a baby robin that had tumbled out of some nearby nest.

Jim, who goes to Esquimalt junior secondary, nestled the young one in his hands, and searched for its home tree.

When he failed to find it, he took the fledgling home and assumed the role of substitute parent.

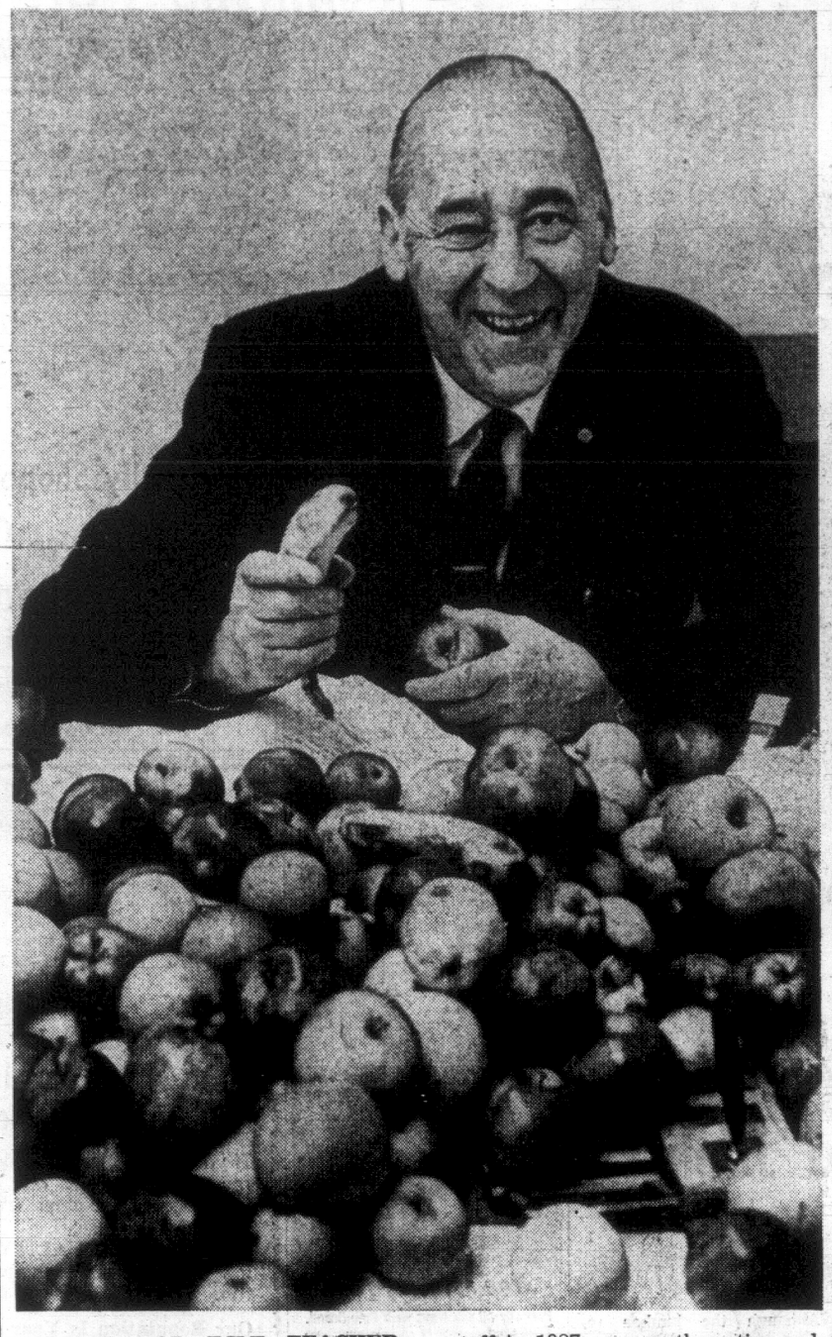

He made a nest by rolling a scrap of wire screen into a cylinder. This he lined with soft odds and ends. Then, after naming the robin Wilbur, he went off to dig worms for it in the family garden.

A couple of days later, the mother robin turned up with a worm of her own. From that point, the feeding of Wilbur became a shared project.

"We'd always believed that this sort of thing didn't happen," said Jim's mother, Mrs. Margaret Walters. "But it went on every day, and toward the end it became pretty competitive.

A couple of times last week, Wilbur followed his mother on short, earth-bound excursions, from which he returned to his 'nest'.

Finally he discovered that wings are to use, and mother and fledgling took to the air together. They haven't been back, to Jim's regret. At the same time, he's mighty pleased that he and the mother between them managed to get Wilbur air-borne.

APPLES FOR THE TEACHER came in by the hundreds this morning when Esquimalt Senior Secondary School students, organized by Grade 12 student Ian Langejan, found their own way of honoring principal Clive E. Kelly, 2760 Roseberry Avenue. Kelly has spent all his teaching career at the school, joining the staff in 1927 as a mathematics and science teacher. He retires at the end of the school year after being principal for about 30 years. The bumper apple harvest took Kelly by surprise. He went on the intercom to announce that he'd "probably set up a shop so that students could buy them back!" —(Times photo by Bill Halkett).

100 Families on List Before Homes Start

Chant Wields Spade In Ground-Breaking

With ground-breaking ceremonies scheduled for the Rose-Blanshard housing scheme Monday the accommodation waiting list already surpasses the 100 mark.

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant will wield the golden shovel at 11 a.m. Monday to get the $2.4 million housing construction under way.

But the 184 housing units contractor George Wheaton hopes to have ready for occupancy in less than a year will not end the housing crisis in Victoria.

In fact, judging by the volume of inquiries and requests for accommodation flooding into city hall, the 184 modern units will hardly cause a dint in the long list of families seeking a place to live.

Officially city hall is not yet inviting applicants for homes to list their names. But city manager Dennis Young said this morning that the volume of calls had necessitated the compiling of at least a temporary list.

With between 30 and 40 housing units already committed to displaced families and 59 names added as of today the city hall list now totals 99 inquiries or positive applications.

Young stressed that the city will not control the allocation of the accommodations once the project is completed.

"That headache, and we expect it to be a major one, will belong to the B.C. Housing Management Commission," Young said. "A local branch of the commission has not yet been established but it will be in the not too distant future.

"It will be its responsibility to get applications and decide just who gets the accommodation."

He added that the city list is probably just one of three being compiled.

"I don't doubt that the provincial government and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation are getting similar inquiries or requests for accommodation," he said. "I'm sure that long before the houses are completed the list will be well over the 184 units to be made available."

INFORMATION ONLY

The city hall list is being compiled, Young said, for information purposes only.

"There is nothing we can do but keep a record of the names of the families inquiring," he said. "Eventually an official application form will be drawn up and the people on all lists will be sent a copy of the form.

"From that point on the local housing management group will decide who gets priority."

Young said it would have been easier for the city to tell home seekers that they were applying to the wrong authority.

"But that seemed rather cold-blooded," he said. "We treat each caller with courtesy, explain our position, take their names and drop them a note telling them that their names have now been officially recorded to receive an application form."

MORE LISTS?

Young added that he presumed CMHC and the provincial authorities were following similar procedures.

When the project officially gets under way next week CMHC representatives and Mayor Hugh Stephen will be on hand for the sod-turning ceremony.

As soon as the golden spade is removed Wheaton will move his heavy equipment onto the site to commence actual construction of an urban renewal program three-years in the melting pot.

At the peak of activity Wheaton said he anticipates having around 100 craftsmen on the job with the target for the first homes to be ready for occupancy Jan 1, 1970.

From the start the main target will be complete framing and roofing of all units before the weather breaks in the fall. Such a mass construction move will permit interior work to continue through the fall rains and winter weather.

It is anticipated that between 20 and 40 units will be available to the first families towards the end of December.

Monday's ground-breaking ceremonies will be held at Hillside and Blanshard.

Total cost of the construction program is borne by the federal and provincial governments with Ottawa paying 75 per cent of the cost.

Operating costs are carried by three levels of government with the federal government again picking up 75 per cent of the tab while the province and the city share the remaining 25 per cent.

Kiernan Shrug Over Bottles Angers Elford

Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford today said Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan "misses the point completely" about her proposal for fighting litter with mandatory deposits on all beverage containers.

She drafted an Oak Bay resolution passed recently by the Vancouver Island Association of Municipalities which was shrugged off by Kiernan Wednesday as unenforceable and useless.

In answer Mrs. Elford claimed there was virtually no litter problem in years past when bottled drinks had a two-cent returnable deposit because children would scour the countryside to pick up the discarded ones.

"But nowadays two cents a bottle doesn't attract them and the answer is to make it mandatory at a realistic figure —five cents on all bottles and 2½ cents on all beverages in cans," she said.

NEEDS A TRY

"This certainly could be done by legislation and since the litter problem will grow I think it certainly deservies a try by the minister."

Mrs. Elford also quarreled with Kiernan's contention that even if non-returnable bottles could be eliminated it still wouldn't end the major litter problem posed by discarded cigarette and confection wrappers.

"No child cuts his foot on cigarette wrappers on the beach," she said.

"And it's a known fact these non-returnable bottles are poorer quality so they break more easily."

She said the alternative to an economic incentive for return of empty bottles and cans to the sellers is raising property taxes to pay for cleaning up increasing litter of public areas.

"And a study shows that it cost 30 cents to pick up one container because of the staff costs," she said.

ROYAL VISIT to Victoria will be made June 3 by Australian beauty queen Suzanne McClelland, 20, of Perth. Her visit here will be a side-trip during a Vancouver stay June 2 to June 5. Her title is Miss Australia.

BURNING MATCHES DROPPED THROUGH WINDOW OF CAR

A car fire in the city Wednesday night is believed to have been deliberately set.

About $200 damage was done to the front seat of the vehicle owned by Tom Curtis who parked outside S. J. Willis School where he was attending a meeting. The fire was reported about 10:30 p.m.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said the driver's window was down about an inch and someone had dropped several burning matches on the seat. Curtis doesn't smoke, he said.

Simon Fraser Grads Include 17 Islanders

There are 17 Vancouver Island residents among more than 600 students receiving degrees at convocation ceremonies Saturday at Simon Fraser University.

The ceremonies mark the end of the seven-year chancellorship of Dr. Gordon M. Shrum who retires this month.

He will be succeeded by Kenneth P. Caple.

Dr. Shrum will confer degrees on five Victoria residents. Lorne Eugene Ellingson, 1035 Belmont, will receive his master of arts degree.

SHUTDOWN IN WEEK SEEN BY LOCAL SUPERMARKETS

A supermarket spokesman today said Greater Victoria supermarkets could be shut down in a week.

"We fear, anticipate, expect" that the meatcutters of the Food and Allied Worders' Union will serve strike notice on 14 area supermarkets operated by Safeway, Super-Valu and Shop Easy.

The meatcutters are demanding their 40-hour week be shortened to a four-day, 36-hour week and a $1 an hour increase on the current $3.80 journeyman rate.

Discussions between the union, representing 700 Vancouver employees and 125 Victoria employees, broke down Tuesday and the union served strike notice on a Food Fair in Richmond. Food Fair is a Shop Easy operation.

LOCK-OUT NOTICE

The supermarket companies replied to the threat by serving lockout notice on all Vancouver-area employees.

The strike in Richmond is scheduled to begin at 4:15 p.m. Friday, the lockout can start at 11:20 Saturday.

The stores say they are confining the lockout to the mainland because the strike is being confined to the mainland.

George Johnston, secretary-manager of the meatcutters, warned that this situation could change rapidly.

"At the moment Victoria is not involved in the lockout because we have not given strike notice there," he said in an interview. "But these things change from hour to hour."

SUPPORT CLAIMED

He said his union has "general support" from the teamsters as well as full support from the Retail Food and Drug Clerks, Bakery and Confectionary Workers and Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees.

That was sufficient to close any store struck by the meatcutters.

The supermarket spokesman, a senior Safeway executive in Vancouver, said Johnston has been so busy setting up the Vancouver strike this week that he has had not time to consider similar action in Victoria.

Whether Victoria will see a corresponding lockout of meatcutters "depends entirely on union strategy," said the spokesman.

The stores were prepared to meet "the challenge of the union" in Victoria in the same way they were meeting it on the mainland.

"But you have a week's breathing space, maybe more," he said.

The union claims the stores broke off negotiations and Johnston says he is willing to enter talks but the stores must make the initial approach.

The stores see it differently. They say Johnston entered the meeting last Tuesday and said that if the stores were not prepared to grant the 36-hour week immediately, further talks were futile.

University Fee Jump 'Not Needed'

Education Minister Donald Brothers today said he doesn't see any reason for increases in university tuition fees next fall.

He added that he had been in touch with University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University officials this week "and they have not even considered any increase in fees."

But he told reporters here he still hasn't asked University of B.C about its plans for fees.

Brothers said it was ridiculous for anyone to argue that the province's total $65 million operating grants for the three universities in the coming year represented any cutback.

$12 MILLION MORE

"I think it should be pointed out that is $12 million more than the previous total grant, so I don't see how anyone can say the universities are being short-changed," he said.

"Regarding the increase in fees — I see no need for it."

He was answering reporters queries regarding Opposition Leader Tom Berger's claim he knew the breakdown of the still-secret allocation of the grant to the three campuses would force UBC to raise its tutition fees.

United States Warships Here

Two American naval destroyers steamed into Esquimalt harbor this morning and will be docked in HMCS Dockyard until Monday.

The ships are USS Fechteler and USS Picking. Both are attached to Destroyer Division 192, based at Long Beach, Calif. and have crews of 266 and 228.

Both ships will be open to the public Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. in HMC Dockyard.

Dry Forests Pose Continuing Hazard

The forest fire situation "remains serious throughout the province" today.

A forest service spokesman said the hazard rating ranges from moderate to extreme in all parts of B.C. except the south-east corner of the Kootenays.

A total of 131 fires were burning in the B.C. Woods at press time and more than 600 men were fighting the flames.

They quelled 43 fires overnight but 33 new ones broke out at the same time.

Vancouver forest district, which includes Vancouver Island, reported 22 fires burning today including four new ones.

Largest fire on the Island, west of Cowichan Lake, was "contained" Wednesday afternoon after burning through 450 acres and some 75 men were mopping it up this morning, the spokesman said.

ENTHUSIASM of girls drumming up interest in their drum corps is demonstrated by Cathie Jacob, Donna Kendall, Wendy Marshall and Kelly Searle, from left. They are getting ready for a Wake-a-thon. They'll sit in a store window in Town and Country Shopping Centre, starting Friday at 8 a.m. and endeavor to stay awake until backers have contributed $3,000 to buy a bus. The bus will take their Thunderbird Corps on trips, during which they can all sleep. Bidders may back the girls by phoning 479-5551 and offering donations on a per-hour basis. (Times photo).

Farewell Party Has B.C. Theme

By PENNY SAVER

Dear Aunt Penny, I wonder if you can help me. Some friends of ours are moving to your part of the world in about a month and I am planning a farewell party for them. I have some old posters I picked up last time I was on the coast showing all sorts of scenes from B.C., so I thought I would use them as a basis and make B.C. the theme of all the decorations. Believe it or not I am becoming very adept at making paper dogwoods! I've planned a sit down dinner (salmon is the main course) and wondered if you could find me some B.C. type table decorations — place mats and such — and maybe some B.C. type note paper for the invitations. Enclosed is a money order for $10 which should cover everything. Forget the change. Oh, best I not forget to tell you how many to buy! There will be 20 of us in all.

We are all reasonably healthy except for Bobby who managed to catch the chicken pox. Needless to say with an itchy child on my hands I've done nothing newsworthy at all except teach him to make flowers. Hope things have been more exciting at your end of the continent. Lots of love, Maggie.

Dear Maggie: Mission accomplished! Enclosed are 24 placemats and 20 notes (two to goof on since you and Mark won't need to be invited). This left $2 over from your $10 so I have sent a dogwood pin for the wife. Forget the difference.

No Problem With Placemats

Deciding which placemats to buy was no problem at all. These had just come out on the market and were really too good to pass up. As you can see they are sketches of Victoria scenes by Victoria artist Peggy Walton Packard. The note papers I have sent are part of the same series and other artists are represented though I think most, if not all, the ones I have chosen for your party are by Mrs. Packard. These paper placemats come in packages of six for $1.50 and as you can see come in a variety of background colors. The house is Fable Cottage — you really should have seen it when you were here last! — the Tally-Ho you will recognise, while the dogwoods are self explaining. The sailboat is the Maruffa —quite a well-known craft in these waters! Your guests may want to keep them as souvenirs — if they eat neatly.

The note paper gave me a few bad moments. I finally decided to buy the sketches because they complement the placemats. As you can see some are Victoria scenes while others are about boats. Since you live in Halifax you must have some boat-minded friends. The packages of 10 notes with envelopes in the little plastic case are $1 each.

I chose these over some at the same price that had photographs of B.C. scenery on them. I was tempted—so I hope you approve of my choice. Also in the running, but eliminated for numerical reasons, were notes by Priddit at 8 notes for $1. These showed paintings of Victoria scenes and are very, very nice. They come in postcards, too, at 10 cents each. Have a wonderful party and tell your friends to come and meet us when they arrive! Love, Aunt Penny.

(If you would like to know where Penny found these placemats and notes, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.)

TRY THIS — By PAULINE GRAVES

Use Old Scraps and Junk To Build Jig-Saw Wall

When you see an imaginative use of odds and ends, such as this stunning wall, by decorators Hamilton-Howe, it makes one vow never to discard any item, no matter how useless it seems. The trouble with this theory is that you can fill your garage, attic or basement with junk, and never get around to putting it to work.

However, every building or remodelling leaves pieces of lumber, and after those which promise future shelving, storage or built-ins are salvaged the remaining culls usually are consigned to a fire. But here, those scraps, regardless of size, shapes or texture, cover a den wall. Their very irregularity creates design.

Assembling the wall is like putting together a gigantic jig-saw puzzle, except that the pattern is not worked out in advance, and the pieces can be cut to fit. There is a certain amount of balance in that the types of wood should be varied. In other words, narrow pieces, two and three inches thick, are interspersed with broad boards, one inch thick and six to ten inches wide.

Although the lumber remains rough, a thin wash of white gives a semblance of uniformity, yet permitting the grain to show through. Note, too, that the pieces do not fit together precisely. Instead, the joints, of varying widths, add to the pattern and texture.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Should He Know? —Maybe Not!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How dare you advise a woman whose conscience is tormenting her because she cheated on her husband not to tell him?

If you don't know that the foundation of all good marriages is complete honesty, then you ought to confine your advice to teenagers.

You told that woman to confess to her God—to her clergyman—to a dear friend, but not to her husband. He is the one she should confess to!

I hope you will reconsider and retract your advice to this poor woman. You gave her very bad advice.—Roger.

DEAR ROGER: Sorry, but unless a woman is reasonably certain that hers is a mature, forgiving, and understanding man, she'd be better off keeping her bazoo shut.

DEAR ABBY: I'm with you! All "confessions" are not good. At age 55 I am still awakened—sometimes at 4 o'clock in the morning—to hear my husband cursing me because of a past intimacy with another man. This took place long before I even met my husband, but I foolishly "confessed" all, and now he insists that I have sinned against him—when I didn't even know him.

I would advise women who have husbands like mine to try to tune him out. Don't listen, don't answer, and don't try to apologize or explain. Leave the room. Sleep on the couch if necessary. (I did, last night.) Consider it just another headache.

My husband is fine when he isn't harping on this one subject—which is like a sickness with him—and I comfort myself by reasoning that my love for him is greater than his love for me. I am not going to crack up, and I am not going to leave him. Statistics tell me that I'll be alone soon enough.—Sorry I Talked.

Memo to Faculty: Students Are Expendable

In medieval Italy, when students got out of hand, they were required to wear scarlet robes which made them recognizable to all.

This was one of the remedies for student unrest, described by writer and broadcaster James M. Minifie Wednesday.

He spoke on The Care and Treatment of Student Violence at the annual meeting of the University Women's Club.

Minifie said the scarlet robes were useful to police.

"The police were then able to apprehend students and consign them to prison, or the church could consign them to hell. We now lack the recourse of hell, which was such a useful deterrent in the old days.

DRASTIC METHOD

"In Paris one remedy was burning at the stake," Minifie said, adding that although it was undoubtedly efficacious he would hesitate to recommend it.

Minifie described the rows between town and gown at Oxford in the old days as "so bloody that to this day the carrying of bows and arrows is prohibited, and the practice of archery in the High Street is frowned upon.

"Even now," Minifie, who attended Oxford as a Rhodes scholar, pointed out, "students are required to be in college by 10, shortly after Big Tom has rung 101 times.

"Protests against such regulations have mostly been limited to stealing the Provost of Oriel's bicycle."

"Another university I attended has also been backward in the matter of student protests. No one has asked the president of the University of Saskatchewan to resign, no one has occupied buildings. The result may well be that they receive no grants from the Canada Council."

In his analysis of the current situation, Minifie examined student demands for a voice in administration, in appointment, advancement or discharge of faculty members, and control of curricula, for all of which, he concluded, they are unqualified.

DEGRADING

"Undergraduate control of these phases of university life can only degrade standards of scholarship and teaching. It must be resisted, in the best interests of the students themselves."

Summarizing causes of unrest, Minifie suggested that "the sudden and unregulated expansion of universities under the algae bloom of population explosion has made personal advice, instruction and communication impossible through sheer weight of numbers."

Other contributing factors include lack of parental discipline; lack of the discipline of poverty both on students and faculty—affluent societies have historically been susceptible to violence; corruption of faculty, and injudicious application of force.

NO POLICE

The answer to the immediate problem of student violence, Minifie believes, lies not with Governor Reagan's blister gas, nor with shotguns. There is no place on a university campus for police.

"Nor is there a place for those whose violence makes it necessary or possible to call in police.

"Students who violate the rules, the social contract under which they enter, should be expelled. Students who try to close down a university by inviting mass expulsions should be reminded of the facts of life.

"Students," Minifie continuned, "are expendable. They are not indispensable to a university. Quite the contrary; unless they are exceptionally well-mannered, hard-working and brilliant their presence is a drain on university finances, equipment, housing and time.

"They are a drain on the faculty's time, physical energy and patience."

Minifie referred to the most prestigious college at one of the most prestigious universities in the world, All Souls College, Oxford.

"The highest academic prize is to be elected Fellow of All Souls.

"There are no undergraduates at All Souls. The dons' time is not wasted on lectures, nor are their thoughts distracted by interminable arguments with mindless barbarians intent on demolishing the university. The dons have time to observe, to think, to discuss and to enlarge the boundaries of wisdom and knowledge.

"There is no student violence at All Souls: there are no students.

"And, if this is to be the answer to student unrest, so be it."

Margaret Lowe Heads University Women's Club

Miss Margaret Lowe was elected president of the University Women's Club at their annual meeting at the Faculty Club of the University of Victoria Wednesday evening. She succeeds Mrs. J. W. McCammon, who held the post for the past two years.

Others on the executive are Mrs. J. E. Browne, first vice-president; Mrs. W. D. Marshall, second vice-president; Mrs. S. J. Sherman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. Fournier, recording secretary, and Mrs. J. H. Brown, treasurer.

Mrs. D. M. Cox is federation representative, and conveners are Mrs. A. H. Cameron, study group; Mrs. A. Paul, social, and Mrs. J. S. Sanderson, publicity.

Reviewing events of the club's 60th year, Mrs. McCammon reported that two scholarships were presented, one to Miss Ester Cryderman, and the Rosalind W. Young scholarship to Miss Carolyn Potter. The club's Diamond Jubilee Bursary will be presented at either the University of Victoria or the Institute of Adult Studies in September.

It's a Fashion Miniwar In Conservative Ceylon

COLOMBO, Ceylon — There is a fashion miniwar developing in Ceylon, not only in the hinterlands of this pear-shaped island southeast of India, but even in its relatively westernized capital of Colombo. It's all over the mini-dress.

To expose four inches of midriff is traditional and taken for granted, but a similar view of female thigh has set off rumbles of annoyance and indignation among the conservative elements of this country's mixed society. The reverberations have reached all the way to the nation's parliament.

A sizable majority of Ceylonese girls still wear saris draping the body from neck to ankles, but many teenagers, particularly those who consider themselves avant-garde, are wearing hemlines four to six inches above the knees.

The question of the relationship between decency and the distance between skirts and knees has been discussed at public meetings, in school debates and at Ceylon's traditional temple gatherings on full-moon days, when Buddhists congregate to listen to sermons based on teachings of the Buddha.

Several prominent members of the Buddhist clergy have denounced the ministyles as another import from the West that was undermining the nation's ancient heritage.

Recently, Ananda Premasinghe, a Trotskyist member of Colombo's city council, pressed for an official debate on the dangers of the minidress, but he was thwarted by Mayor Jabir Abdul Cader. The Mayor ruled that it was not a problem that was any of the council's business.

In addition, some ultra-nationalist elements in recent months have taken their campaign against minidresses into the streets. Pamphleteers have stationed themselves at railroad stations and principal bus stops in Colombo as well as outside the city, distributing leaflets containing diatribes in verse—the traditional form of airing grievances here—against the mini.

The demonstrators also sing their verses aloud, much to the discomfiture of any mini-clad girls.

Women

Couple Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Stevenson of 434 Tipton Rd., were honored at a reception in Holyrood House recently on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The Stevensons were married in a double ceremony at Stitchel Home Farm in Scotland in 1919. They came to Victoria in 1939, when Mr. Stevenson joined the civil service.

The Stevensons have two sons, Gerald and David, both of Victoria, and two daughters, Mrs. Lilias Smale of Victoria and Mrs. Kay Vickers of Burnaby. They have 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Scolds Working Wives

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first responsibility of a married woman who works is toward her family and if she can't look after her home she shouldn't be working, one of British Columbia's three women cabinet ministers said recently.

Grace McCarthy, who owns several flower shops, told the 19th annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Administrative Assistants private secretaries that it takes "a very healthy, well-adjusted woman to work and care for a family at the same time."

"It can result in neglected children, unhappy homes, discontented husbands," she said.

Mrs. McCarthy, Social Credit MLA for Vancouver-Little Mountain, said women now make up 32 per cent of the provincial work force, compared to 22 per cent in 1955. She said it is likely that within a decade, half the women in B.C. between 45 and 64 will be in the work force.

Mrs. McCarthy said she has never found it a disadvantage to be a woman. "And I never once thought I needed a royal commission to tell us what was wrong with us."

Music Program This Evening

Mrs. Barbara Miskiman will be hostess at a coffee party following a musicale to be given by the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club this evening in St. Matthias Hall.

Guests will include the guest artists, members of the club and friends.

The program for the evening is being arranged by Mrs. J. Ingram Smith, and tickets will be available at the door.

Dead Dogs Dumped in Pit; Residents Criticize SPCA

NORTH COWICHAN — Residents of North Road are furious at the SPCA for dumping dead animals in open pits a short distance from an elementary school and residential buildings.

Mrs. J. C. Walker, a spokesman for the residents, said the SPCA truck was dumping the dead animals on municipal land between Auchinachie and Drinkwater Roads.

She said the pits had been dug in January or February when there was snow on the ground. The remains of the rotting carcasses were above the ground now and children played in the area

"And the stench is just awful," she said.

SPCA Inspector Garry McCallum admitted the practice of dumping dead animals in the pits but said they were covered with earth afterwards. "But I've noticed quite a few times when I go back there the bodies are uncovered," he said.

McCallum said there is no incinerator and "we have to get rid of the dogs somewhere." He said he was going up to cover the bodes again right after hearing about the complaints. Health inspector Doug Roe also said he would make an immediate check of the scene.

The land involved was the centre of controversy last year when the municipality permitted the dumping of sepetic tank effluent into similar ditches. The practice ceased following published compaints in the press

Soccer Banquet Flopped

NORTH COWICHAN — Duncan Juvenile Soccer Association Wednesday asked council for a grant to cover a $600 deficit which resulted from an unsecessful banquet and dance at Fuller Lake Arena.

The request was referred to the finance committee for consideration.

Ian MacInnes, secretary of the association, said expenses were expected to be paid out of bar reciepts but "these fell far short . . . largely due to the fact that the arena was uncomfortably cold and many people left early"

The association hosted the Vancouver Island Championships this year.

A TRIO OF ARTISTS have opened an art, pottery and carving shop in a wing of Nan's coffee bar at Fulford Harbor, Salt Spring Island. Painter Art Simons, potter Carol Southward and wood carver, Wayne Page, a building contractor, all live in the area. Mrs. Simons, seen admiring some of the Southward creations; Mrs. Page and the potter's husband have helped renovate and furnish Salt Spring's new art outlet.

DUNCAN TOURIST OFFICE THREATENED WITH CLOSURE

DUNCAN — The tourist information bureau on the Trans-Canada highway will not open this season unless about $2,000 in grants is forthcoming from the city and municipality.

President Jim Lambeth told the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday $2,500 spent printing 35,000 new brochures had taken most of this year's $3,600 in membership dues.

He said the municipality of North Cowichan had been asked to increase its grant of $250 and to distribute some of the brochures through its office.

A reply from the clerk indicated no more money was forthcoming and the only brochures distributed would be those picked up at the municipal office.

"I think they must have misread our request," said member Les Atcheson.

2,381 CALLERS

A total of 2,381 persons visited the bureau last year.

Atcheson said it was not fair for the chamber to accpet the full cost of running the bureau. Some members had nothing to gain by attracting tourists.

Mayor Jim Quaife said the city had set aside $1,375 which included operating costs for the building which the city owns. He also made it clear that a $2,000 grant made last year "was a bookkeeping error that was too late to correct.

"But we are definitely not in favor of having the information bureau closed," Quaife said. "In fact, I think it should remain open from May 1 to Oct. 31."

Atcheson said the city "must share the blame if the bureau closes. It is doing us no favors since we have to pay back taxes out of the grant."

Quaife suggested costs of staffing the bureau might be defrayed by renting an unused portion of the building for souvenir and curio sales.

REGIONAL PROBLEM

Atcheson suggrsted approaching the regional boad for next year and member Glen Harper said a letter should be sent out immediately asking all members to contribute an additional $10 to get the bureau open.

Alderman Dick Benzies, a former chamber president, said "all organizations are asking for increased grants from the city," and this was not the time of years to come with open hands.

Lambeth said all avenues would be explored in order to get the bureau open but rebuked Benzies remark by saying, "Tourism is an industry, an important one, and the chamber should not have to go on bended knee to sell councils on an industry."

WELDER SAYS UNION 'UNFAIR'

PORT ALBERNI — Felix Fisher, an unemployed Port Alberni welder is threatening to lay a charge of discrimination against the executive of Local 592 of the International Botherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

The charge of discrimination under Canadian human rights legislation, reports Fisher, is due to the fact that the local used his old name of Karwasinski in questionnaire passed out May 12 to Crofton members.

"I changed my name by deed poll in England in 1949 on the advice of my wife, who is English. I fought in the Free Polish Air Force. I'm not ashamed of my old name.

"But when the local listed it in the questionnaire it looked as if I had something to hide."

Fisher is awaiting a court decision on a case he brought against the local after he was dismissed by MacMillan Bloedel in 1967.

He claimed that he was illegally dismissed. On the advice of his counsel he dropped the charge against the company. His case against the local is that it didn't represent him at the time of his dismissal.

Fisher is listed in the phone book under his old name.

He explains that the decision to do this was prompted by a series of nuisance phone calls.

TAHSIS — A brief work stoppage at the Tahsis Ltd. sawmill cut production on the afternoon and night shift Wednesday.

Production was to resume at 7:30 a.m. this morning following the walkout which affected more than 200 members of the International Woodworkers of America.

The sawmill shut down shortly after noon Wednesday when members of the union walked off the job. They desired re-opening of the current contract, and protested the lack of recreational facilities in the company town.

Union and managemft representatives met late Wednesday and the union agreed to ask the men to return to work.

NORTH COWICHAN — Watershort Maple Bay will get a 2,000 gallon water truck for its fire department, North Cowichan council decided Wednesday.

Fire protection committee chairman Tom Burge said Maple Bay volunteer fire department had acquired a five-ton, 1954 model truck from cassidy fire department for $750 plus provincial tax.

"It will always be of value to Maple Bay because of its shortage of water," Burge said.

Complete cost of overhauling and outfitting the truck will be $1,400 to be paid out of reserve funds. The department now has an ancient pumper and a jeep.

The acquisition will not affect the addition of a new truck to be approved through a bylaw this fall, Burge said.

Union Strife From Labor Laws—Berger

Opposition Leader Tom Berger said Wednesday the provincial government's labor laws are a fundamental cause of the current labor-management strife in B.C.

He said the B.C. government should disclose immediately — as the federal government did with the Air Canada situation — that it will not intervene with compulsory arbitration.

"So long as the prospect of an imposed settlement is in the offing, you can't get the parties together," Berger told a press conference.

"I'm concerned about the situation and I think it clearly shows that the Bennett government's labor legislation doesn't work.

"The paramount thing is to get the parties to sit down and hammer out a fair agreement but the legislation the Bennett government has brought in has alienated the parties and acts as a deterrent to collective bargaining.

"The result is obvious — it has aggravated the situation."

Berger said the government ignored the report by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz after a fact-finding mission to Sweden which emphasized that labor peace was achieved there by the government policy of requiring management and unions to hammer out their own settlements without intervention.

Bill 33 setting up the Mediation Commission had put a roadblock in the way of labor and management "learning to grow up and accept the responsibility of settling their differences themselves," Berger said.

He claimed that in the present series of strikes and threatened strikes and lockouts in B.C., both sides are just "waiting for the government to invoke Bill 33" instead of continuing negotiations.

He said an NDP government would "rewrite the labor legislation . . . to adopt the Swedish system which works."

U.S. Offers Draft Treaty To Ban Arms From Sea Bed

GENEVA (AP) — The United States submitted today a draft treaty to ban nuclear arms and weapons of mass destruction from the sea bed.

The draft, put before the 17-nation disarmament conference, was in answer to a Soviet draft presented here March 18 which calls for complete demilitarization of the sea bed. The U.S. has rejected this concept.

Apart from the definition of weapons to be banned, the U.S. draft differs from the Soviet one over three other key points:

1. It would apply to areas of the seabed beyond a three-mile coastal limit. The Soviet draft limit is 12 miles.

2. Verification would be by "observation and consultation." U.S. officials regard the Soviet proposal for reciprocal inspection as "ambiguous."

3. The U.S. draft calls for a review conference in Geneva five years after the treaty enters into force. The Soviet draft carries no provision for a review.

EXTENDS AREA

U.S. delegate Adrian S. Fisher said that compared to the area covered by the Soviet draft's 12-mile limit, the U.S. version "would add roughly 2,000,000 square miles of seabed to the area of prohibition."

"This is an area, moreover, where the temptation to extend the nuclear arms race might be very great because of its proximity to the shore."

Fisher said the only practical way to prevent an arms race on the seabed is to restrict the treaty to weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear arms.

"Such an agreement would remove the major threat to the peaceful use of the seabed," he said. "At the same time, it would reduce the verification problem to manageable proportions and would be consistent with the security interests of coastal states."

Soviet delegate Alexei Roshchin told reporters he was "in a way" disappointed by the American draft but it was too early to say whether it dimmed prospects of agreement.

TOUGHEN UP DRUG BILL STANDARDS

OTTAWA (CP) — A procession of scientists appealed to Parliament Wednesday to toughen up legal quality standards for drug manufacturers and importers.

Seven experts from Toronto University and the University of British Columbia — chemists, pharmacists and doctors — testified before the Senate commerce committee that a government drug bill already passed by the Commons contains weak points on quality control.

(An advertisement of considerable importance to women)

First new tampon in years brings peace of mind to its user.

Johnson & Johnson pioneers a new concept in sanitary protection—CAREFREE* Tampons

(MONTREAL J & J) Of course, tampons have been around for a long time but no real improvements have been made in them for some 20 years.

Now, Johnson & Johnson introduces its new CAREFREE Tampon. It's an entirely new kind of tampon—much smaller than any tampon ever made, yet amazingly, it offers longer lasting protection—up to 3 hours longer.

Another remarkable feature of CAREFREE Tampon is that it is truly disposable. No more rigid cardboard tube: there's just a neat, compact tampon in a cellophane wrapper.

What are other women doing about sanitary protection?

According to research studies conducted in Canada, the use of tampons is growing rapidly. Their use is widely accepted, particularly among the younger, more sophisticated women. In this group, the majority of women use tampons.

Most women think that tampons are indeed a good idea. But they worry about the reliability of present products, particularly when it comes to using them during the entire period. (Some women are so concerned that they use both tampons and napkins) but such precautions are completely unnecessary with new CAREFREE Tampon.

Safe up to 3 hours longer

Now, Johnson & Johnson has developed CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. CAREFREE is, in fact, safe for up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.

This greater absorbency results from a unique quality. While the traditional tampon expands lengthwise, the new CAREFREE Tampon expands, logically enough, in width—as the flow requires. This gentle expansion causes the tampon to mould itself to the body contours so it's accident-proof.

Complete assurance

Exhaustive clinical tests and actual use among 3,720 women have proven that CAREFREE Tampons can be worn, with complete assurance, even during days when the flow is heaviest.

The CAREFREE Tampon is made of pure surgical rayon. This type of rayon was developed by Johnson & Johnson and only Johnson & Johnson uses it. It has a high crimp and its long fibers interlock. This results in higher absorbency. And the tampon holds its shape, too!

New CAREFREE Tampons are truly disposable

The cumbersome applicator that you get with ordinary tampons is a thing of the past. CAREFREE doesn't have an applicator because it doesn't need one. It is compact, smooth and firm enough to be inserted easily without one. And this makes CAREFREE a truly disposable tampon.

CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon there is—so small you can hide one in the palm of your hand. So small you can put a box in your most fashionable bag and still have room for all that you usually carry. (A whole box of CAREFREE Tampons takes up no more room than a small pack of cigarettes.)

Once they have tried new CAREFREE Tampons women are quick to recognize their many great advantages. They're the only significant improvement in sanitary protection in years.

Victoria Men Tops in Uvic Faculties; Graduates Announced

The first doctoral candidate to graduate from the University of Victoria will be among 541 students receiving degrees May 31 in a variety of faculties and programs.

Seattle-born Frank Spellacy, 35, completed requirements for his PhD. in psychology earlier this year, and is now conducting neuropsychological research in Boston.

Two local students won the university's top awards this year.

John Phillips, 22, 1-11 Dunsmuir Road, was awarded the Governor-General's Medal for best standing in arts and science. He will receive his BSc. degree in honors mathematics at the graduation ceremony. He will begin doctoral studies at the University of Oregon this fall.

Phillips, a native Victorian, is a graduate of Victoria High and is the son of Mrs. John Phillips and her late husband.

This will be the fifth scholarship he has received while attending university. The other were two government scholarships, a president's scholarship, and a scholarship from the Royal Canadian Legion.

Education student Bruce Mitchel, 2507 Quadra, is winner of the Dr. Maxwell A. Cameron Memorial Medal and Prize.

He headed this year's class graduating in the Bachelor of Education degree, secondary curriculum.

His teaching areas are guidance and social studies.

Mitchell also is a native Victorian, and graduated from Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

The first crop of grads in two new fields at the university will be graduated this year. Five honors biochemistry students and five fine arts students will take part in the ceremony.

Biochemistry grads are Wayne Thomas Buckley, 23, a graduate of Mt. Douglas High; Mary Joyce Hallett, 21, a graduate of Oak Bay High; Ian Graham Kerr, 22, also from Oak Bay High; Robert Augustus Masters, 22, from Claremont High; and Janet Marion Wood, a grad of University Hill High, Vancouver.

The fine arts students are Jane Bonnie Alexander, Victoria; Patricia Ann Halls, Victoria; Roy Erwin James Hamill, Kelowna; Kathleen Rosetta Hargreaves, Victoria; John Mansel Polkinghorne, Victoria.

Names of students who have successfully completed work for a degree were released overnight by acting UVic president Robert T. Wallace.

The degrees to be conferred include master of arts, 12; master of science, 4; bachelor of arts, 253; bachelor of science, 146; bachelor of education, 118; bachelor of fine arts, 5; bachelor of music, 2.

Noise and you

Noise can kill. It can cause heart attacks, ulcers, high blood pressure, nervous breakdowns and sexual impotence. And it's getting worse every year. Don't miss "The Noise Is Getting Impossible"—a penetrating look at noise and you—in Weekend Magazine.

Alberta's Public Protector

A sane man spent 22 years in an Alberta mental hospital. And he might have spent the rest of his life there had it not been for George C. McClellan. He is Alberta's—and Canada's—first Ombudsman, the public protector who watches out for the little man.

MINI-SHIRTS. Short shirts are NOW fashion, so if you're a female whose middle bears baring, don't miss this full-color fashion feature.

Captain America Is a Canadian

So is Spiderman, The Incredible Hulk and Mighty Thor. That is, their voices are Canadian—they belong to famous and not-so-famous Toronto actors and announcers. Discover the true identity of your favorite TV cartoon hero, this week in Weekend Magazine.

GREGORY CLARK. "The Mystery Of The Moulting Polar Bear" is the name of Greg's comical tale, this week.

YOUR WEDDING CAKE. Margo Oliver, Weekend Magazine Food Editor, has directions for making "The Cake of Your Life," this Saturday.

How Much Is a

SUPERSTAR

Worth?

Hockey's Bobby Hull will be a millionaire before he is 40. Basketball's Lew Alcindor signed a contract making him a millionaire before playing a single pro game. Football's O. J. Simpson put a price tag of $600,000 on a four-year contract. Are they worth it? Yes, says Sports Editor Andy O'Brien in "Superstars Deserve All The Money They Can Get."

Dissension Hits Fortas Law Firm

WASHINGTON (WP) — The old law firm of Abe Fortas is torn with dissension at the prospect of his returning to it from the supreme court.

A sizable faction of partners and younger associates has expressed strong opposition to his resuming a 23-year association with the firm he helped to establish. There has been talk of resignations should Fortas decide to come back.

Others — especially the senior members who have worked with Fortas for years — are standing loyally behind the ex-justice who stepped down from the high court following disclosure of his financial ties with convicted stock manipulator Louis Wolfson.

The debate has boiled for days behind the walls of the gracious Washington townhouse in which the firm of Arnold and Porter resides.

But it has also become topic A in the buzzing conversational grapevine of Washington's legal fraternity.

"Everybody knows about this controversy," said one prominent Washington lawyer with close contacts in the firm. "Anyone who talks to members of the firm can't help finding out."

The word at Arnold and Porter, however, is "no comment."

One partner pleaded: "I can't say anything about it and please forget that you ever talked to me."

Ship Industry Takes Step Closer to Graves

By BORIS MISKEW

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's dying shipbuilding industry took another step toward its grave Wednesday with the announced closing down of the Canadian Vickers Ltd. shipyard here.

J. Eric Harrington, Canadian Vickers' president, told a news conference the company "cannot continue its shipbuilding operation."

"There is no future domestic market to justify maintaining existing facilities," he said. "There already are too many shipyards in Canada for the number of contracts available."

Mr. Harrington said the company's industrial division "will continue to operate at capacity" and that Canadian Vickers has a backlog of $20,000,000 work under its diversified program.

About the time he announced the closing of the shipbuilding operation, 700 workers engaged in the company's shipbuilding division walked off their jobs in east-end Montreal and held an "information meeting."

Urges Stoppage

A spokesman for the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which represents the shipbuilders, said the workers will stay off the job until the federal or provincial government does something to prevent the closing.

"The federal government was informed some months ago of the steps that unfortunately now must be implemented," said Mr. Harrington. "It does not intend to do anything to keep us in business."

Meanwhile, Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen told the Commons that normal manpower department facilities will be available to aid workers affected by the shutdown of the shipbuilding operation.

Although Mr. Harrington painted a dismal picture of the future of the shipbuilding industry in Canada, John W. McGiffin, president of Canada Steamship Lines Ltd., said that so far as his company is concerned the future is as bright as ever.

Canadian Vickers, a subsidiary of Vickers Ltd. of London, last year sold its George T. Davie division at Lauzon, Que., to Davie Shipbuilding Co., a subsidiary of CSL.

Orders Scarce

Replying to Michel Chartrand, president of the central committee of the CNTU, who said the union might ask the Quebec government to nationalize the shipyard and build its own ships, Mr. Harrington said the Quebec government is having a difficult time finding orders for Marine Industries Ltd. at Sorel, Que., a subsidiary of General Investment Corp. in which the province has a substantial share.

The current work force of about 1,600 at Vickers will be reduced to 1,000 in the industrial and ship repairing divisions.

Vickers had substantial losses in 1967 and early 1968, chiefly because of its ailing shipbuilding operation.

But its financial picture is improving.

Consolidated net profits for the year ended Nov. 30, 1968, were $331,777 compared with a net loss of $6,571,106 in 1967.

In Quebec City meanwhile, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told the national assembly that federal government action would be necessary to prevent the shipyard's closing.

Later Wednesday, about 40 Vickers shipyard workers and sympathizers were escorted from the company's shipyard by National Harbors Board police after an eight-hour occupation attempt.

The police, wearing protective helmets and carrying nightsticks, met with no violent opposition from the men, the remainder of a group which at one point numbered 400.

Mr. Chartrand, one of the group escorted from the premises, suggested strike action until either the federal or provincial government comes up with a solution to keep the shipyard open.

A spokesman for Ontario's largest shipyard reacted to news of the Vickers shutdown with a call for more federal aid and a more definite federal policy on Canadian shipbuilding.

Firms Worried

William A. Webster, vice-president at Collingwood shipyards division, Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd., said in an interview in Collingwood, Ont. the shipyard is "extremely worried."

"What we need is for the federal government to come to our side of the table and ask us: 'What do you need to get going'?" Mr. Webster said.

The Collingwood shipyard builds lakers, tankers and motor vessels with a peak force of about 1,000 men. It sells only to Canadian buyers.

A spokesman for West Coast shipbuilders said the industry in that section of the country is not likely to meet the same fate as Vickers.

John Wallace, general manager of Yarrows Ltd. in Victoria said there was sufficient work in building barges and coastal vessels to keep Yarrows and its parent company, Burrard Dry Dock Ltd., in operation.

But reaction in the Maritime provinces to the Vickers shutdown was more pronounced and gloomy.

Robert McArthur, assistant general manager of the Saint John Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Ltd., said the outlook of the industry in Canada was "very, very dark indeed."

Government orders have been cut to almost nothing and merchant and commercial orders also are scarce.

Fred A. Rhuland, secretary-treasurer of Smith and Rhuland Ltd., a Lunenburg, N.S., wooden shipbuilder, said many shipyards have closed because of lack of work and orders.

The federal government cut out grants, or reduced amounts available last year "with the result that all shipbuilding fairly well was cut out to a minimum in all yards."

Prevention Program On Teeth Care Lauded

A preventive program is the reason Greater Victoria school children have the best-cared-for teeth in B.C., dental health officer Dr. David Parfitt said Tuesday.

A province-wide survey of dental health covering the last eight years recently revealed almost one-quarter of B.C. School children have totally neglected teeth, while another 53 per cent have partially cared-for teeth.

The results of the survey were reported last week at the B.C. Dental Association's annual convention in Vancouver.

It showed 37.4 per cent of Greater Victoria school children had no untreated tooth decay. The low percentage, registered in the Vancouver Island health region, was 13.7 per cent.

Only 16.2 per cent of the children in Greater Victoria had neglected cavities, but Vancouver was even lower with 14.9.

The Victoria study was made in 1966, and it was reported at that time that within the district Oak Bay children had the best cared-for teeth, followed by Saanich, Esquimalt and Victoria.

Since 1963 the district has had a preventive program consisting of inspection, education of children and parent counselling.

Dr. Parfitt said the toothbrush remained the main weapon against tooth decay, and further progress would only come from introduction of fluoridation in the public water supply.

Doctors Learn From Heart Of Unborn Lamb

WASHINGTON (WP) — An unborn lamb survived 14 hours in an artificial womb, but died Wednesday as scientists at the National Heart Institute were studying its blood circulation with X-rays.

Before the lamb died, however, it provided the scientists with new insights into the way the fetal heart supplies blood to the rest of the body.

"We're coming up with things we can't believe," commented Dr. Warren M. Zapel

These include confirmation of theories that the unborn baby supplies more blood to its head than to the rest of its body and new information on the differences between the circulation of blood before and after birth.

Telephone Relay Satellite Goes Into Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A new communications satellite whirled around earth today to establish the first global commercial telephone relay satellite network and replace a faulty spacecraft now hovering over the Pacific.

Launched Wednesday night, the $6,800,000 payload-called Intelsat III-rocketed into an eliptical orbit expected to carry it to a peak altitude of about 22,700 miles. Friday at 10:45 p.m., ground controllers planned to fire a spacecraft motor to kick the satellite into a stationary orbit 22,300 miles over the Gilbert Islands in the Pacific.

Trackers confirmed that Interlsat III was in transfer orbit about four hours after launch.

Council Gets Insurance Grant

The Victoria Insurance Agents Association granted $1,800 Wednesday to the Greater Victoria and District Safety Council.

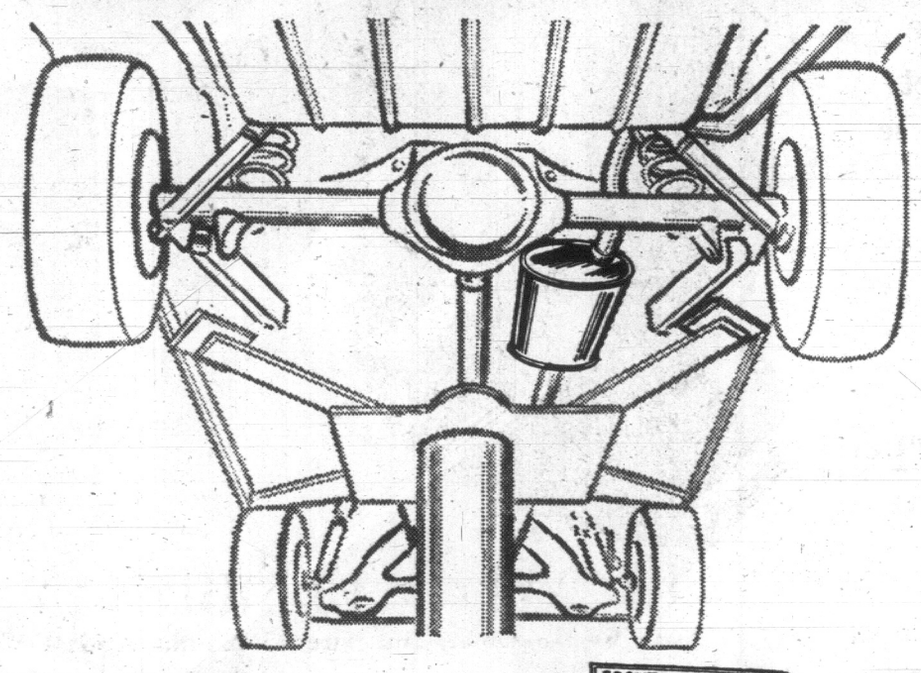

Half of the amount is to be used to sponsor and promote defensive driving courses. The remaining $900 will be used for general operating expenses.

Judge Ignores Kennedy Plea

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan today waited in his 13th-floor cell in a downtown court building for removal to San Quentin prison's death row after a judge turned down a plea from Senator Edward M. Kennedy to spare the life of the man who killed his brother.

Judge Herbert Walker, who formally sentenced the 25-year-old Jordanian immigrant to the gas chamber Wednesday followed the recommendation of a 12-man jury which April 23 convicted Sirhan of first-degree murder for shooting Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Walker ignored a dramatic 11th-hour appeal by Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), who lost two brothers to assassins' bullets.

Kennedy told Judge Walker in a letter released by District Attorney Evelle Younger:

"My brother was a man of love and sentiment and compassion. He would not have wanted his life to be a cause for the taking of another life."

FEELS JURY RIGHT

But Walker, who has reserved only one death verdict in 19 capital cases during his 16 years as a Superior Court judge, said: "It is the feeling of the court that the jury is right."

Sirhan, who entered the courtroom holding a cigar, showed no sign of emotion as Walker passed the formal sentence.

Nor was any emotion expressed by his 50-year-old mother, Mary, who sat directly behind him in the courtroom.

But Grant B. Cooper, Sirhan's chief defence lawyer, said Sirhan's mother "broke down and cried when she left him in his cell."

A series of appeals are expected to carry the case right up to the U.S. Supreme Court and should delay any execution for several years.

No prisoner has been executed in California for two years.

A total of 78 condemned men are currently crammed into two separate death row units at the maximum security prison.

A "no man's land" has been created at San Quentin to safeguard Sirhan from attempts on his life, Warden Louis Nelson said Wednesday.

FOR HISTORY'S SAKE

"We are somewhat alarmed because we believe there may be people ready to kill Senator Kennedy's slayer to get their name in the history books," Nelson commented.

Awaiting Sirhan is Cell 33 on death row. Like those of 80 other occupants it is 4½ feet wide, 7 feet high and 11 feet deep, with a large bare overhead light bulb that can be turned on and off from inside the cell.

Sirhan's cell is equipped with a bunk, bookshelf, stool and toilet. A wire mesh screen will separate him from 28 other condemned men on his corridor.

Sharp Jump In War Casualties

SAIGON (CP) — American war dead rose sharply to 430 last week from 180 the week before as North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces stepped up attacks presumably to mark the birthday of Ho Chi Minh, North Vietnam president, the U.S. military command said today.

A total of 2,185 other Americans were wounded and 1,107 of them needed hospital care during the week ending May 17. This compared with 1,225 wounded in the previous week, the command said.

Casualties also rose for the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. U.S. officials claimed 5,686 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers died, compared with 3,038 the previous week.

Military observers in Saigon said they believe the stepped-up offensive was to mark the birthday of Ho May 19.

The figures released by the Americans today claimed North Vietnamese and Viet Cong dead had topped the 500,000-mark since the war started in 1961—with 500,452 reported killed.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported that government casualties nearly tripled last week, to 527 killed compared with 182 the previous week. Since Jan. 1, 1961, a total of 79,345 South Vietnamese troops have been killed.

A spokesman for the U.S. command said the sharp increase in combat dead was "the result of a surge in the intensity" of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong activity that began May 11, when enemy forces shelled more than 200 southern allied positions and made several heavy ground attacks on allied bases.

Charged Youths Will Elect Trial

Two youths arrested early Wednesday morning in Oak Bay and charged with possession of housebreaking tools will appear again in central court Wednesday to elect a form of trial.

James McMillan, 18, of 322 Beckley, and Mark Murray, 20 of 586 Kenneth, were charge with having a crescent wrench, pliers, two pairs of gloves and some masking tape.

Population at 21,007,000 as Rate Drops

OTTAWA (CP) — The population of Canada was an estimated 21,007,000 on April 1, an increase of 1.5 per cent for the year since April 1, 1968, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

The estimate is based on the June 1, 1966, census count of 20,015,000 adjusted for births and deaths, and immigration and emigration since that date.

The bureau's electronic clock, which represents total population on the basis of latest reported rates of population formation, showed the count at 21,044,042 Wednesday afternoon when the more formal announcement was made.

The rate of increase in the year prior to April 1, 1968, was 1.8 per cent. The bureau said the smaller increase in the last 12 months was mainly due to decreased immigration. Fewer births, and increased numbers of deaths and emigrant departures, also contributed to the decline.

The April 1 population by provinces, to the nearest thousand, this year and last year, was:

Newfoundland 513,000, (512,111;) Prince Edward Island 110,000, (unchanged); Nova Scotia 764,000, (764,111); New Brunswick 626,000, (unchanged); Quebec, 5,976,000 (5,962,000); Ontario 7,425,000 (7,392,000); Manitoba 977,000 (976,000); Saskatchewan 961,000 (unchanged); Alberta 1,553,000 (1,547,000); British Columbia 2,056,000 (2,045,000); Yukon, 15,000 (unchanged); and Northwest Territories 31,000 (unchanged.

'Billy Bud' Needed A Few Sound Effects

By AUDREY JOHNSON

When Brentwood College Drama Club embarks upon a production under the exacting and imaginative direction of T. Gil Bunch, one can be prepared for three things.

It will be a far more ambitious undertaking than most schools attempt.

It will be profoundly researched, interpretively and factually, so that the actors will give fully intelligent characterizations within their capacities.

It will be visually arresting and interesting.

In 1965 it was Antigone which so impressed audiences that it was brought from the school gymnasium at Mill Bay to the McPherson Playhouse for special performances.

On Wednesday night at the school the Coxe-Champan adaptation of Herman Melville's Billy Budd was given the first of three performances.

A most difficult assignment for the 30 teen-age boys in the cast and not uniformly successful, it nevertheless has many virtues, including several outstanding individual performances, striking group effects, first-rate teamwork and effective use of the limited gymnasium facilities.

Ingenius use of swags of canvas and ropes depending from the roof, spars, a multi-level state and lighting that did its best to cope with the restrictions, provided the setting aboard HMS Indomitable.

With all this I would still have liked some atmospheric sounds on tape, at least at the outset.

Creaking ropes and spars, some wind noise, perhaps even a seagull cry would have established mood.

Because we began in a dry atmosphere it took longer to become responsive to the feeling of the play. Also the first act is exceptionally long and first night tensions were probably responsible for the heavy-footed tempo and sometimes nervously garbled speech.

Second and third acts definitely improved in all aspects and the action scene in which a French frigate is engaged and the taut, tragic finale were excellently done.

The period of the play — 1798 — the philosophising it contains, the shipboard characters of the time, all conspire to make it particularly tough for the youthful actors.

Bob Tamblyn, for instance, as the Master-at-Arms, gave all he could to the role but the black, bitter creeping evil of the man is almost inevitably beyond his young grasp.

A closer to nature and therefore more easily comprehended role is that of the innocent and lovable Billy Budd and Geoff Bowes is convincing and completely acceptable in all phases of the character.

WELL CAST

Peter McFarland as Captain Vere and Christopher Butterfield as the first officer carry their roles with considerable authority and conviction.

Their timing is remarkably good and their understanding of the characters is real and consistent.

Many others deserve particular credit. David MacKenzie as the ancient Dansker; Barry Smith, the fiery Jenkins, Philip Arnoldi, a midshipman; Jeremy Etherington and Jock McKinnon as officers; John MacInnes as a stool pigeon.

The entire cast provides a wonderful sense of dedicaton and complete absorption in the play.

As a drama, the piece has too many long talky passages that defy even the best talents in the cast. The court martial scene for example, in many ways admirable, becomes tiring because a sufficient vocal and dynamic range is not possible.

There are times when it seems that the drama is overstated with too much weight given to every thought between speeches as well as to the speeches themselves.

Nevertheless this is a phenomenal undertaking remarkably well realized, effectively staged and costumed.

It will be repeated tonight and Friday.

FEAR of power wielded by Time publisher, the late Henry Luce, made Liberal government under Lester Pearson exempt Time from restrictions imposed against foreign publications, according to former finance minister Walter Gordon (above). Pearson feared Luce could influence repercussions in the Canada-U.S. auto pact then under negotiation, Gordon said.

Hippies Picket Court in Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — A small group of hippies picketed outside magistrate's court here Wednesday as a protest against charges laid against the Georgia Straight newspaper.

Inside the court editor-in-chief Dan McLeod and managing editor Robert Cummings were remaneded to May 29 on charges of counselling the commission of an offence—the cultivation of marijuana—in the newspaper's March 28-April 3 edition.

Pot Plants Seized

KELOWNA (CP) — RCMP confiscated a flower-box of small marijuana plants and arrested Nels Lindstrom of Rutland and his wife Jean Tuesday, charging them with cultivating the plant in their front yard. Bail was set at $10,000 for Mr. Lindstrom and $1,000 for his wife.

Garden Club Adds Class For Contest

An extra class has been added this year to the Metchosin Garden Club's miniature garden competition.

Now, competitors from Sooke elementary schools can enter boxes in which plants are growing, either from seed or transplanted.

Prizes will be offered in the five classes of competition in the garden event which will take place Friday and Saturday.

First prize will be $5, second prize $3.50, and third prize $1.50.

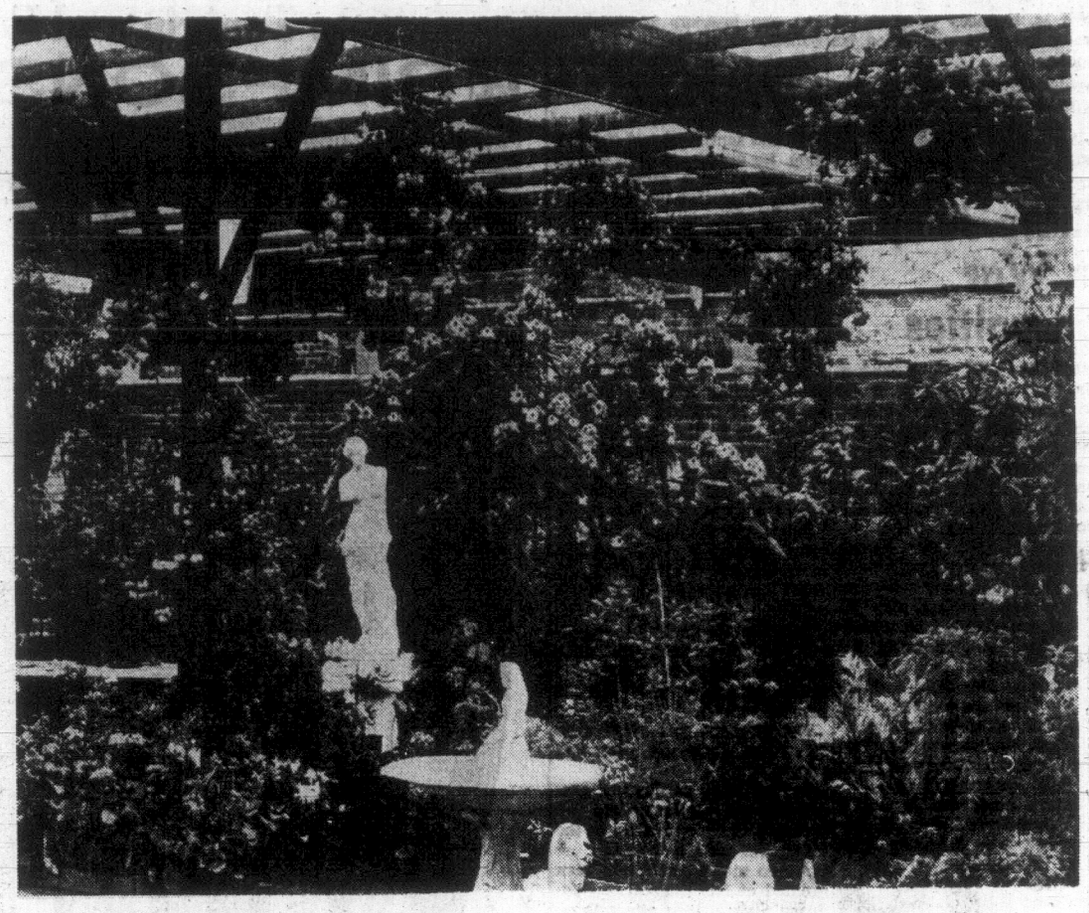

Six members of the Victoria Horticultural Society will judge the entries, in the schools.

Prizes will be given at 3:30 p.m. at St. Mary's church hall, Metchosin Rd.

Bugs? Fungus?

FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

ORTHO Rose Dust knocks out bugs and fungus fast!

Don't put it off another day! This very weekend, you can battle and beat the most destructive enemies in your rose garden: insects that suck and chew and bite; fungus diseases that mar and blight and wither. You can fight back — and win!

Your weapons come in one easy-to-use plastic squeeze container. The name? ORTHO Rose Dust . . . and it packs two big punches. One: insecticides that make short work of aphids, thrips, Japanese beetles, rose weevils. Two: fungicides that really work. Powdery mildew, black spot and rust don't stand a chance. Easy to use — just aim the duster and squeeze. No work. No fuss.

ORTHO Rose Dust is effective, economical, and easy to use, just like all ORTHO products. You'll find ORTHO Rose Dust at your garden suppliers.

New Rules Planned for Elk Lake

Power boats which violate regulations on Elk Lake should be impounded for the first offence.

This was agreed by Saanich parks and outdoor recreation committee Wednesday and will be recommended to the next council meeting.

Also to be recommended to council is a permit system for boats with engines over 10 horsepower with regulations and buoyed-off areas attached to the permits, a rotation system for water skiing and a lengthening of permitted hours to 10 a.m. to sunset every day, instead of 6 p.m. to one hour after sunset on weekdays and 1 p.m to one hour after sunset Saturdays and Sundays.

The committee also recommended that the entire subject be reviewed in October to see if it is working. The indication was that if power boats cause trouble even with the tougher regulations, then they will be banned altogether.

HEALTHY SPORT

Ald. Frank Waring said water skiing is a healthy sport and should be allowed, but in doing that it must be regulated.

Ald. Alan Newberry said the trouble that has been caused on Elk Lake, including the recent deliberate killing of a sawn by the occupants of a motor boat, does not come from water skiers "but from power-hungry people driving big powerful machines."

If council approves the recommendations, no-cost permits will be issued by the police department which will then have a record of power boat users on the lake.

A petition signed by 26 members of the municipal fire and police forces urged an extension of boat use to 1 p.m. to one hour after sunset so shift workers can enjoy boating or skiing. The committee's recommendation took one hour off the end of this, but added three hours to the beginning.

Committee chairman Ald. William Noel said the permit should give people some feeling of responsibility. He described it as a good step towards controlling motor boats on the lake and was fair to law-abiding persons

In another matter, the committee refused a request by F. Beaver-Jones, 1215 Craigflower, for a business licence to conduct a watercycle rental business at Elk and Beaver Lake. Ald. Waring said there are "so many hazards in connection with a rental operation."

Five-Year Terms

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Victor Melvin Ketola, 20, of suburban Coquitlam, and Russell Wayne Sutherland, 21, of Burnaby, Tuesday were sentenced to five years in prison in magistrate's court after they pleaded guilty to holding up a local drug store April 14 with a toy gun.

Invest in the Stars . . . It Pays

LONDON (AP) — Any potential investor who thinks that oil, steel and insurance stocks aren't glamorous enough for his money now has an alternative. He can put his nest egg into a profitable industry with a little more lustre — British movie stars.

All it takes are 10 shillings sixpence (about $1.35) and you can buy one share of a company whose assets include some of Britain's best-known entertainers. The screen personalities who will be working for you include Vanessa Redgrave, Alan Bates, Richard Attenborough and John Mills.

Such an investment might sound appealing to the average man who has always envied the big earnings of movie stars, but it's an equally good deal for the stars themselves. Through an ingenious transaction involving a company called Constellation Investments Ltd., they can save considerable money on income taxes by selling their future earnings in advance.

Constellation, with 45 entertainers on its books, is proving a huge success. So successful, in fact, that the government is planning to outlaw all such future arrangements.

In his budget message in April, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Roy Jenkins, proposed legislation that would end these transactions, which he considers a tax dodge.

Ian Gordon, the 28-year-old former accountant who heads the company, insists movie stars have the same right to capitalize on their future earnings as does a successful manufacturer who decides to "go public."

Under Britain's sharply progressive income taxes, a well-paid star earning $240,000 gets to keep only about $31,200 after taxes.

But if a star sold his services to Constellation, he would get a straight pre-tax salary of $24,000 plus dividends and a bundle of stock each year. In the end his real income could more than double.

All this is possible because the stock the star receives isn't subject to income tax. Meanwhile, Constellation keeps his actual income and invests it. If the investments prove profitable, the stock will be worth even more.

RELIGION TO STAY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Assurance has been given by Education Minister Donald Brothers that religious exercises will remain a part of the British Columbia public school curriculum.

G. A. Ferguson, provincial grand secretary of the Loyal Orange Association, said Brothers gave the assurance in reply to a letter sent to him by the association criticizing the provincial education system.

Byrd Flight Over Pole Disputed

OSLO (Reuters) — The Norwegian newspaper Aftenposten claimed today that the late U.S. explorer Admiral Richard Byrd did not fly over the North Pole in 1926.

Aftenposten called for a public inquiry to end controversy over the historic flight.

Though Byrd and his colleague Floyd Bennett never reached the pole, the admiral's efforts in polar research were undisputable, Aftenposten said.

The Aftenposten claimed the fact that Byrd, who died in 1957, never reached the North Pole in his Fokker aircraft was reiterated to the newspaper by Norwegian explorer Bernt Balchen.

Aftenposten said that after flying in Byrd's Fokker plane later in the year, Balchen bluntly told Bennett it was impossible they could have made the 1,330-mile polar flight in 15½ hours.

Bennett was said to have replied: "No, we did not," the newspaper said.

Floodgates of Praise Opened for Jon Vickers

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Britain's hard-crusted opera critics today let loose the floodgates of praise for Jon Vickers, the Canadian singer who has become a colossus among world tenors.

The prairie star, native of Prince Albert, Sask., opened at the Royal Opera House in the tragic Peter Grimes role Wednesday night and drew rave reviews from virtually every national newspaper in the country.

Critics found the London revival of Benjamin Britten's opera far superior than those in previous years. One critic described Vicker's performance as having the force of a northeasterly gale.

Peter Grimes is the story of a half-demented fisherman accused of cruelty towards young apprentices. It was last performed at the Royal Opera House seven years ago.

The Times described the cast as magnificent. Vicker's performance, it said, was memorable. His was the first to show "this anti-hero as a whole, tough, weightily brutish yet with deep-hidden seeds of tenderness."

The Daily Telegraph said Vickers enhanced an awareness of his own gifts as an interpreter and of the music's greatness. He sustained two totally opposed interpretations—a man much more in touch with the world around him, a tormented man in full possession of his faculties.

The Guardian described Vickers's performance as one of "astonishing intensity." Everything about the tenor—the jutting chin, the slouched back, the wildness and coarsening of tone vividly portrayed the fanatic, if not the madman.

Montreal Ballet In London

LONDON (CP) — After testing its wings with ecstatically successful results in some of Europe's smaller centres, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens of Montreal arrives here Sunday to make a 12-day assult on one of the great ballet capitals of Europe.

Opening night next Tuesday at the famed Sadler's Wells Theatre is to be attended by both Princess Margaret and Jennie Lee, widow of Welsh labor spokesman Aneurin Bevan and now minister of culture in the Wilson government.

The 1,500-seat theatre reported Tuesday night that tickets were moving exceptionally well.

Comunication Satellite In Position

CAPE KENNEDY (Reuters) — Intelsat III, an advanced communications satellite, was launched Wednesday night to complete the first worldwide public communications satellite system.

Intelsat III, launched by a Thor Delta rocket, is destined for a position 22,300 miles over the Pacific Ocean.

The satellite now there will be moved over the Indian Ocean and a third satellite will be left on station over the Atlantic

All three satellites will be capable of reaching over 90 per cent of the world's population once new ground stations are built.

The Intelsat series is managed by the Communications Satellite Corp. for the 68-nation International Telecommunications Consortium.

GRAHAM — Janice, in ever loving memory of our dear Janny, who passed away May 22, 1967.

"The fairest lillies are the first to fall,
The sweetest first to fade;
The fondest, dearest, best of all,
At peaceful rest is laid.
As some sweet blossom droops and dies,
When blighted by the frost
She faded from before our eyes,
And all too soon was lost;
But in God's garden, free from pain,
Where grows his fondest flowers,
We know that we shall meet again,
This sweetest bloom of ours."

—Mom, Dad, Jo-Anne and Granny.

HOGG — Myrtle Elizabeth who passed away suddenly on May 22nd, 1966, and her husband, Gilbert C. Hogg, who passed away August 12th, 1966.
Love's sweetest gift—
Remembrance.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Our sudden loss of our beloved husband and father, John Ashford, has left an emptiness in our hearts that can never be wholly filled but the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, and beautiful floral offerings, from our relatives and friends, have helped immeasurably. We are deeply grateful to Drs. K. Davidson and Helmlich and staff of Royal Jubilee. A special thanks must go to Mr. L. Sands and staff for their kindness and understanding through everything.
—Elsie Ashford, sons Bryan and Malcolmn.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends who gave their kindness, sympathy, floral offerings and cards during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father. Special thanks to Drs. Bapty and Hopkins, nurses and orderlies of the St. Joseph's Hospital, also Rev. A. E. King and Rev. C. Klassen.—Mrs. Weeks and Family.

'Cities Can't Afford All-French Schools'

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's suggestion that every major city should have a French school was described in the Commons Wednesday as extremist by John Skoberg (NDP—Moose Jaw).

"Municipal taxation across Canada today is such that we simply can't afford this luxury," Mr. Skoberg said during debate on the official languages bill.

"I know of too many senior citizens who are losing their homes as a result of taxation."

Mr. Skoberg said he supports the bill but he urged the government to "tread carefully" in implementing it.

"Do not insist that civil servants at all levels become bilingual immediately," he said.

STUDY COST CRITICIZED

Bilingualism had to start at the bottom, in schools, rather than at the top, among men who had worked for years. He criticized the cost of sending top federal employees to Toronto and Quebec for year-long language courses at public expense.

There was public fear about how the bill would be used. Every railway employe and civil servant, for instance, might be told to learn a second language late in life.

The Commons returns to the bill Friday after a one-day debate on a Creditiste motion aimed at the government's economic policies.

Mr. Skoberg's qualms were echoed by other MPs. Clifford Downey (PC—Battle River-Camrose) asked why other Canadians should swallow bilingualism when there is a trend toward unilingualism in Quebec.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said legislation guaranteeing the use of French has been introduced in Ontario and New Brunswick but a language bill in Quebec had been withdrawn.

He urged Prime Minister Trudeau to ask Premier Bertrand of Quebec to reintroduce it while Parliament debates the federal bill.

Lloyd Francis (L—Ottawa West) urged, as did Mr. Skoberg, that federal employees with long service not suffer because of the legislation.

Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) defended the bill against criticism by J. J. Thorson, former Exchequer Court president, who said its measures are unconstitutional.

Mr. MacGuigan, a professor of constitutional law, said English has been predominant in Canada but it hasn't been official. The British North America Act did not stipulate an official language. And there was nothing in Canada's constitutional history to back up Mr. Justice Thorson's argument that English was official because the act didn't say it wasn't.

'Culture of Ancestors Replaced With a Culture of Poverty'

HAMILTON (CP) — When Ojibways on a reserve play cowboys and Indians everybody wants to be a cowboy, Walter Currie, assistant superintendent of supervision for the Ontario department of education, said Wednesday.

Speaking to the sixth annual national school committee conference, Mr. Currie, an Indian, said Indian boys can't be proud of being Indians because they have never been taught anything from their past they can respect.

The culture of their ancestors has been taken away from them and replaced with a culture of poverty, he said.

"I was ashamed of being an Indian when I was a boy. All I learned about my past was that we were a cruel and savage people."

Mr. Currie said he felt that curricula should be changed and text books rewritten to show children the whole truth about the history of the Canadian Indians.

"We should have the old people come into the schools and tell the old legends in the native languages and teach the old dances and songs.

"Our dress has gone because it is impractical and unacceptable. Our names have gone because they can't be spelled. Our religion and our way of life are gone. All we have left is our language."

Mr. Currie was taking part in a three-day program involving Indian school committees from across the country. School committees are appointed groups of parents from individual Indian bands who are looking for some voice in the education of their children. They are responsible for such matters as school attendance, transportation and maintenance of reserve schools.

HOME GARDEN

Waterfalls Easy to Build

By HILDA BEASTALL

Warm weather brings a plethora of things to write about, including water. We have only to go to a park or a beach to notice how water attracts humans. Whether it is to drink, splash in or merely to be near, water has many devotees.

Hilda

Translated into garden use, a tiny pool arranged so that water tumbles down to it, splashing on a rock or two in its course, will prove a major attraction.

Not too difficult to arrange if you have an eye for art in nature, an artificial waterfall is within the scope of a small garden which has an area planned for leisure use in summer.

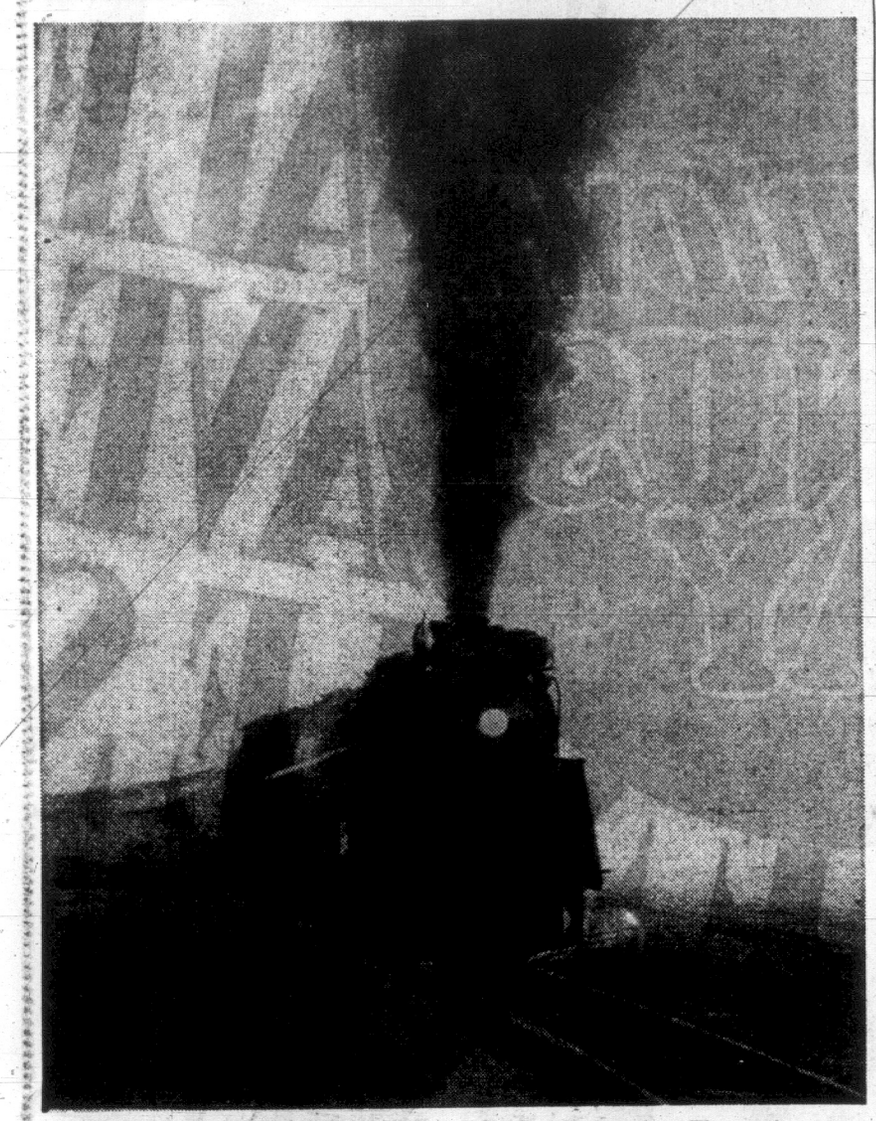

Waterfall kits are available in many sizes. They consist of an electric motor for use under water, with outdoor cord, and lengths of plastic hose to conceal among rocks and plants to provide return of the water from pool to fall.

This arrangement eliminates waste of water, for the only loss is through evaporation.

Today's pools do not depend entirely on plants for their surroundings. Rocks, too, have character, and how frequently we come across a particularly beautiful piece which needs water (or polishing) to bring out hidden beauty.

The Provincial Museum complex has a fine little pool just beside Belleville Street.

It gives one the feeling of being a reflection pool, its very austerity freshens the mind and rests the body. No distractions of plants here, though in the privacy of one's own garden, simple ferns might serve to further the restful atmosphere.

THE PAST IS GLIMPSED in the morning mist as CNR locomotive 6218, the last steam engine still operating in Canada, moves out of the London station. The engine was hauling more than a thousand public school students on a day trip to Niagara Falls. (CP Wirephoto)

Private Schools 'Fantastic' For Education

WINNIPEG (CP) — Boarding schools have a tremendous future, says John Schaffter, new headmaster of St. John's Ravenscourt school for boys in suburban Fort Garry.

Living in residence "provides a fantastic socialism," he said. "This is education in itself."

St. John's Ravenscourt's headmaster speaks from long association with boarding schools. He attended one for 12 years in England, and for the last 18 years was assistant to the preparatory school headmaster at Toronto's Upper Canada College.

Small classes and personal instruction are obvious advantages of private schools, he says, but a Cambridge University study concluded in addition that adults who studied in boarding schools grew up with more self-reliance and sensitivity to others.

"We're not just teaching a course," said Mr. Schaffter. "We're teaching the whole boy."

With a teacher-student ratio of about one to 10, students are able to build closer relationships with their masters. A teacher's role is almost that of "an uncle or father."

BOASTS OF COMMUNITY

"The terrible problem of state schools is how do you get to know the individual.

"Very often a boy in high schools feels insecure. It's important to bolster a boy's self-esteem. . . .

"They must like themselves first before they can learn to respect others."

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

The Nobility System Was Never Popular

By BOB BOWMAN

If John Graves Simcoe, the first lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada, had his way, English-speaking Canada would have adopted Britain's system of hereditary nobility.

Bowman

Even after Simcoe's departure, members of the governing class known as the "Family Compact" felt that Canada was ideal for dukes, lords, barons and knights. However, most of the settlers did not agree. Many of them had left Britain for that very reason. They used to joke about Lord Patch-in-his-Pants getting in the hay.

Titles were abolished by the House of Commons on May 22, 1919, although they were revived from 1930 to 1935 when a Conservative government led by R. B. Bennett was in power.

When Bennett retired from politics after his defeat by the Liberals in 1935, he went to live in Britain where he became a member of the House of Lords and took the title Viscount Bennett of Mickleham, Calgary and Hopewell. Calgary was where he became prominent as a lawyer and politician. Hopewell was where he was born in New Brunswick. He was a neighbor of another New Brunswick boy who became a lord in Britain: Beaverbrook who was born Max Aitken.

Mackenzie King and the Liberals abolished the granting of titles again when they were returned to power after the 1935 election.

ALMOST TRICKED

It was customary for outstanding political leaders to receive knighthoods until 1919. Queen Victoria almost tricked Wilfrid Laurier into accepting a knighthood when he went to Britain in 1897 to attend her Diamond Jubilee celebrations. When he took his place at a dinner for overseas prime ministers, she had written on his place card "Right Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier." He accepted the title as a tribute to Canadians, and not as a personal honor.

One of the reasons why Canada abolished titles in 1919 was because people objected to civilians being honored when so many men were being killed overseas. Prime Minister Sir Robert Borden said he would be glad to burn his and all Canadian titles if it were not for offending Britain's royalty. The House of Commons did it for him.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Alex Bourten, age 9, of Lithia Springs, Georgia, for his question:

Why is there no air on the moon?

Air, as we know, is made of filmy gases and gases are made of tiny, tiny particles. We can see puffs of steam and certain fumes. But most of the air around is invisible. Maybe the moon does have a few puffs of steamy fumes. In any case, we shall have to wait for that Great Day in July when the first man lands on the moon to see for himself.

In a few weeks, if all goes well, we may learn whether the moon has a few steamy plumes of steamy gases. But our experts already know for sure that the moon does not have our kind of breathable air. Our atmosphere is a thick, cloudy blanket of airy gases wrapped around the entire globe. The naked old moon has nothing to compare with it. And every curious young space-ager wonders why. The answere is not easy to understand because you have to know something about gases and why they act as they do.

Atoms and molecules are too small for the human eye to see. Those that make up gases are separate and far apart. If they were baseballs, you would have to run between them until you were out of breath. However, during the frolic you would most likely get bashed from all sides. This because gas molecules dash around at fantastic speeds. What's more, they come from all directions. They are always colliding with each other. Experts figure they must have millions of traffic collisions every seconds.

That sounds impossible. But remember, we are thinking of a strange invisible realm of minuscule particles, brimful of pep. They get their energy from heat. The warmer they get, the faster they go. And speed is related to the gravity that hugs us to the surface of the earth. Speed pulls against gravity in a tug-of-war. A speeding ball pulls away from gravity as it rises aloft. As it slows down, it loses energy and the force of gravity tugs it down to the ground. If a flying ball could zoom at seven miles per second, it would win the tug-of-war. At this speed of about 25,000 miles per hour, a plane or any other object has enough energy to escape into the vast reaches of space.

Gravity Worker

Think of those airy gas molecules. In our atmosphere, few of them ever get up enough speed to escape the earth's mighty pull. But things are different on the moon. Its gravity is only one sixth as strong as the earth's. A speed of only 5,400 miles per hour is needed to win free from the moon's weaker gravity. And scorching sunshine on the moon gets hotter than any earth day. There is enough heat energy for gas molecules on the moon to get up enough speed to escape. Sc if the moon ever did have an atmosphere, it would soon be lost like steam from a boiling kettle. Its speeding gas molecules would break free from the moon's weaker gravity and leave home.

Scientists have figured this tug-of-war down to the last detail. The speed needed to win against gravity is called escape velocity. And it depends upon the quota of gravity. Giant Jupiter is far more massive than the earth, so its gravity quota is bigger. A velocity of 38 miles per second is needed to escape its mighty pull. Mars is less massive, which means less gravity. Its escape velocity is 3.2 miles per second. At this speed, a puff of smoke, a flying ball or a plane can break free.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Donna Kay Shomon, age 11, of Lansing, Michigan, for her question:

Are rocks still forming from minerals?

Through billions of years, the earth has been mixing and remixing her minerals to model and remodel her rocks. In most cases, the various recipes are performed with slow, infinite patience. But when volcanoes erupt with fiery fury, the job is done in a dramatic hurry. Assorted minerals are thoroughly mixed in molten lava. When exposed to the cool air, these red hot rivers of molten minerals soon cool into solid layers of brand new rock.

There have been times of crustal unrest when massive layers of rock were shifted and their minerals changed into different rocks. But most rock-making has gone on at a fairly steady pace since time began. It is still going on. This year our flooded rivers swept away countless tons of silty soil. Its mineral particles were rearranged and dropped in river deltas.. Eventually these remixed minerals will become deposits of new sedimentary rocks. In the meantime, every volcanic eruption mixes assorted minerals to form rocky layers of lava.

North Welcomes Volunteer Doctor

By ELINOR READING

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto doctor who recently spent two weeks working among Indians of northwestern Ontario says he has "never seen people so receptive and so grateful for anything I did."

Dr. Alan Noble, an anesthetist, is one of a group of Toronto doctors taking part in a program to bring the services of medical specialists to a widely-scattered Indian population living in the area.

Last month, Dr. Noble worked for two weeks at the 70-bed hospital at Sioux Lookout, on the CNR mainline, 180 miles northwest of the Lakehead.

The federal government hospital serves 8,000 Indians along the rail line north to Hudson Bay and from the Manitoba border 450 miles east to Hearst, Ont.

Dr. Noble said in an interview Wednesday that what the Indians lack most in medical care are the services of specialists.

To provide specialists, members of the faculty of medicine at the University of Toronto announced in February they would try to introduce a program whereby specialists could volunteer for brief tours of duty. Costs are to be borne largely by the federal government.

Dr. Harry Bain, chairman of the faculty's department of pediatrics, said specialist consultants already are being supplied regularly in pediatrics.

BROADEN PROGRAM

Visits by other specialists have already been arranged. A hematologist and a cardiologist will visit this month and a gastro-enterologist in June.

A dental program scheduled to start June 1 will provide a year-round dentist at Sioux Lookout, one dentist to travel to nursing stations each month and a visiting consultant in a dental specialty for one week out of each month.

Dr. Noble said specialists are particularly needed because of special problems in the north.

"Certain nutritional problems in children from the Far North show up when they come to hospital," he said. "Pretty nearly every child I had for a tonsillectomy had to have two or three teeth extracted. . . .

"What is obvious is that these children who live all winter on a diet of fish and moose meat don't get enough green vegetables or vitamin supplements."

Dr. Bain said his call for volunteers early this year brought 46 responses from staff at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, and resultant publicity brought unsolicited volunteers from across southern Ontario.

Bill to Force Firms To Disclose Finances

Ra Beautiful But . . . Is It Seaworthy?

Sometime between the hours of 3 and 6 early Friday seven men and a monkey will step into a reed craft and set sail for the Americas.

The voyage of Ra will have begun.

Thor Hyerdahl and his crew will raise the UN flag over the raft and, after three to five months, hope to complete the 4,000 miles voyage from Africa to the New World.

Today the Times is carrying a special news story on the voyage by the London Observer.

Friday Heyerdahl resumes his first-person story on the epic trip.

By MICHAEL DAVIE
The London Observer

SAFI, Morocco — There has been nothing like it hereabouts since the Marx brothers spent a night at Casablanca. Here in Safi, a small port some 200 miles southwest of Gibraltar, they have launched Thor Hyerdahl's new boat, which looks even more dangerous than his last one, Kon-Tiki.

Swarms of journalists, mainly from Scandinavia, are pouring in, cursing the iron Moroccan bus seats and erratic communications, and interviewing Yvonne Heyerdahl, an indomitable blonde, about her feelings at seeing her famous husband off on what could be, as many think, his last voyage.

The new boat, Ra, which may well become as celebrated as Kon-tiki, is intended to carry Heyerdahl and six companions from Safi across the Atlantic. It is made of papyrus, or reeds, and looks beautiful, like a pale honey-colored Viking ship of straw, with a cabin aft and a high prow and stern, but it also looks desperately unseaworthy.

It is carefully designed after the style of boat used by the ancient Egyptians: The object of Heyerdahl's trip is to find out whether it would have been possible for the Egyptians to have sailed to the Americas.

Long, Narrow Wickerwork Basket

To go in it is like stepping into a long and narrow wickerwork basket. Before last weekend, it had never been in the sea, yet Heyerdahl is determined to sail it to Central America, a voyage that may take from less than three to more than four months.

It seems doubtful whether the enterprise would have got this far but for Heyerdahl's character and record. It is now more than 20 years since he made his voyage, with six companions, across the Pacific on the balsa-wood raft to show that Polynesia could have been populated from South America. The book he subsequently wrote, "The Kon-tiki Expedition," sold so many copies that, according to a Norwegian journalist here, they would, if stacked, reach twice the height of Mount Everest.

There was something about that trip, with the raft battering across to Polynesia and the god Kon-Tiki in red on the sail, after everyone had assured Heyerdahl that he would drown, which made it the most romantic sea voyage of the century and put Heyerdahl, for many people, in the same category as Lindbergh.

He is now 54 and a grandfather, tall, with blue eyes set very close together, a rather prim mouth, and grey hair brushed flat towards a bald patch at the back. He often wears spectacles.

He strides about Safi in blue open-neck shirt and trousers, taking a coil of hemp to the boatyard, giving interviews in three languages, worrying about the arrival of equipment, plunging into his ideas about the parallels between ancient Egyptian and ancient Mexican civilizations, slightly tense, as if he had very little time to spare.

Not a Chance in a Hurricane

Heyerdahl had wanted to sail by last Thursday, to avoid the Caribbean hurricane season (not that the hurrican season keeps regular hours), and he now is pressing to get away as soon as possible. Whatever else his papyrus boat may be able to stand, no one gives it much chance in a hurricane.

After Kon-Tiki, Heyerdahl became famous. He was invited to the White House and Buckingham Palace. Khrushchev visited the Kon-Tiki museum in Oslo and asked if he could accompany Heyerdahl on his next expedition, as a cook. A Russian wine was named after Kon-Tiki, and another after Heyerdahl himself.

It is hard to say what drives Thor Heyerdahl. He is not interested in money, and is bad at dealing with the financial problems of a voyage like this. Probably, the cost of this trip will run into six figures: His own travel and researches during the past two years, the cost of getting the boat built in Egypt, transport of the boat to Morocco, the fares and wages of the crew. He hopes to get most of this back, at least, from book and film rights. He is plainly not interested in being a known figure; he shows no trace of vanity.

Heyerdahl insists that he is not trying to prove anything on this voyage, but the voyage has a very precise idea behind it, nevertheless. It might be described as part one of the investigation of which the Kon-Tiki expedition was part two.

How Did They Get to Americas?

With Kon-Tiki, Heyerdahl proved that Polynesia could have been populated from Peru 1,500 years ago. Since then, this notion — which previously had been regarded as out of the question (since no one could see how men from Peru could have crossed 4,500 miles of ocean) — has become generally accepted. But even while he was floating across the Pacific in Kon-Tiki, to show how men from the Americas could have got to Polynesia, he was wondering how they got to the Americas.

The problem is this: some 3,000 years ago, advanced and comparable civilizations flourished more or less simultaneously both in the eastern Mediterranean, in Egypt, and in Mexico. Both built the same kind of stepped pyramid. Both buried their royal familes in the pyramids. Both defied their royal familes after death. Both worshipped the sun. Both allowed royal brothers and sister to marry. Both had hieroglyphic writings. Both had sophisticated calendars. Both could carry out operations on the brain.

Coninicidence, or not? One school of thought, the isolationists, argue that the mind of man was common to both places, which they say is sufficeint explanation. Another school, the diffusionists, believe that threre must have been a link.

But how could there have been a link? How could the Egyptians have crossed the Atlantic? Heyerdahl has spent a lot of time and energy researching this question.

Raft Wasn't Easy to Reproduce

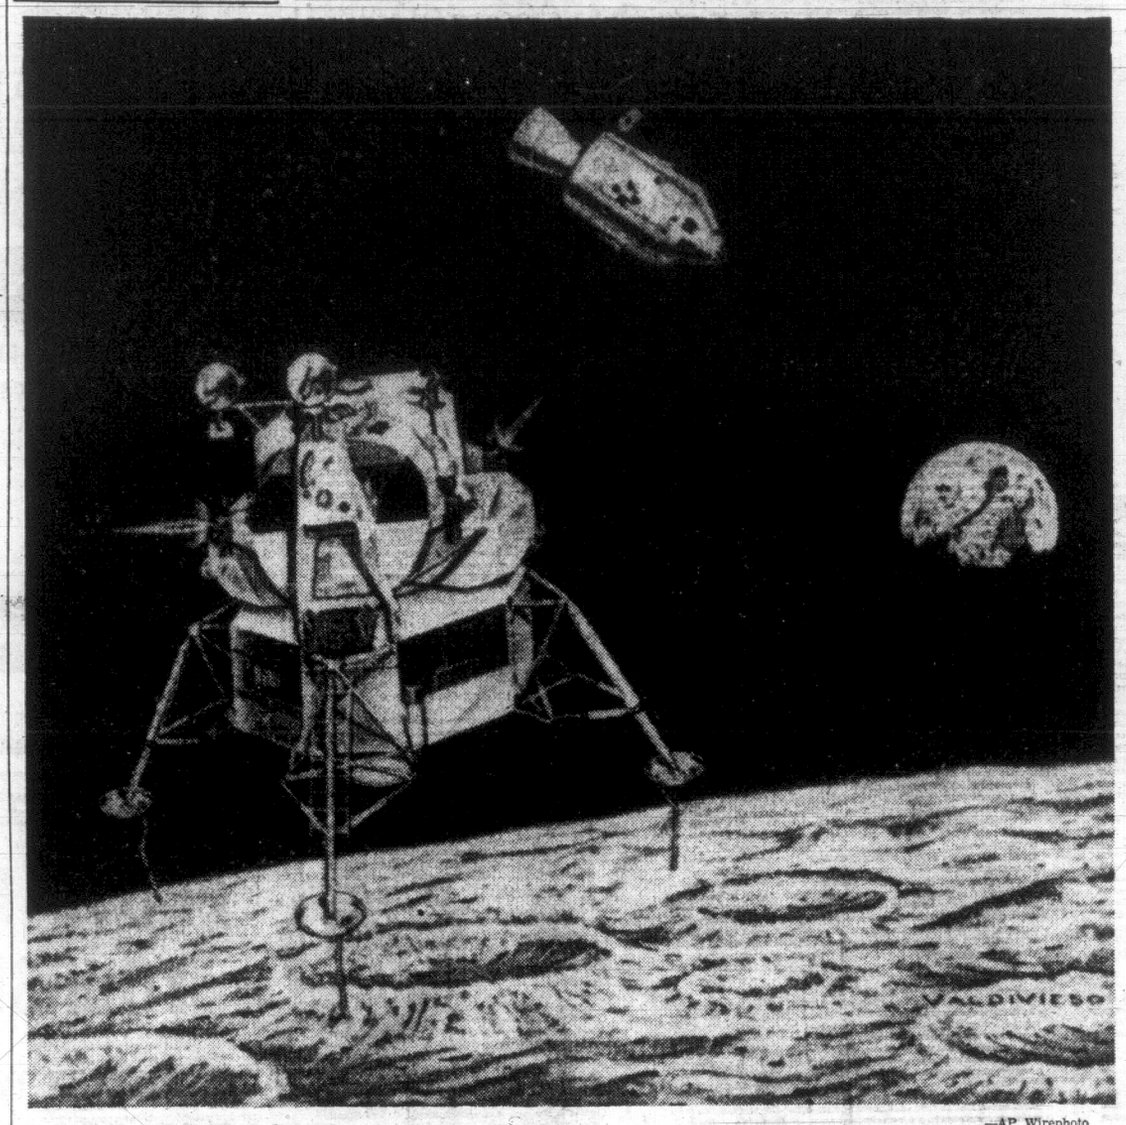

The ancient Egyptian boats — made from Papyrus, or reeds — are easy enough to find out about from paintings in tombs, but not so easy to reproduce. Heyerdahl is inclined to think that in countries where reeds crew, they were used to make all the earliest boats, and he has found this type of boat all over the world, from Ethiopia to South America and Mexico He has sailed in these boats with local people, and is convinced of their quality. But they are smaller than the one he has built, and none of them has been on the open sea.

Papyrus is somewhat like a bamboo, but instead of being

Big Companies Ottawa Target

OTTAWA (CP)—Extensive amendments to the Canada Corporations Act were introduced in the Commons today requiring companies to disclose their financial affairs publicly for the first time.

The companies affected are privately - owned corporations and foreign-controlled subsidiaries incorporated under federal law, including such big names as General Foods, Procter and Gamble, General Motors and Chrysler.

Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford, introducing the amendments for first reading, drew heavily on the new Ontario Corporations Act and recent British legislation in his 81-page, 22,000 word bill.

Its chief provisions demand:

—Public financial statements annually from all Canadian or foreign-owned firms with assets or gross revenues greater than $3,000,000;

—Separate financial reports eventually on the volume of business and profits of the major parts of big conglomerate firms;

—Adherence to strict rules protecting shareholders' interests in takeover, proxy solicitation, insider-trading by company executives, and the like;

—Admission of federal inspectors and investigators in cases suspected to involve fraud, mismanagement, or failure to make required reports.

MORE REVISIONS COMING

The bill will be followed by a more general revision of the corporations act, possibly next year. The government hopes, however, that the terms of the amended act now will become a pattern for parallel provincial legislation.

The federal bill affects only federally-incorporated firms, some 17,500. Informants said one of the country's biggest retailers—the T. Eaton Co. of Toronto—is not covered because it is provincially-incorporated.

Officials said the government does not intend to pry into the private affairs of small, family-owned firms. Its target is the big, privately-owned firms whose operations have economic significance in the country.

The government hopes to have the bill studied by a Commons committee and passed this spring, but the parliamentary work-load may force its postponement to the fall.

Pickets Halt Buses

Mainland-Island Service Suspended

A picket line went up in downtown Vancouver at 5:30 a.m. today and brought the staggering mainland-Island bus service to a standstill.

Half service had been maintained by Pacific Stage Lines, which shares the bus-ferry routes with Vancouver Island Coach Lines, since VICL drivers went on strike May 8.

The VICL drivers, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, threatened last week to extend their strike to stop the PSL drivers, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union.

The picket line around the Larwill Depot, Vancouver's central bus terminal, is being honored by all drivers and mechanics involved in Island service.

ONLY ISLAND RUNS

John Harlow, speaking for the PSL drivers, said the only routes concerned are between Vancouver-Victoria, Vancouver-Nanaimo and Victoria-Nanaimo. Mainland service is being maintained

Harlow, president of the Amalgamated Transit local in Vancouver, said some 150 PSL drivers are affected.

"We recognize a legal picket line and there is no conflict," he said. "It is simply a matter of trade union principle."

The 100 striking VICL employees are seeking a 52-cent hourly increase in a one-year contract. The bus line has offered a two-year agreement giving the drievrs 38 cents more an hour the first year and an additional 10 cents the following year.

'QUITE SUCCESSFUL'

Dick Henham, regional CBRT vice-president, today described the Vancouver picket line as "quite successful"

There have been no developments in negotiations with the bus line since talks broke off before May 8, he said. An attempt by a provincial mediator, to bring the parties to an agreement failed.

Henham said the union "certainly hopes" the picket line will put more pressure on the company to re-open discussions, but there has been no word from VICL yet

TRAIL (CP)—Mayor F. E. De Vito said Wednesday the total assessed damage by the flood here April 22 is about $2,000,000. De Vito said he gave this total to L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, who inquired on behalf of the federal government.

UAW Joins Pickets

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A group of more than 50 Canadians led by Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, will join picket lines in Delano, Calif., June 4 to 8 in support of the California grape boycott, the UAW announced today.

HALIFAX (CP) — Two retired Canadian admirals, Jeffrey Block and Hugh F. Pullen, have criticized Defence Minister Leo Cadieux's admission that the aircraft carrier Bonaventure may be decommissioned as part of the reduction in Canada's NATO forces.

Astronauts Undock For Hazardous Trip

HOUSTON (AP) — After keeping the world in suspense 40 minutes, two moon-orbiting Apollo 10 astronauts successfully undocked a fragile lunar landing machine from their command ship today and prepared to fly it on a daring descent to within 50,000 feet of the surface.

The first word on the successful separation came from Eugene Cernan in the lunar module, or LEM, with Thomas P Stafford.

"We read you loud and clear," Cernan radioed to the ground.

"We're about 30 to 40 feet away from Charlie Brown and station keeping."

"Very good, Snoopy," a relieved mission control commentator replied.

Charlie Brown and Snoopy are the radio call names for the two craft during the eight-hour separation in which Stafford and Cernan were to swoop twice to within 9.3 miles of the Sea of Tranquillity to scout a landing site where two Americans hope to land in two months.

SEEN ON TV

Clear evidence of the undocking came just seconds later when a live color television picture of the spidery LEM was flashed more than 250,000 miles to earth.

The camera was pointed out the window of the command ship, manned alone by John W. Young.

The odd-looking, fragile landing craft rotated slowly with sunlight reflecting off its aluminum-coated sides.

The two ships flew close formation several minutes while Stafford and Cernan checked all systems. They flew circles in a sort of stately orbital ballet.

The astronauts did not want to commit themselves to make the hazardous close-approach to the surface until they were certain everything was working.

The LEM was built only to operate in airless space and on the moon and could not get the two pilots back to earth.

The separation of the two space vehicles, 69 miles above the moon, occurred at 3:11 p.m EDT, as the three Apollo 10 astronauts orbited behind the lunar backside, out of radio contact with the ground.

Before the combined vehicles zipped out of radio range 40 minutes earlier, mission control noted the docking collar interface between the command and lunar modules had slipped 3½ degrees. It advised the astronauts not to undock if the slippage increased to six degrees.

Mission control officials held their breath until the two vehicles reappeared from behind the moon as two separate entities on tracking charts.

The trouble apparently lay with a docking ring on the command ship which has latches to grip a similar mechanism on the LEM. If the two rings are misaligned by more than six degrees, there is a possibility the latches would be damaged during separation, preventing redocking.

An official of North American Rockwell, builder of the command ship, said the trouble could be connected with a situation earlier today when Stafford and Cernan had difficulty venting oxygen pressure from the connecting tunnel

He said the corrective procedure, involving lowering the pressure in the LEM cabin, might have caused the misalignment.

Jordan Hits Israeli Posts

AMMAN (Reuters) — Jordanian troops destroyed two Israeli observation posts and inflicted several casualties on Israeli forces in a 45-minute exchange in the Jordan Valley today, a Jordanian military spokesman said

There were no casualties among Jordanian troops, he said.

In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said an Israeli Mirage fighter was shot down today in a dogfight with Egyptian fighters over the Red Sea port of Hurgada.

Tougher Air Pollution Control Urged by McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Liberal Leader Pat McGeer Wednesday called for creation of British Columbia Pollution Control Commission to enforce stiffened air pollution control standards.

In a speech to the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, at the University of B.C., Dr. McGeer complimented the provincial health branch and the city of Vancouver for bringing in some air pollution standards, but the Liberal leader suggested fines for offenders should be $25,000 plus $10,000 a day for continuing offences.

"I think we have to recognize that it will cost all of us something in money and convenience to clean our atmosphere up," he said.

"We will have to give up refuse burning and soon we will have to pay for exhaust control devices."

Dr. McGeer lashed out at industry, the general public, and government for contributing to air pollution.

"Even the parks and recreation people are guilty," he said, citing log burning on Vancouver beaches.

"The major polluters are a small minority in B.C., but they nevertheless constitute the most powerful forces in our province.

"The biggest corporation in our province, MacMillan Bloedel is a major offender."

Dr. McGeer said the forest giant had not responded to requests to stop pollution in south Vancouver, and its record in the Alberni Valley was "unacceptable."

"The Alberta Wheat pool near the Second Narrows bridge spews grain dust over the parts of East Vancouver. This operation is under the jurisdiction of the National Harbors Board, an arm of the Federal government."

A proposed bulk coal loading facility could open the way "for coal dust contamination of that whole North Shore area."

"I believe there should be a pollution control commission operating in an independent way from government, charged with the responsibility of enforcing (stiffened) pollution laws."

Nothin' like changin' modules in mid-space.

Oil Sides Wary: Strike Risks Grow

The impending strike against the province's major petroleum refining and distributing companies is being delicately handled by both sides, aware that carelessness could send the whole thing up in flames.

Neither company spokesmen nor representatives of striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers were able to indicate today what the implications of an industry-wide strike would be on Victoria.

One Shell refinery in Burnaby now is being picketed. The general strike by local 9601 is scheduled to begin Friday afternoon.

PLAYING BY EAR

Both parties say they cannot tell what the immediate effects of the strike will be. They will be playing by ear.

The general strike is against Shell, Imperial, Gulf and Standard oil companies, the only four producing their own products in B.C. Home, Texaco and other companies purchase oil and gasoline from other refineries.

Shell began operating its refinery in Burnaby with only professional and supervisory personnel after a picket line was set up by the union Wednesday morning. A company spokesman said there is no reason the company should not maintain full production.

Imperial will follow suit and was making plans today for an orderly takeover by supervisory and professional staff. It is believed Standard will do the same, while Gulf has announced it will shut down and bring oil and gasoline in by tankers from an undisclosed source, probably Venezuela.

But the hitch, so far as the

"I fear you have missed the point re leisure," she writes. "One never retires. He may quit his paying job, but that doesn't retire him. You have overlooked hobbies and interests."

She goes on to state that she gave up her job well before she was 65, "and I've never lived such an occupied, intersting life."

A letter a day is one of her sustainers. Another is a two-mile daily walk.

Good for her say I, and for all other young-minded pensioners who refuse to let retirement daunt them! But Miss Moore ignores my main point, which is that enforced retirement for the vigorous man in his forties can be one of life's cruelest burdens.

In rare instances, a man in this spot may turn a hobby to profitable use and rescue himself. For most, this escape-hatch is not open.

"It's rough on the self-respect," one unwillingly retired man told me. And another, "Being without a job makes me feel smaller."

We can't look to government for all our answers. But I wish that government would spend less concern on the able-bodied man who won't work, and more on the guy who asks only the chance.

A check-up call to Jack Wasserman, admired Sun columnist and radio open-liner, confirms that he will be losing his CJOR 9 a.m.-to-noon spot about mid-June.

Into what has been Wasserman's air-time these many months will step bull-voiced Pat Burns, whom I last heard on Montreal's CKGM.

"There's a suggestion," Wasserman told me dryly, "that Burns was too volatile for that volatile area."

Wasserman's CJOR contract doesn't run out until the end of the year. He intends to honor it, even though not yet sure how the station proposes to use his talents.

I'm sorry about the change that will see urbane, sharply intelligent and firmly ethical Jack Wasserman shoved over to make room for Burns.

As a columnist, Jack shines brightest, but he has been running a thoroughly civilized show. A lot of listeners who prefer the civilized approach are going to miss him if he's denied program space.

One day a couple of weeks ago, 14-year-old Jim Walters of 908 Alexander Street found a baby robin that had tumbled out of some nearby nest.

Jim, who goes to Esquimalt junior secondary, nestled the young one in his hands, and searched for its home tree.

When he failed to find it, he took the fledgling home and assumed the role of substitute parent.

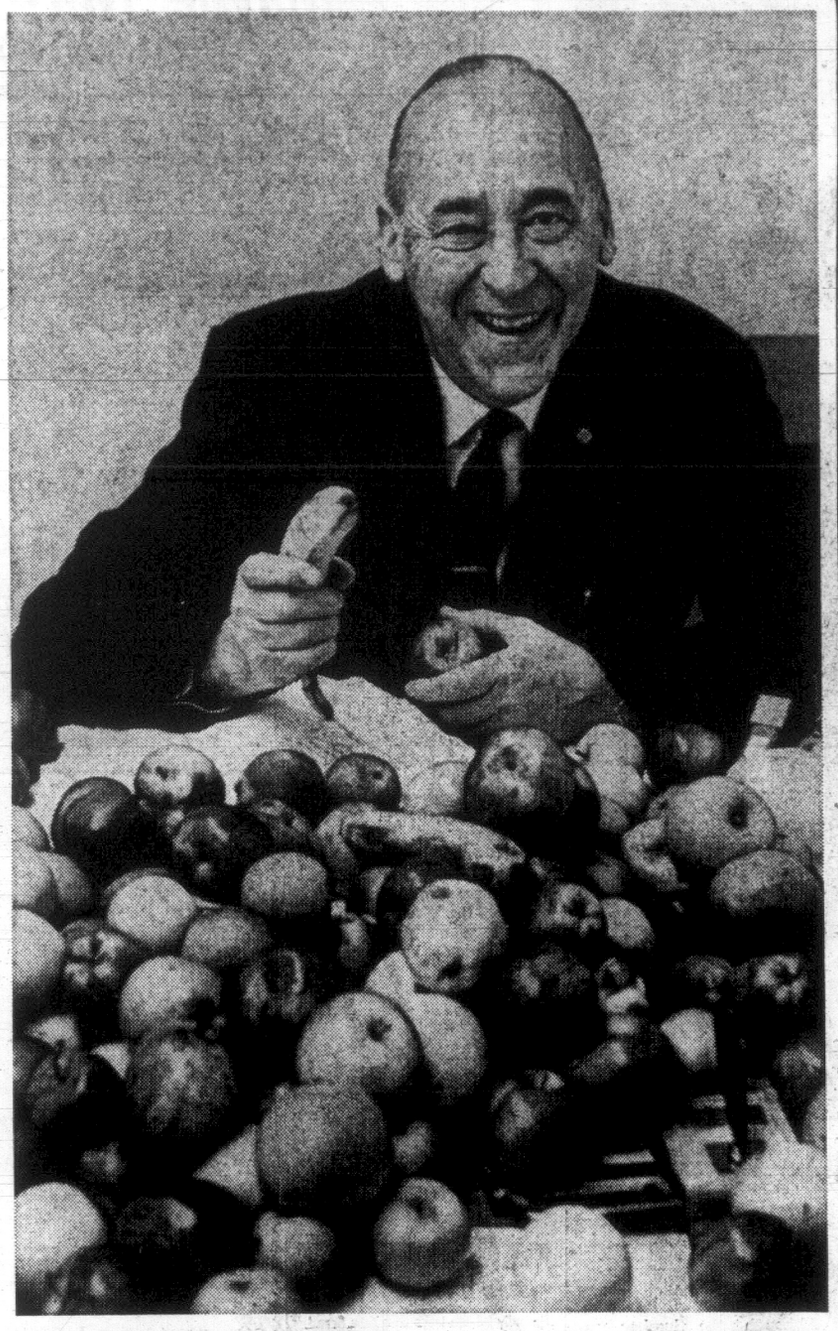

He made a nest by rolling a scrap of wire screen into a cylinder. This he lined with soft odds and ends. Then, after naming the robin Wilbur, he went off to dig worms for it in the family garden.

A couple of days later, the mother robin turned up with a worm of her own. From that point, the feeding of Wilbur became a shared project.

"We'd always believed that this sort of thing didn't happen," said Jim's mother, Mrs. Margaret Walters. "But it went on every day, and toward the end it became pretty competitive.

A couple of times last week, Wilbur followed his mother on short, earth-bound excursions, from which he returned to his 'nest'.

Finally he discovered that wings are to use, and mother and fledgling took to the air together. They haven't been back, to Jim's regret. At the same time, he's mighty pleased that he and the mother between them managed to get Wilbur air-borne.

APPLES FOR THE TEACHER came in by the hundreds this morning when Esquimalt Senior Secondary School students, organized by Grade 12 student Ian Langejan, found their own way of honoring principal Clive E. Kelly, 2760 Roseberry Avenue. Kelly has spent all his teaching career at the school, joining the staff in 1927 as a mathematics and science teacher. He retires at the end of the school year after being principal for about 30 years. The bumper apple harvest took Kelly by surprise. He went on the intercom to announce that he'd "probably set up a shop so that students could buy them back!" —(Times photo by Bill Halkett).

100 Families on List Before Homes Start

Chant Wields Spade In Ground-Breaking

With ground-breaking ceremonies scheduled for the Rose-Blanshard housing scheme Monday the accommodation waiting list already surpasses the 100 mark.

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant will wield the golden shovel at 11 a.m. Monday to get the $2.4 million housing construction under way.

But the 184 housing units contractor George Wheaton hopes to have ready for occupancy in less than a year will not end the housing crisis in Victoria.

In fact, judging by the volume of inquiries and requests for accommodation flooding into city hall, the 184 modern units will hardly cause a dint in the long list of families seeking a place to live.

Officially city hall is not yet inviting applicants for homes to list their names. But city manager Dennis Young said this morning that the volume of calls had necessitated the compiling of at least a temporary list.

With between 30 and 40 housing units already committed to displaced families and 59 names added as of today the city hall list now totals 99 inquiries or positive applications.

Young stressed that the city will not control the allocation of the accommodations once the project is completed.

"That headache, and we expect it to be a major one, will belong to the B.C. Housing Management Commission," Young said. "A local branch of the commission has not yet been established but it will be in the not too distant future.

"It will be its responsibility to get applications and decide just who gets the accommodation."

He added that the city list is probably just one of three being compiled.

"I don't doubt that the provincial government and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation are getting similar inquiries or requests for accommodation," he said. "I'm sure that long before the houses are competed the list will be well over the 184 units to be made available."

INFORMATION ONLY

The city hall list is being compiled, Young said, for information purposes only.

"There is nothing we can do but keep a record of the names of the families inquiring," he said. "Eventually an official application form will be drawn up and the people on all lists will be sent a copy of the form.

"From that point on the local housing management group will decide who gets priority."

Young said it would have been easier for the city to tell home seekers that they were applying to the wrong authority.

"But that seemed rather cold-blooded," he said. "We treat each caller with courtesy, explain our position, take their names and drop them a note telling them that their names have now been officially recorded to receive an application form."

MORE LISTS?

Young added that he presumed CMHC and the provincial authorities were following similar procedures.

When the project officially gets under way next week CMHC representatives and Mayor Hugh Stephen will be on hand for the sod-turning ceremony.

As soon as the golden spade is removed Wheaton will move his heavy equipment onto the site to commence actual construction of an urban renewal program three-years in the melting pot.

At the peak of activity Wheaton said he anticipates having around 100 craftsmen on the job with the target for the first homes to be ready for occupancy Jan 1, 1970.

From the start the main target will be complete framing and roofing of all units before the weather breaks in the fall. Such a mass construction move will permit interior work to continue through the fall rains and winter weather.

It is anticipated that between 20 and 40 units will be available to the first families towards the end of December.

Monday's ground-breaking ceremonies will be held at Hillside and Blanshard.

Total cost of the construction program is borne by the federal and provincial governments with Ottawa paying 75 per cent of the cost.

Operating costs are carried by three levels of government with the federal government again picking up 75 per cent of the tab while the province and the city share the remaining 25 per cent.

Kiernan Shrug Over Bottles Angers Elford

Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford today said Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan "misses the point completely" about her proposal for fighting litter with mandatory deposits on all beverage containers.

She drafted an Oak Bay resolution passed recently by the Vancouver Island Association of Municipalities which was shrugged off by Kiernan Wednesday as unenforceable and useless.

In answer Mrs. Elford claimed there was virtually no litter problem in years past when bottled drinks had a two-cent returnable deposit because children would scour the countryside to pick up the discarded ones.

"But nowadays two cents a bottle doesn't attract them and the answer is to make it mandatory at a realistic figure —five cents on all bottles and 2½ cents on all beverages in cans," she said.

NEEDS A TRY

"This certainly could be done by legislation and since the litter problem will grow I think it certainly deservies a try by the minister."

Mrs. Elford also quarreled with Kiernan's contention that even if non-returnable bottles could be eliminated it still wouldn't end the major litter problem posed by discarded cigarette and confection wrappers.

"No child cuts his foot on cigarette wrappers on the beach," she said.

"And it's a known fact these non-returnable bottles are poorer quality so they break more easily."

She said the alternative to an economic incentive for return of empty bottles and cans to the sellers is raising property taxes to pay for cleaning up increasing litter of public areas.

"And a study shows that it cost 30 cents to pick up one container because of the staff costs," she said.

ROYAL VISIT to Victoria will be made June 3 by Australian beauty queen Suzanne McClelland, 20, of Perth. Her visit here will be a side-trip during a Vancouver stay June 2 to June 5. Her title is Miss Australia.

BURNING MATCHES DROPPED THROUGH WINDOW OF CAR

A car fire in the city Wednesday night is believed to have been deliberately set.

About $200 damage was done to the front seat of the vehicle owned by Tom Curtis who parked outside S. J. Willis School where he was attending a meeting. The fire was reported about 10:30 p.m.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said the driver's window was down about an inch and someone had dropped several burning matches on the seat. Curtis doesn't smoke, he said.

Simon Fraser Grads Include 17 Islanders

There are 17 Vancouver Island residents among more than 600 students receiving degrees at convocation ceremonies Saturday at Simon Fraser University.

The ceremonies mark the end of the seven-year chancellorship of Dr. Gordon M. Shrum who retires this month.

He will be succeeded by Kenneth P. Caple.

Dr. Shrum will confer degrees on five Victoria residents. Lorne Eugene Ellingson, 1035 Belmont, will receive his master of arts degree.

Victoria residents receiving a bachelor of arts degree incoude Robert David Chaworth-Musters, 1764 Oak Bay; Patrick James Colbert, 4072 Cedar Hill Cross Road; Robert Richard Wicks, 2161 Haultain; and Sabra Joan Woodworth, 5079 Lockenhaven.

David James Reid of Chemainus will receive a master of arts degree.

Bachelor of Arts degrees will also be conferred on Reginald Gilstrap Bennet of Comox; Ronald Murray Erickson of Lake Cowichan; Richard Brooke George of Sidney; Robin Duncan Hood of Crofton; Lisle Rae Hutton (honors) of Campbell River; Royce Enciu Shook of Nanaimo; David Simon Thomas of Chemainus; Brenda Louise Webster of Alberni; George Robert Wellwood (honors) of Comox; Claire Louise Hamilton of Nanaimo; and Lawrence Melvin McKenzie, of Nanaimo.

United States Warships Here

Two American naval destroyers steamed into Esquimalt harbor this morning and will be docked in HMCS Dockyard until Monday.

The ships are USS Fechteler and USS Picking. Both are attached to Destroyer Division 192, based at Long Beach, Calif. and have crews of 266 and 228.

Both ships will be open to the public Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. in HMC Dockyard.

SHUTDOWN IN WEEK SEEN BY LOCAL SUPERMARKETS

A supermarket spokesman today said Greater Victoria supermarkets could be shut down in a week.

"We fear, anticipate, expect" that the meatcutters of the Food and Allied Worders' Union will serve strike notice on 14 area supermarkets operated by Safeway, Super-Valu and Shop Easy.

The meatcutters are demanding their 40-hour week be shortened to a four-day, 36-hour week and a $1 an hour increase on the current $3.80 journeyman rate.

Discussions between the union, representing 700 Vancouver employees and 125 Victoria employees, broke down Tuesday and the union served strike notice on a Food Fair in Richmond. Food Fair is a Shop Easy operation.

LOCK-OUT NOTICE

The supermarket companies replied to the threat by serving lockout notice on all Vancouver-area employees.

The strike in Richmond is scheduled to begin at 4:15 p.m. Friday, the lockout can start at 11:20 Saturday.

The stores say they are confining the lockout to the mainland because the strike is being confined to the mainland.

George Johnston, secretary-manager of the meatcutters, warned that this situation could change rapidly.

"At the moment Victoria is not involved in the lockout because we have not given strike notice there," he said in an interview. "But these things change from hour to hour."

SUPPORT CLAIMED

He said his union has "general support" from the teamsters as well as full support from the Retail Food and Drug Clerks, Bakery and Confectionary Workers and Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees.

That was sufficient to close any store struck by the meatcutters.

The supermarket spokesman, a senior Safeway executive in Vancouver, said Johnston has been so busy setting up the Vancouver strike this week that he has had not time to consider similar action in Victoria.

Whether Victoria will see a corresponding lockout of meatcutters "depends entirely on union strategy," said the spokesman.

The stores were prepared to meet "the challenge of the union" in Victoria in the same way they were meeting it on the mainland.

"But you have a week's breathing space, maybe more," he said.

The union claims the stores broke off negotiations and Johnston says he is willing to enter talks but the stores must make the initial approach.

The stores see it differently. They say Johnston entered the meeting last Tuesday and said that if the stores were not prepared to grant the 36-hour week immediately, further talks were futile.

University Fee Jump 'Not Needed'

Education Minister Donald Brothers today said he doesn't see any reason for increases in university tuition fees next fall.

He added that he had been in touch with University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University officials this week "and they have not even considered any increase in fees."

But he told reporters here he still hasn't asked University of B.C about its plans for fees.

Brothers said it was ridiculous for anyone to argue that the province's total $65 million operating grants for the three universities in the coming year represented any cutback.

$12 MILLION MORE

"I think it should be pointed out that is $12 million more than the previous total grant, so I don't see how anyone can say the universities are being short-changed," he said.

"Regarding the increase in fees — I see no need for it."

He was answering reporters queries regarding Opposition Leader Tom Berger's claim he knew the breakdown of the still-secret allocation of the grant to the three campuses would force UBC to raise its tutition fees.

Dry Forests Pose Continuing Hazard

The forest fire situation "remains serious throughout the province" today.

A forest service spokesman said the hazard rating ranges from moderate to extreme in all parts of B.C. except the south-east corner of the Kootenays.

A total of 131 fires were burning in the B.C. Woods at press time and more than 600 men were fighting the flames.

They quelled 43 fires overnight but 33 new ones broke out at the same time.

Vancouver forest district, which includes Vancouver Island, reported 22 fires burning today including four new ones.

Largest fire on the Island, west of Cowichan Lake, was "contained" Wednesday afternoon after burning through 450 acres and some 75 men were mopping it up this morning, the spokesman said.

ENTHUSIASM of girls drumming up interest in their drum corps is demonstrated by Cathie Jacob, Donna Kendall, Wendy Marshall and Kelly Searle, from left. They are getting ready for a Wake-a-thon. They'll sit in a store window in Town and Country Shopping Centre, starting Friday at 8 a.m. and endeavor to stay awake until backers have contributed $3,000 to buy a bus. The bus will take their Thunderbird Corps on trips, during which they can all sleep. Bidders may back the girls by phoning 479-5551 and offering donations on a per-hour basis. (Times photo).

Consult U.S. On ABM Sites Expert Says

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. G. R. Lindsey, chief of the defence research analysis establishment, said today that if Canada wants protection from the American ABM system, it should consult the U.S. before final decisions are made on base sites.

". . . It's their system and we're not being very co-operative about it at the moment," he told the Commons defence committee.

Dr. Lindsey was replying to Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) who suggested the Canadian population along the U.S. border would be left in an "extremely disadvantageous position" by the location of the anti-ballistic missiles of the proposed U.S. Safeguard system.

Earlier in the session Carl Legault (L—Nipissing) asked whether Dr. Lindsey, in his testimony and in a paper presented to the committee Wednesday, was trying to "sell" the idea that the sites should be farther north to prevent interceptions over populated areas of Canada.

MIGHT BE BETTER

Dr. Lindsey said he wasn't trying to sell anything. He was only trying to explain that analysis by his branch showed the sites might provide better protection farther north.

The question of the value of moving the sites farther north has never been investigated, he said. He supposed the Americans had not asked Canada's opinion and Canada had not offered it.

For phase 1 of the Safeguard system, involving two bases to protect Minutemen missiles on the U.S. Prairies, it might be difficult to change.

But he did not think it was too late to change sites for the remaining 10 sites of the system.

Gerald Laniel (L—Beauharnois) suggested Canadians were dreaming if they thought the Safeguard system might be aimed to protect Canadian cities.

Dr. Lindsey said he believes the American plan for final deployment of the system was intended to protect American cities. Canada had not asked whether the system would cover Canadian cities, but it probably would be physically possible if the sites were adjusted.

OUTLINES OBJECTIONS

In his appearance before the committee Wednesday, Dr. Lindsey was accused by David Lewis, NDP deputy leader, of trying to make a case for the ABM system.

Today, in response to a question from Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) he outlined principal objections that have been made to it.

The first was that the system is not necessary; that U.S. deterrent strength already is sufficient to ensure a reply to any Soviet attack.

This argument certainly is true today, he said, although it might not be the case in 1974-75 when Safeguard would be in operation.

Another argument was that the system would not work because it could never be tested.

There had been American tests in the Pacific in which he believed 11 of 14 ABMs had come close enough to ICBMs to destroy them, he said.

But warheads had not been used and this did not prove the ICBMs would have been destroyed. The defenders in this case also were expecting the attack and there were no decoys.

average used of petroleum products is concerned, is not with the refinery strike, but with the strike by OCAW against oil company marketing operations.

Tom Phillips, president of the local which is also certified on Vancouver Island, said in an interview today that OCAW picket lines could be set up to prevent distribution to industiral clients in Vicotia, or some individual gas statsions could be picketed.

He said the union was meeting with the B.C. Federation of Labor to determine whether an over-all declaration that petroleum products are "hot" will be made.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES ENDANGERED

Phillips explained that this could hamstring essential municipal services such as fire, police, hospitals and public works.

He said the union is making an offer to the companies to permit trucks to supply these particular users and is even willing to supply drivers

Should the union decide to leave gas stations alone, feeling that pressure on the companies by stopping industrial deliveries is sufficient, it is expected there will be enough gasoline and home oil supplies throughout the province to keep wheels rolling and home fires burning.

The union turned down a pay boost offer by Gulf of between 51 and 53 cents an hour over two years on rates ranging from $2.95 to $4.07 an hour.

The union has been seeking a $1 hourly pay raise over the same period and members voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action to back their demands.

. . . RA

hollow it has a tough, spongy interior. Heyerdahl's boat is built, basically, of bundles of papyrus reeds bound into logs, which are then themselves bound together and shaped to produce a vessel with a curved hull.

He was called his boat RA, because RA is the name of the Egyptian sun god, and it is also the name used for the sun in all the Polynesian Islands. (Heyerdahl is too strict with himself to allow that that might prove anything, but it might suggest something.) The boat will have a sail, and on it will be painted a sun—as his raft had the face of Kon-tiki.

There are a lot of people here who regard RA with the greatest suspicion. It leaks. The papyrus will get soggy and sink. The water will get into the bottom of the boat, and prevent steerage, so that the vessel will broach to in a storm instead of keeping her bows to wind and sea and get smashed. RA certainly looks very small and frail: Only 16 yards long and only 16 feet wide at the widest point.

Same Doubts Expressed on Kon-Tiki

Heyerdahl pays little attention to these doubts. He remembers that at exactly the same stage of the Kon-tiki voyage experienced mariners were saying the same sort of thing. Kon-tiki, he says, taught him to have confidence in the worst boats. "The safety of ancient vessels lies in precisely the characteristic that modern man thinks is most dangerous: That it leaks. I have no faith in a hull that sinks as soon as it leaks."

His own voyage, Heyerdahl surmises, will take between three and five months, according to how much water the boat absorbs. If it floats high, then it can make full use of the trade winds, and will get there in less than three months. If it settles deeply, then the trade winds will give very little help, and they will be relying mainly on the current, which may need four months or more. He does not mind where he ends up.

There is a further imponderable: The steering mechanism, two oars parallel, is copied, according to Heyerdahl, with great precision from Egyptian models, but no one alive has ever actually tried to work anything of the kind.

And Heyerdahl isn't having a trial run: "The trip itself is the trial," he says.

'Productive' Talks Forecast in Paris

PARIS (AP) — The United States said today a basis now exists "for productive discussions of the key issues" at the Vietnam peace talks. But North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front renewed their attack on parts of President Nixon's eight-point plan.

The 18th full-scale session of the talks produced no movement on the controversial issues of troop withdrawals and a political settlement—the questions that have overshadowed the discussions from the beginning.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge acknowledged that these were areas of disagreement along with international supervision of troop withdrawals. He urged that efforts must be begun at once to find a solution to these problems while detailed discussions proceed on other questions.

Noting the Viet Cong's 10-point peace plan, Lodge said both sides "seem to be taking a common approach" on the reunification of Vietnam, restoration of the demilitarized zone and respect for that provisional military demarcation line and prisoners-of-war.

Lodge referred to the fact that the Viet Cong's plan calls for discussion of the prisoner-of-war issue. But he denounced North Vietnam at today's session for refusing to disclose the list of U.S. prisoners it holds.

Brothers Wants Talks For Teachers

Education Minister Donald Brothers today said he will try to arrange a meeting with Powell River teachers before they carry out their one-day strike threat next week.

"They're an autonomous group and they can do as they wish," Brothers told reporters here.

"But I'm going to attempt to arrange a meeting with their executive because I want to hear what they have to say."

All of Powell River's 220 teachers have decided to stay off work May 29 in order to make a mass canvass of householders to explain how the provincial government's education financing formula had hurt operation of local schools by forcing operating budget cuts this year.

'Forces To Be Cut By 10,000'

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says Canada's 98,000-man defence forces will be reduced by more than 10,000 and the nuclear-armed air division will be withdrawn from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Europe.

The newspaper says Defence Minister Leo Cadieux will propose withdrawal of the 3,800-man division by the end of 1970 at next week's NATO ministerial conference in Brussels, followed by replacement of the 6,200-man mechanized brigade in Germany by a mixed air and ground force of approximately 4,900 without nuclear weapons.

The newspaper says the overall reduction in the armed forces will be taken care of by normal retirements.

Blood Donors Needed For Clinic

Canadian Red Cross Society officials report that 550 donors of blood are needed immediately to meet current needs.

Servicemen will have a chance to help solve the emergency situation when a blood donor clinic is held Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the old gymnasium at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

Monday and Tuesday will see clinics being run at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort St., from 6:30 to 9 p.m. each evening. Monday a clinic will also be held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, an afternoon clinic will be held 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

A special clinic has also been held in Vancouver to help meet the emergency.

UBC Enrolment Curb Proposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Levelling-off the University of British Columbia's enrolment at 27,500 and tougher entrance requirements were recommended Wednesday night to UBC's senate-in the first draft of a report on long-range objectives of the university.

The report, by a committee headed by anthropology professor Dr. Cyril Belshaw, suggested undergraduate enrolment, now 16,500, be curtailed at 22,000 and the number of graduates be allowed to double to 5,000.

It also endorsed an earlier senate committee suggestion that first-year entrance standards be raised to 65 per cent on high school exams from the current 60 per cent.

Previous reports by university groups have said UBC's student population, if it increased unchecked at previous rates, would hit 34,000 by 1975.

Dr. Belshaw said the report deals only with the more urgent matters facing the university and gives the senate a chance to reach some decisions by fall.

PNE Walkout Closes Playland

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 90 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees went on strike early today against the Pacific National Exhibition.

The strike by PNE ouside workers was not expected to affect the inter-high school track meet at Empire Stadium today but will shut down the playland area and halt preparations for the 1969 Exhibition.

Dave Werlin, president of the 1,100-member Vancouver local of the union, said Wednesday night the PNE had refused to re-open contract negotiations.

Racing will continue as usual at Exhibition Park regardless of the current Pacific National Exhibition strike, Harry Filion, publicity director of the B.C. Jockey Club, told the Times in an official statement today.

"The Jockey Club is entirely independent of the Pacific National Exhibition and therefore is not involved in the PNE employees wage dispute," Filion said.

Cyclist Hurt On Highway

A youth about 19 or 20 was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital late this morning following an accident on the Pat Bay Highway at Mt. Newton XRoad.

A hosptial spokesman said he was riding on a motorcycle and had been admitted to hospital with serious injuries.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Warm, sunny weather is forecast to continue in nearly all sections of the province today and Friday. However, the ridge of high pressure west of Vancouver Island will weaken gradually during the next 48 hours as a fairly active disturbance moves into the Gulf of Alaska from the southwest. This system will spread showers to the north coast Friday morning and patchy cloudiness to northern Vancouver Island in the afternoon or evening.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Those who think men and women are equally sensitive to physical discomfort brought on by outside influences, such as the weather, haven't learned the results of research by biometeorologists. Women are more sensitive than men to weather change, especially if the change is to colder weather.

If the temperature to day is 75, for example, and drops all of a sudden, your wife probably will first notice the change when the mercury gets down to 69, a drop of six degrees. You may hardly notice it, if at all, until it drops another degree. Then you, too, will be likely to say, "Hey, it's getting colder."

If you and your wife are in normal health, you will enjoy the change, provided you haven't planned to take an early season swim. You will feel more like working and so will she.

There is a kind of man who tries.

Falling off a horse is one thing. Falling with a horse is quite another. A steeplechase rider knows the hazards well, and still pushes his mount and himself to the utmost. The full shot. There is a whisky like that. A whisky that gives the full shot in taste and remarkably full flavour. Gold Stripe.

It will put 100% full, laughing taste in your mouth with every sip. And quietly leave. Without biting. If you want a little honest taste, maybe you should try Gold Stripe.

And get the full shot.

Oil Imports Leave U.S. Vulnerable Expert Warns

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Texan warned a Senate subcommittee Wednesday that any revised oil import quota program should be as "flexible" as possible but if it leads eventually to dependence on foreign oil the United States "is going to be in a dangerous position."

Jim C. Langdon, member of the Railroad Commission of Texas, rejected Chairman Philip A. Hart's suggestion that in the interest of national security it might be wise to leave much of the proven U.S. oil untouched and rely on cheap, foreign oil for as long as possible.

The Michigan Democrat suggested a sort of "standby industry" in the U.S supported by subsidy. He emphasized he was not suggesting the U.S. should rely entirely on imports. He contended that about 95 per cent of the U.S. industry could in fact compete if an open market replaced present import restrictions on cheaper foreign oil which some sources have estimated cost the American consumer as much as $7 billion annually.

Langdon, whose commission regulates the oil industry in Texas, told the subcommittee on anti-trust and monopoly that if the domestic industry is reduced to any large extent it could never be revived in time of national emergency.

It would be too expensive to put small wells, which now played a vital role in the country's supply, back into operation.

Survival of Press Deep Quebec Concern

QUEBEC (CP) — The plight of small regional newspapers was aired Wednesday before the national assembly's committee on freedom of the press by an association grouping 86 French-language weeklies, including seven outside Quebec province.

Concentration of press ownership could result in the death of regional newspapers, said Les Hebdos du Canada in a brief to the committee.

Such concentration is inevitable economically and even desirable because it leads to "a more modern press," said association president Yves Gagnon.

However it also raised several problems, including the danger that a media group might set its rates "to drain off almost the entire advertising market."

"As far as we are concerned in the regional weekly press," Mr Gagnon said, "a 20-per-cent drop in circulation or in advertising would risk destroying at least 50 per cent of the papers."

STATE HAS RIGHT

The association's brief said the state has "the right and the duty" to intervene, but Mr. Gagnon said intervention by the government should be exercised only when "absolutely necessary."

Another group blamed "the capitalist system" for the difficulties faced by small newspapers.

The 90-member Syndicat des Ecrivains du Quebec, formed in 1967 to defend authors' rights, said in its brief capitalism in newspaper ownership and operation should be replaced by a co-operative system including profit-sharing for journalists.

Jacques A. Lamarche, president of the group, said 400 Quebec daily and weekly newspapers have folded since 1900 and recommended that the government, credit unions and the public combine to form a special company to promote newspaper co-ops.

Pierre Laporte (L—Chambly), a former newspaper man, termed the proposal "absolutely utopic," but admitted that feasibility studies had not been made

The committee, which held its first hearing May 7, adjourned to May 28 when proposals for a press council grouping owners, journalists and the public will be examined.

The committee was established after Yves Michaud (L—Montreal Gouin), former editor-in-chief of the weekly La Patrie, described the Desmarais group of companies in the national assembly last December as "master of the Quebec press" and said it exercised a monopoly.

Mr. Michaud was referring to La Compagnie de Publication La Presse Ltee. and Les Entreprises Gelco Ltee., companies controlled by Montreal financier Paul Desmarais, chairman of power Corp. of Canada Ltd.

Construction Assn.

Canadian Construction Association president Mark Stein, of Montreal, visits Victoria Friday, the first visit of an CCA president to the B.C. capital in five years.

He will be accompanied by association vice-president Bob Saunders and officers of the B.C. affiliate, Amalgamated Construction Association, whose president is William Winckler and executive director Joseph Bishop of Vancouver.

They will meet with local ACA representatives, including Michael Griffin, president, and labor department spokesmen.

Reitman's

Reitman's Canada Ltd. will be opening three new stores in the next few months and plans to open five more in 1970.

President Sam Reitman said "other selective locations are being considered both for 1969 and 1970."

The women's wear retailer now operates 222 stores in 91 communities.

Reitman said sales for the first quarter ended April 30 were up 7½ per cent.

IDB Loans

The Industrial Development Bank reports loans and investments totalled $396 million on April 30, a net increase for the month of $2.85 million.

The bank, a subsidiary of the Bank of Canada, provides financing for small and medium-sized businesses that cannot find funds from commercial sources.

Commonwealth

Harold S. Sigurdson, receiver of the bankrupt Commonwealth Savings Plan Ltd., has filed suit for $87,000 against Victory Memorial Gardens Ltd.

Sigurdson is claiming $48,519 which he says is owing on a loan made by Commonwealth Savings Plan to the defendant and $38,547 which is due on a promissory note dated April 1966, with interest at 8 per cent.

Kaiser Resources

Kaiser Resources Ltd. Wednesday yielded to threats by delta Mayor Dugald Morrison and took out building permits for construction of a deepsea port at Roberts Bank.

Mayor Morrison said Saturday he would shut down the operation if the permits were not taken out.

Bank Debits

Value of Greater Victoria bank debits during April took a slight drop from March but was still $205.6 million ahead of April 1968.

Canadian Bankers' Association reports individual bank accounts for the month were debited to a total of $630.9 million, against $425.3 million a year ago and $633 million in March.

The figure represents transactions in the private sector only, through personal savings, chequing and current accounts.

No Unrest for Engineers Because Courses Relevant

You can count most engineering students out of the current student unrest on North American campuses.

The reason?

Engineering students find their courses more meaningful in terms of the kind of function they will have in society.

That's the opinion of Dr. William Everitt, dean emeritus of the faculty of engineering, University of Illinois.

Dr. Everitt was in Victoria Wednesday to visit friends after he gave the inaugural address at the opening of a new engineering building at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"For the most part the engineering students have felt a relevancy for what they are doing."

VALUES NOT REFLECTED

He said students in the humanities are more discontent than their colleagues in the sciences because the values implicit in their courses are not reflected in the way the universities and other institutions are run

"Among liberal and fine arts students you find a lot of recruits for the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society), because there is a certain lack of meaning to their studies—there's a feeling of despair."

The dean had mixed feelings about the end result of present turmoil on campuses, but was generally optimistic.

"Some of it is dangerous, but on the other hand the students are more alive than they used to be."

Dr. Everitt, 69, was dean of the engineering faculty from 195? to December, 1968.

INVENTED ALTIMETER

He is also a former head of the department of electrical engineering at the Urbana campus of the University of Illinois, and his inventions include contributions to automotive telephony, a radio altimeter for aircraft, and a directional antenna system.

He is chairman of the telecommunications committee of the National Academy of Engineering, which is concerned with the uses of telecommunications in improverished communities, such as the computer in education of ghetto children.

Dr Everitt said engineering has changed from a "learned profession" before the Second World War to a "learning profession" in the post-war years.

"Before the war the engineer was an expert who used to work with a slide rule—but recent developments, in transistors and computers for example, have forced engineers to become familiar with a whole new gamut of concepts."

NEW ROLE

An example of the engineer's new role is a project carried out at Urbana where engineers worked with brain surgeons to develop an instrument that would eliminate the scalpel from certain operations.

The instrument was designed to project sound waves through the skull to destroy some kind of disagreeable brain matter.

Illinois engineers are also engaged in a project entitled PLATO, which involves adapting computers to teaching.

"Some people shudder at the idea of using computers in teaching, but it actually leaves the teacher free to do something more important.

"The computer has infinite patience."

Aussies Go Dry

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — About 150,000 workers were on strike in New South Wales state today, but it was the lack of a thousand or so barmaids, barmen and club stewards that hurt the most.

The strike was part of a series of 24-hour walkouts protesting the clauses in legislation making wildcat strikes illegal.

'Straight to Hell' For Separate Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Wednesday that separation would lead Quebec "straight to hell."

In a speech to a service club, Mr. Caouette said policies advocated by Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, would leave the province bankrupt within a few years.

"If Mr. Levesque ever takes over in Quebec," he said, "you can be sure that he will be asking for help from the United States—and he will be asking in English."

The federal politician said Canada's problem is not one of languages, but of money.

WAS THE FIRST

Camels were the first animals domesticated by man.

Before the Magistrate

A man who pleaded guilty Tuesday in central court to his third charge of impaired driving was sentenced to four months in jail.

Wilfred D. Philibert, 1600 Keating Cross Road, was also given an additional 10 days when he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had previous convictions in November, 1968, and September, 1967, for which he was jailed 21 days and fined $350 respectively.

Magistrate William Ostler also prohibited Philibert from driving for 18 months.

Langford Drywall Ltd., 744 Meaford, was fined the minimum of $200 after pleading guilty to an income tax infraction. Court was told the company failed to remit $1,297.35 to the Receiver General of Canada in January, 1969.

The money was deducted from employees in December 1968.

Edward G. Helgesen, 6484 Soke, was fined $250 for hit and run. He pleaded guilty.

In traffic court Keith Ashton, 446 Moss, was fined $350 for impaired driving. Thomas Bridges, 1742 Albert, was fined $300 for the same offence.

Ambrose Macouina, 2178 Rock Bay, was fined $150 for hit and run.

A man who damaged $150 worth of furniture belonging to a woman who no longer wanted his attentions was described as "emotionally crippled" Wednesday in central court.

Robert Clarke, 26, of 1621 Old Island Highway, pleaded guilty to committing mischief and was remanded to May 29 for sentence. Pre-sentence and psychiatric reports are to be prepared.

Court was told Clarke tore tapestry from the wall of the woman's house, threw a television, record player and tape recorder to the floor, pushed her violently towards the fireplace and smashed an aluminum door.

She had previously attempted to break off a two-year relationship with the accused. He suffered a badly-cut hand in the incident.

"One wonders about the responsibility of one so emotionally crippled," said Magistrate William Ostler.

He blamed the incident on "liquor and an inability to accept a reverse in an affair of the heart."

An American youth who several weeks ago told the magistrate it was only coincidence his name was the same as a well-known jockey was jailed a month for giving a false name to immigration officials.

James A. Trigg, 19, also known as Carlos M. Nieves, pleaded guilty to a breach of the immigration act.

He was jailed for 10 days earlier this month for obtaining lodgings by false pretences. Investigation of his entry to the country revealed his other name, court was told.

Magistrate Ostler noted the man lied to the court on his earlier appearance.

Trigg said today he came from Indiana. Previously identification was produced in court which said he was from California.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Trigg was in the U.S. marine corps and was a deserter.

"There must be a deterrent to people abusing the hospitality of the country and lying to immigration officials," said the magistrate.

He at first sentenced Trigg to 10 days but changed it after Macintyre said the act provided for a minimum jail term of a month.

Gerry Evans, 2829 Knotty Pine, was fined $350 for being impaired while in care and control of a vehicle. Jerry Thomas, 1105 Admirals, was jailed seven days for driving while suspended.

Balloonist To Be Tied For City Show

Up, up and away — at least to the end of his tether — will rise Canada's only licensed hot air balloonist Stanley Sheldrake in a demonstration at Hillside Shopping Centre Monday.

The 31-year-old pilot, who makes life insurance his business, will go aloft in a 150-foot diameter balloon inflated by the air from propane-burning generators at 4:30 p.m.

Sponsors of the flight are Koratron Co. of Canada and 3M Company.

The flight will be logged with Victoria airport and radio communication will be maintained with the aircraft control tower.

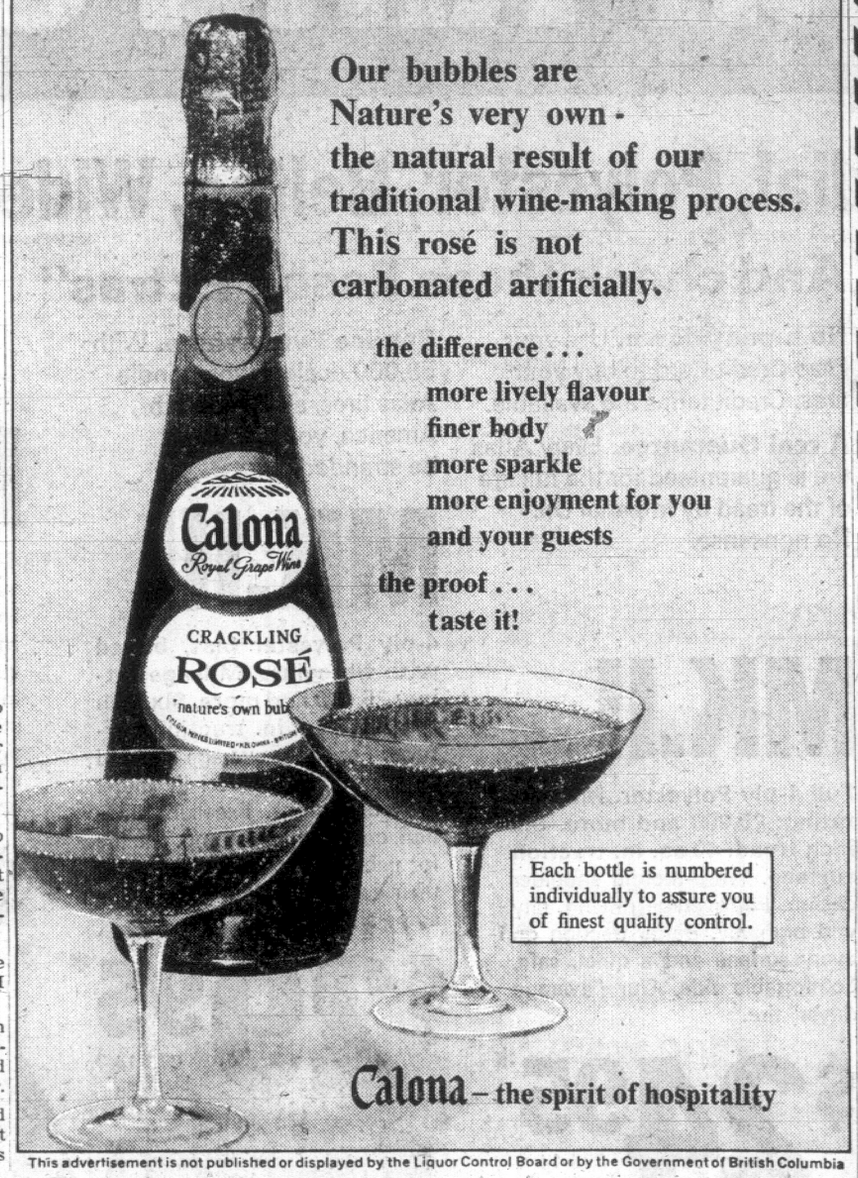

Although Sheldrake is licensed to make free flights, the craft will be tied to earth for its Victoria engagement.

'Billy Budd' Needed A Few Sound Effects

By AUDREY JOHNSON

When Brentwood College Drama Club embarks upon a production under the exacting and imaginative direction of T. Gil Bunch, one can be prepared for three things.

It will be a far more ambitious undertaking than most schools attempt.

It will be profoundly researched, interpretively and factually, so that the actors will give fully intelligent characterizations within their capacities.

It will be visually arresting and interesting.

In 1965 it was Antigone which so impressed audiences that it was brought from the school gymnasium at Mill Bay to the McPherson Playhouse for special performances.

On Wednesday night at the school the Coxe-Champan adaptation of Herman Melville's Billy Budd was given the first of three performances.

A most difficult assignment for the 30 teen-age boys in the cast and not uniformly successful, it nevertheless has many virtues, including several outstanding individual performances, striking group effects, first-rate teamwork and effective use of the limited gymnasium facilities.

Ingenius use of swags of canvas and ropes depending from the roof, spars, a multi-level state and lighting that did its best to cope with the restrictions, provided the setting aboard HMS Indomitable.

With all this I would still have liked some atmospheric sounds on tape, at least at the outset.

Creaking ropes and spars, some wind noise, perhaps even a seagull cry would have established mood.

Because we began in a dry atmosphere it took longer to become responsive to the feeling of the play. Also the first act is exceptionally long and first night tensions were probably responsible for the heavy-footed tempo and sometimes nervously garbled speech.

Second and third acts definitely improved in all aspects and the action scene in which a French frigate is engaged and the taut, tragic finale were excellently done.

The period of the play — 1798 — the philosophising it contains, the shipboard characters of the time, all conspire to make it particularly tough for the youthful actors.

Bob Tamblyn, for instance, as the Master-at-Arms, gave all he could to the role but the black, bitter creeping evil of the man is almost inevitably beyond his young grasp.

A closer to nature and therefore more easily comprehended role is that of the innocent and lovable Billy Budd and Geoff Bowes is convincing and completely acceptable in all phases of the character.

WELL CAST

Peter McFarland as Captain Vere and Christopher Butterfield as the first officer carry their roles with considerable authority and conviction.

Their timing is remarkably good and their understanding of the characters is real and consistent.

Many others deserve particular credit. David MacKenzie as the ancient Dansker; Barry Smith, the fiery Jenkins, Philip Arnoldi, a midshipman; Jeremy Etherington and Jock McKinnon as officers; John MacInnes as a stool pigeon.

The entire cast provides a wonderful sense of dedicaton and complete absorption in the play.

As a drama, the piece has too many long talky passages that defy even the best talents in the cast. The court martial scene for example, in many ways admirable, becomes tiring because a sufficient vocal and dynamic range is not possible.

There are times when it seems that the drama is overstated with too much weight given to every thought between speeches as well as to the speeches themselves.

Nevertheless this is a phenomenal undertaking remarkably well realized, effectively staged and costumed.

It will be repeated tonight and Friday.

FEAR of power wielded by Time publisher, the late Henry Luce, made Liberal government under Lester Pearson exempt Time from restrictions imposed against foreign publications, according to former finance minister Walter Gordon (above). Pearson feared Luce could influence repercussions in the Canada-U.S. auto pact then under negotiation, Gordon said.

Garden Club Adds Class For Contest

An extra class has been added this year to the Metchosin Garden Club's miniature garden competition.

Now, competitors from Sooke elementary schools can enter boxes in which plants are growing, either from seed or transplanted.

Prizes will be offered in the five classes of competition in the garden event which will take place Friday and Saturday.

First prize will be $5, second prize $3.50, and third prize $1.50.

Six members of the Victoria Horticultural Society will judge the entries, in the schools.

Prizes will be given at 3:30 p.m. at St. Mary's church hall, Metchosin Rd.

HAVE HYPERTENSION

Giraffes have the highest blood pressure of all animals.

Hippies Picket Court in Protest

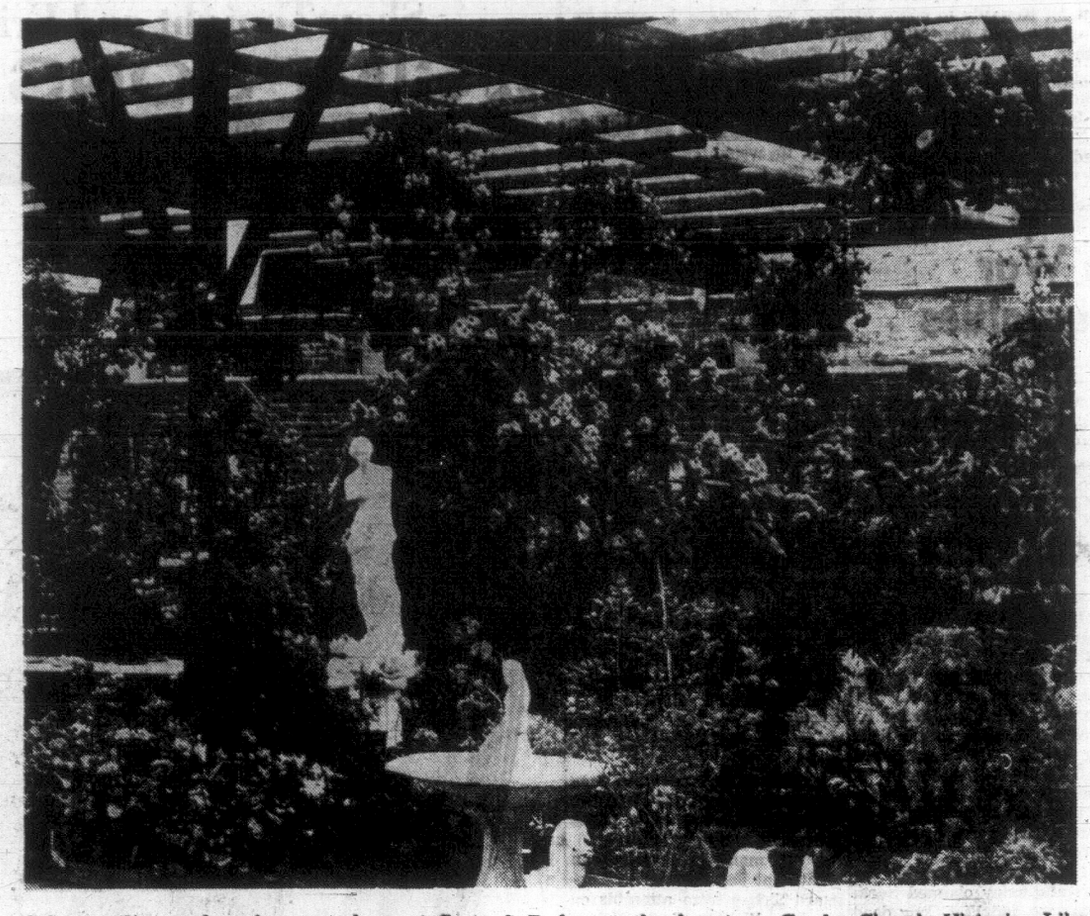

VANCOUVER (CP) — A small group of hippies picketed outside magistrate's court here Wednesday as a protest against charges laid against the Georgia Straight newspaper.

Inside the court editor-in-chief Dan McLeod and managing editor Robert Cummings were remaneded to May 29 on charges of counselling the commission of an offence—the cultivation of marijuana—in the newspaper's March 28-April 3 edition.

Pot Plants Seized

KELOWNA (CP) — RCMP confiscated a flower-box of small marijuana plants and arrested Nels Lindstrom of Rutland and his wife Jean Tuesday, charging them with cultivating the plant in their front yard. Bail was set at $10,000 for Mr. Lindstrom and $1,000 for his wife.

Bugs? Fungus?

FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

ORTHO Rose Dust knocks out bugs and fungus fast!

Don't put it off another day! This very weekend, you can battle and beat the most destructive enemies in your rose garden: insects that suck and chew and bite; fungus diseases that mar and blight and wither. You can fight back — and win!

Your weapons come in one easy-to-use plastic squeeze container. The name? ORTHO Rose Dust . . . and it packs two big punches. One: insecticides that make short work of aphids, thrips, Japanese beetles, rose weevils. Two: fungicides that really work. Powdery mildew, black spot and rust don't stand a chance. Easy to use — just aim the duster and squeeze. No work. No fuss.

ORTHO Rose Dust is effective, economical, and easy to use, just like all ORTHO products. You'll find ORTHO Rose Dust at your garden suppliers.
